Frankfort, March 10. — Senate — There will be 25 more school book legislation at this session. At least the senate said as much by a decided vote Wednesday, when it refused to take up Senator Campbell's bill, which proposed to amend the Cantrill bill, which is now a law, by doing away with the right of the county boards to vote on book adoption and placing the whole matter in the hands of a state board composed of the attorney general, secretary of state, superintendent of public instruction and the presidents of Kentucky university and A. and M. college. The committee on education reported favorably the house bill aimed at Berea college and the coeducation of the white and black races. Senator Spence called up the bill providing for a policeman and fireman pension law for second-class cities, and it passed without objection.

House — Bills passed: Providing that when a railroad company organized under the laws of this state wishes to retire its preferred stock, it shall do so by buying up the stock at the market price instead of at par, as the present law provides; appropriating $40,000 for completing the cellhouse at Eddyville, and appropriating $26,000 for improvements at the Frankfort prison. Senate bill 192, providing that state asylum funds may be deposited in national banks as well as state banks, was reported adversely by the committee on Kentucky statutes and was killed. House bill No. 505, by Mr. Newcomb, was passed. It provides for the examination of county school superintendents in January and February instead of July and August, in order that they may be examined before their nomination.

Frankfort, March 11.—Senate—The house bill providing that missing copies of Kentucky reports in the circuit, county and federal clerks' offices be furnished and paid for by the state received 18 votes to 16 against it, and was declared passed. It was asserted that this bill will cost the state $30,000 if not vetoed by the governor. The house bill appropriating $22,000 for improvements at the deaf and dumb institute at Danville passed. House bill No. 246, to prohibit the killing of rabbits and squirrels with the gun from September 15 to November 15 each year, intended to protect quail from hunters who go out to kill rabbits and instead kill birds before the open season begins, passed, 18 to 13. Rabbits and squirrels may be snared of caught with dogs during that period, however. The bill to fix a special penalty for selling or buying registration certificates was postponed till Monday, which kills it.

House—Bills passed: Taking the control of the printing for the appellate court reports from the state printing board and placing it in the hands of the judges of the court of appeals, with power to make contracts and revoke any contracts where its provisions have been violated; making adultery the only ground for divorce; that the state shall replace copies of the Kentucky Reports and certain other books belonging to any county, when said books are destroyed by fire; removing the license tax from mineral water. Bill No. 193, which proposed to raise the salaries of the state prison guards from $65 to $75 a month, was called up. Mr. Oliver offered an amendment, raising the salary of the deputy wardens from $1,200 to $1,500 a year. This was defeated.

Frankfort, March 12.—Senate—Unless the courts can save it the existence of Berea college of Madison county is doomed as a mixed school where whites and blacks can eat, study and recite together. The senate Friday passed the house bill prohibiting under penalty of a heavy fine, the maintenance of any school in this where the coeducation of the races is permitted or carried on. Berea college is the only school of its kind south of Mason and Dixon's line, and has been in existence since the civil war. Bills passed: Requiring fourth-class cities to pay the interest on their bonds or prevent salaries from being paid to city officials; authorizing Jefferson county to levy a tax to build an armory; increasing the penalty for failure of road overseers to perform their duties.

House—The session of the house began Friday morning with the surprising announcement from Clerk Stone that house bill No. 193, raising the pay of the state prison guards from $60 to $75 a month had passed the house Monday without being read on three separate days, as the constitution requires. Stone discovered the mistake. The friends of the bill were much disturbed, as it had received barely enough votes to pass, requiring 51, because it carries an appropriation. Mr. Drewry was appointed a committee to withdraw the bill from the senate, to which body it had been reported. When it was returned Mr. Klair moved to take it under immediate consideration. Mr. Niles moved to table the Klair motion, but the motion to table was lost. After voting down a few amendments the house passed the bill. Mr. Burchett reported resolutions upon the death of Marcus A. Hanna, which were adopted.

Hartford, Ky., March 11.—The spring term of the Ohio circuit is now in session here, with Judge T. H. Birkhead on the bench. The first case on trial is that of J. W. Bostner, charged with receiving embezzled money.

The case grew out of the sensational express robbery in Fordsville, this county, two years ago. Boatner claimed to have sent $28,000 from Owensboro to Fordsville by express. A. B. It is charged in the indictment that he gave the money to Boatner. There are about 40 witnesses to be examined. The case is an important one, as it will set a precedent as to the safety of sending money by express.

LAWRENCEBURG LUMBER COMPANY,

It seems that the General Assembly harbored but one candidate for Congress this winter—Campbell Cantrill.

The proceedings at Frankfort the past few weeks, demonstrate how ready politicians are to use legislators to advance their interests.

The United States Supreme Court has rendered a decision sustaining the Minnesota Court in what is known as the merger suit. Four of the judges dissented. This is a knock-out for the trusts.

Ground-hog winter and the session of the Legislature expired by limitation at 12 o'clock last night. The ground-hog may continue in business a few days, but the lawmakers had to pack their little grips and homeward go.

The race war at Springfield, Ohio, was brought to a close by the militia. Ohio has about as many mob spots on her face as any State in the union, and it is evident that the people in Ohio resort to lynch law as readily as do the people in any of the southern States under like conditions.

Senator Foraker, of Ohio, has on his war-paint and is going after the Dick-Herrick-Cox combination. If the Senator is not careful he will be put out of commission early in the action. In the scrap in which the Senator is engaged it is three pluck one, but the one has the rep. of being hard to pluck.

The General Assembly which adjourned last midnight found use for $1,500,000 of the people's money. Of that amount $1,000,000 will be used to supply a new capitol building that is in keeping with the greatness of the State, while a liberal amount of the remaing $500,000 goes to the benevolent institutions.

The Recorder does not champion the cause of either of the several candidates; but it cannot refrain from "putting a bug in Bro. Smith's ear." It is this: He will find that if Boone's delegation is not for Rhinock from the jump that the whole or enough thereof will be for him when the time comes to land him a winner. The Recorder is not on the inside, but cannot help forming some conclusions from observations, though they may be erroneous.

Gov. Beckham is the thirty-fourth Chief Executive of Kentucky and the fifteenth to be honored in naming the counties and thereby given a monument in the Commonwealth.

The county of Beckham is to be formed from parts of the counties of Carter, Elliott and Lewis lying along the northeastern borders of the State. It has a territory of 408 square miles, and a population of about 13,000 people. The largest portion of its territory is to be taken from the county of Carter which under the census of 1900 had a population of 20,228. The new county draws about 1,200 people from the county of Lewis, and about 600 from the county of Elliott. Politically the new county is Republican, but its formation makes the county of Carter, always heretofore Republican, safely Democratic. Its county seat is Olive Hill, which has a population of about 900 people, and which, before its formation, was within the limits of Carter county, though not the county seat. The reason for the formation of the new county are set forth in the law creating it in these words: "Inasmuch as the people living in the territory comprised by Beckham county live very remote from the county seats of their former counties and are compelled to travel long, tedious and expensive journeys thereto, and as the expense of litigation and other public duties and privileges is very heavy, an emergency does exist, and therefore this act shall take effect and be in force from and after its approval by the Governor."

It begins to look like the Republicans of this Congressional district are going to have their troubles selecting a candidate for Congress. The candidate the machine wants deos not suit the anti-machine clement, which is booming Senator Flemming, of Ludlow. The Senator has a good record as a swiper of Democratic votes in his county, and his admirers want him to try his hand in the other counties in the district.

The Cleveland presidential boom is assuming considerable shape in the East, and so far developments show him a much stronger man with the party than either Mr. Hearst or Mr. Gorman. In fact he is about the only one of the three who has developed any following in conventions recently held.

The Owen county grand jury struck pay dirt last week, when it investigated the financial condition of the county, and as a result returned nineteen indictments against county officials and ex-county officials who are charged with drawing from $593 to $8,104 from the county to which they were not entitled, the total amount being $22,903, and the jury as much as said this is only the beginning of a work to which future grand juries should turn their attention.

Judge Threlkild, who was charged with receiving $200 in excess of the amount to which he was entitled, appeared before the grand jury and paid over to the foreman the $200, saying he received it through ignorance.

The jury censured strongly the failure on the part of the proper authorities to publish annually, as the law requires, an itemized statement showing to whom and for what the county's money is paid.

Commonwealth's attorney F. C. Green certainly made a big hit at home upon his first official appearance there.

When Senators McCreary and Blackburn, and Congressman Smith and others, who enjoy the perfect confidence of the Democratic party in Kentucky are in accord upon the proposition that the party needs reorganizing from the ground up in the State, the rank and file begin to do some thinking, and if allowed, will see that the suggestions of these eminent gentlemen are carried out. It has been the complaint for a long time that there is too much machine politics in this State, on the part of each of the political parties, and when McCreary, Blackburn, and other such men proclaim war on such methods, something is very apt to drop. With Senator McCreary at the helm, the Democrats throughout the State would have confidence in their leader, and the party would become united as it has not been in many years, and until such a leader is installed the party will be annoyed with factional fights and remain on the ragged edge. With men managing party affairs, who play no favorites but see that all candidates receive fair and impartial treatment at their hands, the Democratic vote will have a wonderful increase in this State.

An hour of do is now worth a whole day next week.

The following is an extract of a speech made by Dr. Jordon Owen in the Opera House in Maysville beforeMaysville Tobacco Fair: "Tobacco was discovered by Columbus in 1492 when he discovered America. Columbus sent two of his sailors into Cuba exploring that country and they reported to him a weed that was being smoked universally by the natives of Cuba. They dried the weed and put it in a hollow cane and smoked the same puffing the smoke out of their mouths and through their nose. This cane was called tobacco, from which tobacco derived its name. Perhaps no product or plant in the country made as rapid progress in its growth and cultivation. It has now been grown nearly all over the world, but, Kentucky, Virginia, Pennsylvania, Connecticut and some of the Southern States grow the principal part of the tobacco, Kentucky being the largest producer of all these States together. The government monopolies, that is, the governments who purchase tobacco for their subjects are France, Spain, Italy, Australia and Hungary. These governments do not allow their people to produce tobacco even for their own benefit. If anyone is found upon the streets or country smoking and it is not a cigar of their own country, sold by their own government to them they are arrested and put in prison even if the tax has been paid. In the year 1850 Louisville sold 7500 hogsheads of tobacco for the year. The number sold since has varied according to the crop conditions. Louisville has sold since 1850 and up to this time the grand total of three million nine hundred and ninety-one thousand and five hundred and six hogsheads. The Louisville Warehouse Company which was organized in 1896 has sold up to this time 467,422 hogsheads during its seven years of business, amounting to the enormous sum of $40,000,000. The Louisville Warehouse company pays out to its shippers and growers of tobacco about $250,000 per week, during the busy season. While I do not propose to go into politics I want to say to you that the tariff paid on tobacco in foreign countries is very large, for instance the tip tobacco bought by McDonald & Company for Canada cost on an average of $7 on our breaks. The producer of the same receives about $6 on an average. When this tobacco is landed in the manufacture in Canada it costs that manufacturer $41 a hundred. In many of the European countries the Burley tobacco when landed in their manufactories costs from $80 to $85 per hundred.

The 1904 regular session of the Kentucky legislature is a thing of the past. The legislature did many things for which it is entitled to credit, and a few about which the least said the sooner mended. Considering the record as a whole it is the best made by any legislature for many years.

The town of Florence is repairing the old town hall, and when the work is completed it will be a very creditable city building. The building had been badly neglected for many years, and there was a probability of the city forfeiting its title to the property, hence the repairs and improvements now in progress.

The Lawrenceburg Lumber Co., have abundant evidence that it pays to advertise in the RECORDER, hence they have planted an ad. this week that will be read of all men in Boone county. This company, by regular advertising and proper treatment of patrons, has built up a splendid trade, considerable of which goes from this county.

Zeigles, buyer for Continental Tobacco Co. purchased from Parrish Brothers, (Jas. W., Ben F. and Ike) of Midway, 460,000 lbs. of tobacco—representing their crop grown in 1903—for a total of over $40,000. About 200,000 lbs. were sold at 11½c; 20,000 lbs. at 10c; 90,000 lbs. at 9c; 70,000 lbs. at 8c. and 80,000 lbs. at 5c. to 7½c.—Lexington Gazette.

Last April a man named Albert Powers, given up to die with consumption by physicians at Dayton, O., decided as a last resort to try living in the open air. He accordingly pitched a tent on the bank of the Miami about two miles from town, and spent his time fishing and hunting, sleeping at night with the air circulating freely through his tent. In the fall Powers moved his tent to the bar near the mouth of Tanner's creek, and there he has lived in comparative comfort, despite wintry blasts and zero weather, and has steadily gained in weight until now he is 50 pounds heavier than when the Dayton doctors gave him up as hopeless. So much for the tonic effect of fresh air.—Lawrenceburg Press.

Allphin & Hume's initial sale of horses at Walton, last Saturday, was all they could have expected in the way of a success. They had 65 head entered for sale, 35 of which were sold at prices ranging from $50 to $150. One animal belonging to Joseph Cleek, was rejected at $192 50. The crowd was large, good humored and orderly, and the bidding was spirited. Anthony Bentler, of Burlington, was the orator, and was in fine condition for the work, making for himself an additional record as a splendid auctioneer. Another sale will be held at the same place in the near future, but, in the mean time those desiring to buy horses will be accommodated at any time by Messrs. Allphin & Hume, who will have them on hand at all times. Mr. Allphin is satisfied that the popularity of these sales will increase, and that there will be no trouble experienced in keeping them up. They will be of great benefit to the town of Walton, the citizens of which should encourage them.

Colds Are Dangerous.

How often you hear it remarked: "It's only a cold," and a few days later learn that the man is on his back with pneumonia. This is of such common occurrence that a cold, however slight, should not be disregarded. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy counteracts any tendency toward pneumonia. It always cures and is pleasant to take. For sale bya ll druggists.

MORE ABOUT WASHINGTON

To the Editor of the Recorder:

As some of my Kentucky friends have written to me requesting me to give them more information about the West, I will try to oblige them.

I have only been here a little over five months, so I have not seen the State in all its phases, although one learns very much more in that time then they would in Kentucky as you meet all kinds of people, and people from nearly all over the world; and can learn something from each of them.

I have pupils in my school who have come across the continent from Maine, also lived in Minnesota for several years before coming here. Where I am teaching most of the people are Danes, so through them I learn of Denmark, its people and customs. None of my pupils are of Indian descent, and all can speak the English language, something not all the teachers here can say. They are all intelligent pupils, obedient and eager for knowledge.

The schools here give more attention to literature and not as much attention to mathematics and spelling as we do in Kentucky.

I am teaching about 30 miles west of Mt. Rainier, or Mt. Tacoma as it is sometimes called, which is 14,562 feet high, and which we can plainly see from our school house door. It is rather swampy here where I am and there are a number of lakes, one being three miles long.

The climate on this side of the mountains is very wet during winter; it is mild in winter and cool in summer; the chinook wind from the Pacific ocean moderating the cold winds from the north. As the nights are usually cool during summer we can not say it is a very favorable climate for farming.

We have had no cold weather this winter, as it has never frozen ice thick enough to skate on. The mean annual temperature for Western Washington is a little more than 50 degrees, and average rainfall is 65.65 inches, while east of the mountains the mean annual temperature is 48.25 degrees and annual rainfall is 14.66 inches.

We have had several snows, the deepest being five inches, but it never lays on the ground longer than a day or two before a rain takes it off.

The climate being so very wet causes moss to grow on trees, logs, stones, roofs and even on the ground in some places. There is one kind of moss that grows on the branches of trees, hanging down more than a foot in length.

Lumbering, hopr-aising and fishing are leading occupations on the coast.

The best farmers are in the eastern part of the State where they irrigate. They raise some of the finest crops in U. S. there. Some of the finest fruits in this country are raised in Washington. The principal fruits on the coast are apples plums and berries.

The great wheat belt is in Eastern Washington. The great timber belt is in the Western part of the State.

There are over six hundred different plants in operation for the manufacture of lumber. These mills manufacture shingles, lumber for ship building, houses, furniture, etc. Lumber alone brings an annual income of over twelve million dollars.

The red fir is not infrequently 250 feet high, the pine 160 feet, the silver fir 150 feet, the black spruce 150 feet, white cedar 100 feet, and white oak 70 feet. Cedars have been found twenty-one feet in diameter and 120 feet high. Trees from six to eight feet in diameter are frequently seen in the forests.

There is still fine game in the forests, such as deer, congar, otter, bear occasionally, etc.

The lakes and streams abound in fish such as salmon and trout. There are also wild ducks, geese, grouse, and pheasant in abundance.

Seattle is the largest city in the State, having a population of about 100,000. It is situated 18 miles north of Tacoma, on Puget Sound. Over 1000 vessels enter and clear the port yearly, carrying away coal and lumber. Victoria, Sitka and other Pacific ports.

Tacoma, the second city of importance, is built on a bluff 200 feet high, overlooking Puget Sound, and the cascade range with the snowy peaks of Mt. Tacoma. Lumber and other products are loaded at the wharves of the city for China, Japan and Australia. It's population is about 38,000. On its principal streets one meets almost all nationalities of people, Japanese, Swedes, Norwegians, Danes, Scotch, German, French, English, Indians, and negroes. When the Indian ladies become tired or have occasion to stop on the street, it is not an uncommon sight to see them sit down on the edge of the sidewalk and rest awhile. They are most all educated, have schools of their own, wear citizen's clothes, but are apt to pick for the bright colors.

The Western people are all wide awake, energetic people, each scrambling for the "mighty dollar," and they keep it in circulation too. My advice to my Kentucky friends is to come out and see this country even if they do not want to live here. Some dislike this climate because it rains so much. I will close for fear this letter will be too long.

The "All Things" of the Christian

UNLIMITED RESOURCES OF GOD PLACED AT DISPOSAL OF HIS CHILDREN.

Sermon by the "Highway and Byway" Preacher.

(Copyright, 1904, by J. M. Edson.)

Chicago, Sunday, March 13, 1904.

Text:—"All things are yours...and ye are Christ's; and Christ is God's."—I. Cor. 3:21, 1. c., and 23.

THE salvation of the sinner is a marvelous and mighty work of God through Christ Jesus, but the conditions and the privileges of the redeemed sinner in Christ Jesus are even more marvelous. The "unsearchable riches of Christ" belong to His followers, and are freely and fully placed at their disposal. Paul says: "All things are yours." And then he goes on to enumerate what those "all things" include. Paul was theirs to teach them the full liberty in Christ Jesus, Apollos was theirs to stir and animate them with his eloquence. Peter was theirs to nerve and fire them with his courage. In fact every author was theirs to impart to them some treasure of the Divine Kingdom. The world was theirs to win and possess for Christ. This life was theirs in all of its fullness to live for Christ. Things present and things to come were all to be counted theirs because this present state and the glory of the next were all planned of God for the good of His saints, and the salvation of the world. And even death itself, which seems to come like a tyrant—death is theirs in Christ, their minister to lead to a higher life. Great possessions, surely. Carnegie, Rockefeller, the Vanderbilts, the Rothschilds, and others of the world's rich can count their possessions in the hundreds of millions of shining yellow gold dollars, and the burdens of the rich in caring for and keeping and handling these vast riches are heavy upon them, but the possessions of the Christian are infinitely greater, for "all things" are his. If it is true, as it certainly is, let us prayerfully and earnestly seek to learn in what way it is true, and what it should mean to the Christian because it is true.

FIRST of all we want to remind you that the Christian cannot boast that it is by his own thrift and energy and astuteness that he becomes possessed of "all things." Carnegie can point you back to a time in his career when he did not have a dollar which he could call his own, and then he can lead you step by step from spool boy in the factory through the successive stages of engineer in the factory, messenger boy, telegraph operator, railroad man, stockholder in the first sleeping car company, iron master and then retired capitalist with a gigantic steel corporation as a monument to his great energies and abilities. He can remind you of all this, and proudly say: "See the vast properties, and wealth which I have by my own energies, and thrift, and keen financial and business foresight, acquired." But the Christian cannot make any such claim as he points to the declaration of Scripture that "all things" are his. His great possessions are inherited. He has a rich Father, who bequeaths through the only begotten Son to His adopted sons His possessions. A rich Heavenly Father. Yea, rich, for all things belong to Him. The psalmist sings:

"The earth is the Lord's, and the fullness thereof;
The world, they that dwell therein."

And Paul quotes that passage in this very letter to the Corinthians from which our text is taken. A rich Heavenly Father, who has created all things, and who, despite the seeming contradiction of the claim in the world to-day, possesses all things. And because the Heavenly Father possesses all things, His true children have a right to claim heirship, and share in those riches. The daughter of Andrew Carnegie, although she cannot claim that a single dollar of her father's vast wealth was acquired by any effort or help of her own, has a right to claim a share in those riches, because she is his daughter. She has a right to an inheritance as his child and the courts of the world would sustain her claim. And it is so with the Christian. "All things" are his because they belong to the Father.

ANOTHER thing to remember in connection with this inheritance is that God does not carelessly turn over to His children the free and unrestrained possession of "all things." He gives to His children of things temporal and things spiritual, as fully and freely as is for their good, and as will supply their need. But He never divides the patrimony and lets the wilful, and pleasure-seeking son go off into the far country to spend it in riotous living. The son of many a rich father is cursed instead of blessed by the wealth which is placed in his hands. But the "all things" of God are not thus given to the Christian to be misused and abused. The Father maintains the active administration of His possessions, but never a demand is made on Him in faith and the Holy Ghost by His children, but that it is honored. God is the administrator of both the temporal and spiritual things, and commits them to the use of His children only as in His wisdom He sees that it is safe so to do. And hereby the Christian is saved the very great burden which otherwise he would have to carry. God guards His treasures, and they are safe. He gives as they are wisely and faithfully used and the Christian is honored and blessed in the use thereof.

THE "all things" to which our text refers are not only temporal things, but are spiritual as well, in fact as eternity outweighs time so do the riches of the spiritual realm outweigh those of the temporal realm. But the "all things" means the things of this life and the things of the life to come. It means the earthy riches as well as the riches of Heaven. George Meuller realized that the "all things" which were his meant not only Christlike love which could go out and yearn over the homeless orphans; it meant not only the deep spiritual life, and the devotion to the cause of his Lord, but it meant also the gold, the houses and the land, the furnishings and the food which would shelter and feed and clothe and educate the helpless little ones which come under his care. The "all things" meant all that was necessary of this world's goods and of abilities and spiritual attainments to carry on the work of his orphanages. He had faith to believe it and God committed to his care in large measure things temporal and things spiritual. Mr. Moody in the glorious religious campaigns which he conducted, in the schools which he established, in the Y. M. C. A.'s and churches which he was instrumental in founding, realized that the "all things" included the financial means as well as the spiritual power. Mr. Moody had the ability when in commercial life to make money. At the time he went into religious work in Chicago it was at the sacrifice of a very remunerative position, and Mr. Moody was too good a business man and had too level a head to rush into the work blindly and not know that the Lord who had called him into the work, and who was giving him so fully and freely the spiritual gifts, was as able and willing to supply the temporal needs. He knew where money was needed in the Lord's work the Lord would provide the money, and He did, sometimes in most astonishing ways. Mr. Moody never faltered, he was never embarrassed long or seriously financially. He went straight ahead boldly carrying on the work of the Lord and knowing that the "all things" which were his would be supplied as he had need. Yes, the "all things" means the temporal things, the silver and the gold, and it means that which is greater—the unsearchable riches of Christ.

BUT there are two matters important for us to consider at this point. First, proving our title—our right—to the "all things," and second, taking possession of our inheritance. It is true that "all things" belong to the Christian. It is true that the "all things" include all in this life and all in the life to come. But the title to the "all things" must be proved and steps must be taken to become possessed of them. The claimant to an estate must prove his title, must show that he is the rightful heir. If he can establish the fact that he is a son his share in the fortune is recognized by the courts and he receives his portion. If the Christian can prove his sonship to God the Father, then does he become an heir, an heir to all that the Father has to give. Now there are two kinds of sons. Sons by right of birth, and sons by right of adoption. The members of the human race are not sons of God by right of birth. They are the sons of Adam by operation of the natural laws of progeniture. As such they have no valid claim upon the things of God. But the only begotten Son of God, Christ Jesus, is rightful heir to all things. He is the Son of God by miraculous birth. He is God incarnate in the flesh. John writes His whole Gospel to prove that "Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God." All the Scriptures depend upon the truth of this one assertion. If it fails then all else fails. Jesus is the Son of God, and hence the rightful heir to all that God has in Heaven and on earth.

BUT if man is not a son of God by birth he may become such by adoption. God's Word is plain and clear on this point. "As many as received Him (Jesus) to them gave He the power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on His name." "As many as are led by the Spirit of God, these are the sons of God." And to be led by the Spirit of God means to believe on the One about whom the Spirit has been sent into the world to testify. And John in his epistle bursts forth in an ecstasy of spiritual joy. "Behold what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us that we should be called the sons of God. Beloved now are we the sons of God!"

Paul in Ephesians speaks of God as having planned our "adoption as sons through Jesus Christ," and in the fourth chapter of Galatians he makes the point very plain. He declares: "When the fullness of the time came, God sent forth His Son, born of a woman, born under the law, that He might redeem them that were under the law, that we might receive the adoption of sons." And this work of redemption which God has accomplished through His Son has made those who believe upon the Son sons of God by adoption, "and because ye are sons, God sent forth the Spirit of His Son into our hearts, crying Abba Father. So that thou art no longer a bondservant, but a son; and if a son, then an heir through God." "Heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ." So much for the validity of the claim of the Christian to a share in the "all things" which are found in God.

THE heir having proved his right to the estate, the next step is to become actually possessed of it. It is easy for the Christian to claim that "all things" are his, but it is quite another thing to have it so in very truth. Certain conditions must be met by the Christian before he can claim that all things belong to him. One is surrender and the other faith. He must be true to Christ, and he must have faith if he would discover the secret spring which opens the door to the rich, inexhaustible storehouse of God. Following the words in our text which declare that "all things are yours," we have the very important and significant statement that "ye are Christ's." This is one of the conditions of possessing "all things." "When the law of the cross is the law of our being," says F. W. Robertson, "when we have learned to surrender ourselves, then, and then only, they are ours—not we theirs. The Christian is 'creation's heir.' He may say, triumphantly: 'The world, the world is mine!'" Surrender means that the will of God is our will, that His purposes are our purposes, that His ways are our ways. And with such a relationship existing how could it be otherwise than that "all things" of the Father belong to the son? God in His infinite wisdom has chosen to deal with the world through human instrumentalities. As sons of God, as His heirs, as His representatives in the world, "all things" are ours to do His will in the world, to carry out His purposes, to perform his work. When a great nation sends its ambassador upon an important mission to another country his power is only limited by the power of the nation whose representative he is; his resources are as great as the nation is able to command. The ambassador has back of him to carry out the object of his mission all the dignity and wealth and might of the nation. And is it not so with the ambassadors of Christ in the world? We who are sons of God and called to do His will in the world, to carry out His purposes, to execute His plans, have behind us the unlimited power and resources and wisdom of the infinite God. Think of it!

BECAUSE "all things" belong to the Christian, there comes to him great, very great, responsibility. Great possessions always involve great responsibility. The rich have a weight of responsibility which will either crush them down to hell or serve as a stepping stone to Heaven. Solomon, the wise, exclaims: "Give me neither poverty nor riches." He knew what a burden great riches were. In him was exemplified the peril of riches. In proportion as we have, so is our responsibility towards those who have not, whether that which we have is worldly possessions, intellectual or other attainments or talents, or spiritual graces. The possession of them obligates us towards those who have not. And if this is true in reference to merely earthly possessions, how infinitely more so is it true in regard to the things of God. Where the inexhaustible treasures of God's love and mercy are taken into the account what a tremendous responsibility rests upon the sons of God who possess these things! Livingston, knowing that all things were his from God, felt the responsibility of the great continent of Africa upon him, and he gave all that he had, even to his life, even as his Lord and Master had done for him, and to-day Africa still feels the throb of that great heart. Cary, filled with the consciousness of the world-wide love and mercy of God, felt the burden of responsibility and must needs go and tell, and see how God poured through him upon heathen India the glorious light and blessing of the Gospel. Because the power and resources, the love and mercy of God are our possessions, and are inexhaustible, so is our responsibility tremendous.

AND our privileges are great, and our opportunities manifold. The possession of all things in Christ Jesus gives to us the rare privilege of ministering unto others, and opens up many opportunities which would not be ours if our resources in Christ were not inexhaustible. Peter struck the key note for every Christian life when he said to the cripple at the Beautiful gate of the temple: "Such as I have give I unto thee." The "all things" which he possessed gave him the privilege and opportunity of ministering to a needy soul and body. "Such as I have, such as I have," but oh, think of what the Christian has! "Such as I have" may be the inexhaustible riches of Christ Jesus. Even the cup of cold water does not escape the eye of the Master. He sees it all, and as we begin to give we begin to receive more and more. This is one of the secrets of possession. God says "all things are yours," but we do not feel the possession till we begin to use for Him. It is like the great elevator stored with grain. Nothing but the bare, blank walls appear. We cannot see or feel the grain which is inside. But along comes the empty car of opportunity, and it is our privilege to raise the door in the chute, and then the yellow stream of grain pours forth. The great storehouse of God's "all things" stands there filled full with everything needful in carrying on the Lord's work—the unsearchable riches of Christ, the needful treasures of earth. As we wait and wonder if it can be really so, there comes an opportunity of service. With faith in God's supply house we lift the chute of our endeavor and out pours the blessing. Dear Christian, "All things are yours," if you are only Christ's in surrender.

SEEN IN STORE WINDOWS.

Golden brown, in combination with deep cream lace or a touch of gold trimming, continues the favorite color for receptions and afternoon wear generally.

A beautiful metal belt shown in one of the shops is made of a row of antique-looking coins, held together by heavy silver chains. Several of the heavier and larger coins fall below the belt in front in sort of chatelain effect.

The differences between Russia and Japan have stimulated interest in these countries, and the shops are having special exhibits of goods peculiar to these places. One shop is showing a splendid line of Japanese art goods of all descriptions. They include not only beautiful embroidered goods, potteries and chinas, but also materials both silks and cotton that are made in that country.

GLEANED HERE AND THERE.

Important physiological experiments have been made in Russia to test the endurance of school children.

A temperature of 60 degrees to 80 degrees F. is not dangerous to human being who are adequately clothed, if the air is still, while 30 to 40 degrees higher, if accompanied by a gale of wind, would kill every living thing before it. Very low temperatures almost invariably coincide with perfect atmospheric quiet.

Aluminum becomes granular and brittle when heated to about 600 degrees C.; at a slighuly increased temperature it becomes so soft that it can easily be cut with a knife. Hence all that is needed in order to pulverize it is to heat it to the above-mentioned temperature and then pound it in a mortar. With zinc, a similar treatment will give the same result.

That a bird has memory is not doubted. It is a marvelous feat of memory to go to the tropics for the winter and return in the spring to the very spot—to the exact tree. It is also a fact that birds have the power to recall as well as to remember. Memory depends on the association of ideas, and it is evident by the conduct of caged birds that they have the power to remember and forget the same as we do.

ART OF CONVERSATION.

Dwell upon bright subjects, clever jokes and pleasant experiences.

Avoid gloomy matter topics. Speak of of those things that bring mirth, cheer, smiles.

Do not ventilate any personal vexation or trouble. The dwelling on it, as you must to relate it, only emphasizes it. It turns the question into one of self-hypnotism. If you cannot speak about your illness or misfortune you will be forced to speak of something else. This gives you one less chance to think about the misfortunes, and gradually time will ease the physical or mental pain.

Avoid the statements that must have been made before your birth by every one who had discussed the same topic. For example, do not, when you meet an actor, ask him if he does not get tired of saying the same things every night. Each woman he has not has asked him that question since he has been on the stage. If a person has a name that lends itself to puns the chances are every possible pun has been already thrust upon the unfortunate possessor.

This Is Miraculous.

Manhattan, Kans., March 14.—One of the strangest cases that has ever been heard of in Riley Co. is that of the three-year-old daughter of Mr. Jonas Brubaker of this place.

Some time ago the little girl took whooping cough, which was followed by pneumonia. When the pneumonia left her, she was taken down with malaria fever with at times symptoms of Spinal Meningitis.

The family doctor brought her safely through these troubles, but after the fever Bright's Disease set in and the doctors gave her up. Her father tells the rest of the story:

"We began to give her Dodd's Kidney Pills and after she had taken about three and a half boxes, she was entirely cured. Now she is well as any child, running and playing as if nothing had ever been the matter with her. The doctors said she was beyond the reach of medicine. Dodd's Kidney Pills certainly saved our little girl's life, when she was so far into the chronic stage of Bright's Disease that we thought nothing could save her."

Fastidious.

"The front porch is dreadfully dirty, Marm."

"Yes, I know. But the new girl says she won't wash it off until her trunk comes."

"And what has her trunk to do with it?"

"She says she always wears her best stockings when she washes porches."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

"To YOUNG WOMEN:—I suffered for six years with dysmenorrhea (painful periods), so much so that I dreaded every month, as I knew it meant three or four days of intense pain. The doctor said this was due to an inflamed condition of the uterine appendages caused by repeated and neglected colds.

"If young girls only realized how dangerous it is to take cold at this critical time, much suffering would be spared them. Thank God for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, that was the only medicine which helped me any. Within three weeks after I started to take it, I noticed a marked improvement in my general health, and at the time of my next monthly period the pain had diminished considerably. I kept up the treatment, and was cured a month later. I am like another person since. I am in perfect health, my eyes are brighter, I have gained 13 pounds to my weight, my color is good, and I feel light and happy."—Miss AGNES MILLER, 25 Ottomo Ave., Chicago, Ill.—$5000 forfeit if original of above letter proving genuineness cannot be produced.

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

OPINION OF THE EDITOR OF "NEBRASKA FARMER".

He Expresses His Approval of American Immigration to Canada.

During the Winter months the head of the family consults with the other members as to the prospects for the future, and doubtless one of the most interesting topics discussed is that of moving to some district where it is possible to more easily secure what is necessary for a comfortable existence; where it is an easy matter to become possessed of sufficient farm land to assure a competence for the future. This, not only interests the head of the family but every individual member of it.

Having before me the knowledge where he can secure a home with the expenditure of but little money, it is well for him to obtain all information possible regarding the productiveness of the land in the country that he may select. For several years past a large number of Americans have removed to Western Canada and as nearly as it can be ascertained almost all of these have expressed themselves satisfied with the conditions that exist there. During the past Summer a number of the Editors of Farm papers throughout the United States made a personal visit on a tour of inspection and the reports of these gentlemen prove interesting reading. Mr. H. E. Heath, Editor of the "Nebraska Farmer," a paper enjoying a wide circulation as well as the confidence of its subscribers, after giving some idea of the extent of this wonderful country says:

"Western Canada is the last unoccupied and unimproved good agricultural land in America available today."

He then discusses its possibilities for raising live stock and the advantages it possesses for dairying, farming and wheat growing, and says: "What has been said about the country as to the ability of the soil, the yield of wonderful crops of wheat, is quite justified."

To quote further from Mr. Heath, he says, referring to climate:

"Theso people (skeptical ones) do not know or realize that altitude more than latitude makes climates; that large bodies of water, both fresh and salt, that never freeze over, exert a wonderful influence on climate. Another influence on climate, more potent than those named above, which applies more to the Alberta district, is the warm Chinook breeze from the Pacific Ocean, which is 600 or 700 miles nearer than Colorado or Wyoming, besides the Rocky Mountain range is not nearly so high nor half so far from the ocean as it is down in the States.

"In further considering the climate of the Canadian prairies, we should not lose sight of the fact of the influence of the rains; the total average rainfall for the season is but 13.35 inches for the territories, and 17.34 inches in Manitoba, and that the amounts falling between April 1st and October 1st are respectively 9.29 inches and 12.87 inches, or about three-fourths of the entire rainfall. From the middle of June to the middle of July there are over two hours more daylight in every twenty-four hours than there is in Nebraska. The main reason why Western Canada wheat grows to such perfection is the effect of solar light, for longer period of sunshine it gets each day. This is what makes heads or grain more perfect, grown in this country than elsewhere. This extraordinary rapid growth of vegetation under the influence of this long continued sunshine exceeds anything known in lower latitudes. • • •

"We do not wish it understood that wheat alone is the main product of this country; it leads in that, yet it is destined to become famous for its cattle, horses and sheep and for its dairy products. We saw more and larger bands of cattle and sheep grazing in Assiniboia and Alberta than we ever saw on the western plains of the United States. One band of cattle numbering 5,000 head were grazing on the rich grass and sheep without number."

The Government of the Dominion of Canada is still using the same energetic efforts which have been used for the past 5 or 6 years to settle up these western prairies, and as applies not to any Agent of the Canadian Government the settler will be able to secure a certificate entitling him to a low rate which will give him the opportunity of visiting any portion of Canada's grain producing domain.

PROPOSED TO A SENATOR.

Lonely Widow Makes Plea for Position of Sacred Trust in Frank Manner.

One western senator, whose name was mentioned in a recent list of eligible widowers and bachelors of the senate, has received an application from the state of Kansas. The lady puts the marital proposition in a very frank manner, all of which also probably justifies because this is leap year, says a Washington exchange. She writes:

"Dear Senator—I read you are one of the widowers of The senate who would more than likely be the one who would be next to get married.

"Now, I write you this to ask you, if you are not engaged to any lady, if you would consider myself as a candidate for that sacred trust. I am a widow, 50 years old, and should like a good and loving husband, one I could love and trust. I find life too lonesome to live without a good man.

"You may think this very impertinent in me to write you, but I assure you I am no adventuress, only one who is so lonely, and there are no eligible men in this town.

"I will wait with patience your answer; then I will tell you more of myself and who I am."

The senator's response to this tender missive was written by his secretary, who is an unfeeling man and fully capable of slamming the door in the face of hope.

THE SHIP-SUBSIDY SERPENT REAPPEARS.

UNCLE SAM—I'VE GOT 'EM A GAIN! YES, THAT'S IT.

PANIC SURE TO FOLLOW.

Protection and Subsidies to Favored Industries Have But the One Result.

If there is one country on this green earth that enjoys more tariff "protection" and that shows more favoritism to monopolies and trusts than does the United States, that country is Russia. Although Russian protective duties may not include as many articles and protect as many industries as do our Dingley duties, yet Russian protection is intended to result in complete monopolies, or trusts, in many important industries. Expectations have been fully realized. Trusts and monopolies now flourish in Russia. But the Russian peasants are impoverished as never before.

The worst industrial and financial crisis in Russia's history is now on there. It is so serious that even the controller of the state to the czar is compelled to attribute it to the overstimulation of domestic industries by protective duties and government subsidies.

The late minister of finance, M. Witte, was a consistent advocate of the policy of granting subsidies out of the state bank to everything. He had extremely high import duties put upon the products of manufacturing industries which he wished to foster and then he gave large government orders at high prices to these protected manufacturers. This policy was inaugurated, or rather greatly extended, some 15 years ago. The favored manufacturers prospered as long as the government could continue to give big orders for goods at two, three, or four times the cost of these goods if purchased from foreign manufacturers, and as long as the Russian people could stand the strain of high taxes and high prices for most that they had to buy. But, by 1897, the peasantry of Russia were behind 94,000,000 rubles ($48,000,000) in their taxes and, by 1903, their overdue taxes had increased to 121,300,000 rubles. These arrears, even after granting extensions of time, are now so great that the controller says that "more radical measures are necessary" to relieve the rural population of "fiscal charges they are not in a position to bear."

The plain meaning of this is that the policy of protection and subsidies has been so disastrous to Russian farmers that even autocratic Russia will never be able to collect these back taxes and now has to admit that she has overdone her policy of favoritism.

It takes a greater country than Russia to endure the burden and blight of protection and subsidies, such as the republicans have given us here and under which our marvelous country is now staggering even while it is blessed with a succession of crops never before realized by any country on earth. To claim that the Dingley bill has given us what prosperity we have had since 1897, is as absurd as to claim that a wagon with a heavy load will run easier up hill and through sand than will an empty wagon on a smooth, hard and level road.

Neither in Russia, nor in the United States, nor in any other country were farmers ever made prosperous by high tariff taxes. Their prosperity will always be increased by relieving them of the burdens of taxation for protection and for subsidies to manufacturing industries.

BYRON W. HOLT.

——Roosevelt was unpopular in New York before he was made vice president, and it cannot be pleaded that Wall street had anything to do then with his unpopularity. It is not an appreciable factor in the opposition to him that exists in his own state now, but a factional fight, intensified by Roosevelt's tactlessness, that is likely to divide the republican forces this year.—Nashville News.

——Candidate Roosevelt might be a great republican leader if he had personal magnetism to back his strenuosity.—Atlanta Constitution.

——The democracy of New York has not as yet signified, formally or informally, its preference among its presidential possibilities, but it should be clear, in the circumstances, that it ought to do so at the earliest opportunity. If the democracy of the nation is waiting for a sign from New York, and the general opinion seems to be that it is, it surely is incumbent upon New York to give the sign.—Binghamton Leader.

ADMINISTRATION "GRAFT."

Appropriations Diverted to Furnish Carriages for Social and Personal Use.

The "official carriage" graft has received considerable airing since the subject was first brought up in congress. The statements of the heads of departments show that there are 38 carriages and 36 horses kept for the use of department officials and that it requires 24 coachmen to drive these carriages with their sumptuous furnishings in which the cabinet and minor officials attend to their official and social duties and their personal pleasure. This number does not include those used by the interior department or the department of agriculture, which for some unexplained reason were not called upon by the house of representatives for information and volunteered none.

The department that is most lavish in the number of horses and carriages used is that of commerce and labor, which, considering it has only been in existence about one year and already employs eight horses and ten carriages, may be expected to largely increase its luxurious way of doing things when it reaches the age of even the youngest of the other departments, unless congress puts a stop to the extravagance.

That this carriage graft has gradually grown under republican administrations, without warrant of law, may be seen from the returns which show that only one out of 24 men is carried on the pay roll as "driver." The other 23 are named in the appropriation bills for more useful purposes, namely: One as a watchman, ten laborers, eight assistant messengers and four messengers. So the labor of all but one of the 24 has been diverted from the business that congress created the office for and even the new department of commerce and labor follows in the old footsteps of demanding four messengers and then using them for coachmen. The purchase of carriages and horses are nearly all covered up under similar guise, most of the appropriations used for that purpose being scheduled for transportation, or miscellaneous expense.

But few will object to cabinet officers being furnished with a horse and carriage to allow them to attend cabinet meetings and other official functions in appropriate style, but that minor officials whose time should be spent in their offices and who have no outside work to attend to, should have these luxuries under false pretenses is preposterous and should be cut off as an excrescence more fit for a monarchy than a republic.

——The trust makes big profits, the foreign consumer buys American goods at a low figure and the American people foot the bill. All of which goes to show that there is a very intimate connection between the trust and protection by tariff.—Indianapolis Sentinel.

——There will be not a democratic "reorganization," but a democratic reunion; not a triumph of any faction, but an obliteration of factions, a welding together of all the parts in a compact and unified whole, actuated by a common purpose, and a common hope of victory.—Albany Argus.

——A beautiful object lesson in the tariff for the American people is in the contract of a steel mill in the United States to deliver at Montreal 40,000 tons of rails for the Canadian Pacific railway at $21.25 a ton. This, allowing for cost of delivery, is $18 a ton less than the cost to American purchasers of steel rails at the mill. The contract price to the Canadian Pacific railway left a margin of fair profit for the manufacturers and all that is above this price is an iniquitous extortion upon American consumers which can be practiced only under cover of a shamefully exorbitant tariff.—Philadelphia Record.

——Will higher tariff duties and more tariff-protected trusts put up prices and bring more republican "prosperity." This is the variety of prosperity that decreases the use of substantial woolens and compels the people to wear cotton and shoddy goods or go naked. It is the kind of prosperity that reduces our vitality and increases the deaths from pneumonia, which is now epidemic in most of our northern states. Shall we have more protection of this kind? If the people want it there is no doubt that they can get it, but do they want it? —Indianapolis Sentinel.

"I am," replied the man on the platform without hesitation. The stranger seemed somewhat disconcerted by this display of egotism and gently suggested: "Excuse me, sir, but I should like to have you prove it." "Don't have to prove it, sir," answered the man on the platform. "I admit it. I am the only lawyer in the town sir." A couple of youths claiming to be from Frankfort blew into Burlington at an early hour yesterday. They were hunting the office of Attorney O. M. One ought to establish a branch office at the capital.

A. C. Roberts was at Walton a couple of days last week taking orders for wall paper.

J. M. Powers has opened his maple camp and is making some delicious sugar and molasses.

There's talk of extending the independent telephone line to all important points in the county.

Feed for stock is becoming very scarce in this vicinity, and farmers are anxious to see grass begin to come forth.

The twin sons of Lewis Jenkins, Walter and Earl, were twenty-one years of age last Saturday. The latter is a very small person for his age, weighing only 75 pounds and is three feet in height, while his brother is of a medium weight and size.

PT. PLEASANT.

Rev. P. H. Duncan will preach here Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Gordon, of Dayton, Ohio, are visiting relatives here.

Mrs. Howard Tanner spent Sunday with her grandparents in Constance.

Mrs. Allen, who has been visiting her daughter, Mrs. Bradford, has returned to her home near Big Bone.

Misses Nora Rucker and Maggie Bullock spent Saturday at Pogue's store in the city waiting for each other by turns. They did not meet until on the ferry boat returning home.

It looks very much like trouble is brewing in Owen county, as is evidenced by the following copied from the News-Herald:

"Can't we find enough honest men in Owen County who have sense enough to measure a perch of rock? For one hundred years the overseers of our turnpikes and gravel roads ordered the rock hauled, had them broke and measured, and there was never any expense accounts for measuring. What has been done for one hundred years at absolutely no expense to the people now comes pretty high at $3.00 a day, especially when the results are no better. The overseers of the roads ought to be given entire control of their sections with the right to measure and give vouchers for rock. Then take the $3.00 a day that has been paid to the Magistrates for driving around the country looking at rock piles they never measured, and couldn't perhaps if they tried, put on the pikes and fill up some of the mud holes. We believe in the Democratic principal of home rule and demand a return to the old plan of letting the overseers manage the pikes. We know it will be less expensive and quite likely our pikes will be just as good. The thing for the Fiscal Court to do is to enter an order at once placing the overseers in charge of the roads. The people demand it and we believe they are right."

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXIX. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 23, 1904. NO. 23

County Correspondence.

PETERSBURG.

March 19.—The frog opera opened the season here a few nights since.

Only three bodies in the vault now—at one time there were six.

On account of the long winter food for stock is getting scarce.

A recent edition of the Sunday Enquirer carried a good picture of little Nellie Hurd.

Mrs. Lee Early, of Home City, Ohio, was the guest of her sister, Mrs. Elijah Parker, a few days since.

Col. J. L. Clore and Hon. D. M. Snyder, of Burlington, were in town on business, one day last week.

Hubert Walton, who is attending medical lectures in Louisville, has been quite sick with grippe.

The gripp has been no respector of persons, and the young as well as the old have fallen victims to its awful ravages.

Miss Jeanette Hays, a pretty and accomplished young lady, of Aurora, was the guest of Lola Mathews, last week.

Nance Johns, newphew of Mrs. Marcus Collins, who died of typhoid fever in Cincinnati, was buried here last Saturday.

J. J. Loder spent most of last week with his father, Esquire L. A. Loder, of Constance, who is quite ill from the infirmities of age.

The high wind, the other day, blew something against a big plate glass window of M. L. Gordon's and broke it into many pieces.

Civil rights does not cut any ice in a game of keeps here. Quite a number, regardless of age or nationality seem infatuated with the game.

Belden received a 14,000-bushel barge of coal, Saturday, and will have it yarded in a few days. Hopkins, of Aurora, is assisting him with his float.

The high price of tobacco will make a considerable increase in the acreage of tobacco grown in this precinct this year as compared with the 1903 acreage.

Charles Wells has been a suffer with rheumatism all winter, and last Saturday fellow workman at the Aurora Wheel Works, made him a present of $35.

There is no doubt but what Boone will instruct for Rhinock, and he will be nominated on the first ballot. Let's knock out Sheriff McInnery and his gang of bolters.

W. J. Bryan is a millstone about the neck of the Democratic party; and he should be given a back seat at the St. Louis convention if he persists in his Populistic ideas.

Stephen Burns, jr., one of our most industrious young men is suffering very much from a decayed bone in one of his legs. An operation will be necessary to relieve him.

The prospect here for a wheat crop is the poorest for years. Unless there is a come-out in the appearances of the wheat fields in the next few days, many of them will be plowed and planted in corn.

The citizens of the new addition say they want the town council to make the drainage of that portion of the town sufficient to keep them from swimming out of their homes after every hard rain.

Our village dads have metropolitan ideas, and the ordinances they have promulgated will cause a wave of reform to sweep over our town. Two of the best governed towns in the county have no town officers—Burlington and Union.

Col. Geo. R. Berkshire, who is always an early bird, is plowing for watermelons, and expects to have them ripe by the regulation time—the first Monday in August, time for making the first pulling. W. D. Rector, also an early bird, has planted two acres of bunch peas, and will have them on the market by May 1.

Quite a number of Boone's best tobacco growers has moved to Indiana, this spring, because they find better land for growing the weed than we have here. A few years ago it was claimed that tobacco would not grow in Hoosier, but it has been demonstrated that the soil is adapted to the production of the finest quality of White Burley.

This community has lost one of its oldest and most highly esteemed citizens, Mrs. Julia Ann Cox. She was a daughter of James and Pauline Aylor, and was born March 25th, 1841, and died March 15th, 1904, of a complication of diseases, chief among which was pleurisy. She was married to John G. Cox December 5th, 1860. He died several years since. To them were born seven children, six boys and one girl. Five of whom survive the kind old woman, who has passed to that blessed home preserved for her on the other shore. Of the children Louis A. and Eva, died years ago, the survivors children being J. N. Cox, of Clarksville, Tennessee, and Kirby S., Robert M., Hubert O. and John G. Cox, all of this place. Mrs. Cox was a member of the Baptist church, and in the absence of Rev. Sproles her funeral was preached by Rev. Davis, of Aurora, at the M. E. church at 10:30 a. m., after which the remains were placed on the steamer Pauline and taken to Belleview, where they were interred by the side of those of her husband, Mrs. Cox was a kind, loving christian woman, honored and esteemed by all who had the good fortune to know her. The family has the sympathy of the entire community.

We take this means of extending to our many friends our heartfelt thanks for the numerous kindnesses shown our mother, Mrs. Julia A. Cox, during her fatal illness. HER CHILDREN.

The Waterloo and Hathaway Telephone Company received their line material and telephones last week, and have the line up and their 'phones in and are ready to say "hello" central to other lines, and "hello" to their members along the line, which is quite a convenience to this part of the country now in touch with the outside world for once.

More Riots.

Disturbances of strikers are not nearly as grave as an individual disorder of the system. Overwork, loss of sleep, nervous tension will be followed by utter collapse, unless a reliable remedy is immediately employed. There's nothing so efficient to cure disorders of the Liver or Kidneys as Electric Bitters. It's a wonderful tonic, and effective nervine and the greatest all around medicine for run down systems. It dispels Nervousness, Rheumatism and Neuralgia and expels Malaria germs. Only 50c, and satisfaction guaranteed by all Druggists.

A flock of 40 wild ducks passed over the Commissary, Tuesday, and while Harry Acra was returning from Burlington the same day he saw 75 between Burlington and here. The country was full of them. The high wind makes the river rough and drives them to the country.

"Last January," she says, "my baby took a dreadful cold and at one time I feared she would have pneumonia, but one of my neighbors told me how this remedy had cured her little boy and I began giving it to my baby at once and it soon cured her. I heartily thank the manufacturers of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for placing so great a cure within my reach. I cannot recommend it too highly or say too much in its favor. I hope all who read this will try it and be convinced as I was." For Sale by All Druggists.

THE COTTON CORNER.

D. J. Sully, the Biggest Figure in It, Failed.

Within a Few Moments Cotton Fell Nearly $13 a Bale From the Highest Figures of the Day—Many Stirring Scenes Ensued.

New York, March 19.—Daniel J. Sully, the cotton operator who has for 15 months been the biggest figure in the cotton markets of the world, and who has "bulled" cotton from seven cents a pound to over 17, announced his inability to make good his engagements on the New York cotton exchange Friday. Within a few moments cotton fell nearly $13 a bale from the highest figures of the day.

Scenes such as followed the announcement of the failure it has been the privilege of few brokers to witness before. Traders in the street have witnessed stock panics in previous years; corners have been broken and many crashes have been recorded but none has been accompanied by such frenzy and confusion.

Business had been transacted in the usual way throughout the morning session with no indication of any unusual event. Shortly after the afternoon session, however, there was a lull in the pit and about 2 o'clock the announcement of the failure was made by Superintendent King.

For a few seconds there was an ominous quiet over the floor as though the news had stunned all within hearing of the announcement. Then with one impulse a mighty shout went up from the bears, they who had been fighting Sully and the bull clique for months. Hats were thrown into the air to fall where they would, a moment later to be trampled upon by the stampede for the pit. Coats were torn by frantic brokers in their mad efforts to unload their holdings and chairs and campstools were dashed into the pit to emphasize some wild broker's offer to sell. Messengers soon were rushing in and out of the building with orders to sell or buy; telephone booths were besieged, and telegraph offices were flooded with dispatches.

Outside the cotton exchange appearances gave little indication of the pandemonium within until the messengers began to rush between the exchange and the brokers' offices. Soon the news reached the stock, produce and coffee exchanges, and traders on these markets hastened to the scene of the panic. Crowds assailed the entrance to the visitors' gallery, but a double guard was placed at the doors and admittance was refused to all but those accompanied by members.

It was estimated that something like three-quarters of a million bales of cotton were traded in during the 20 minutes of the panic that followed the announcement, and that of this upwards of half a million bales represented "forced liquidation" or the selling out of men whose margins have been nearly or quite wiped out. As the market slumped 250 points during this period the loss falling on this element amounted to something over a million dollars.

Philadelphia, March 19.—Large manufacturers and users of cotton in this city were somewhat pleased with the collapse of the cotton corner, although they maintain that the reduction in prices will have no immediate effect in reducing prices of finished products. Most of the mills report that the season's output has been made up from the high-priced materials.

Two Barks Collide and Twenty-Two Men Drowned.

The American Steamship New York Collided With the British Troop Ship Assaye—The Latter Was Badly Damaged.

Dublin, March 21.—The German bark Mona collided with the English bark Lady Cairns off Dublin bay Sunday morning. The Lady Cairns sank in a few minutes. Her crew of 22 were drowned. The Mona, which was much damaged, was assisted into Dublin harbor.

The Lady Cairns was a three-masted iron ship of 1,186 tons. She was commanded by Capt. T. Evans and was bound from Liverpool for Timaru, New Zealand. She was built in Belfast in 1869 and was owned by L. Tulloch, of Swansea. The Mona was commanded by Capt. Schwarting and was last reported at Ardressan.

Southampton, March 21.—The American line steamship New York, Capt. Young, from New York, March 12, for Plymouth, Cherbourg and Southampton, met with two mishaps Sunday, grounding off Cape La Hague, France, in the early morning, and later coming into collision in the English channel with the Peninsular and Oriental steamship Assaye, under contract to the British government and used as a troop ship, bound for Bombay with 500 troops on board.

The New York grounded while approaching Cherbourg at 2:30 o'clock Sunday morning during a fog. The sea was smooth, however, and the tide was on the flood, and within an hour and a half the vessel was floated without assistance. Her bottom was damaged and there was water in the holds, but she was able to proceed.

During the voyage up the channel a dense fog descended. When off Hurst Castle, England, the Assaye suddenly appeared and it was found impossible to avoid a collision. The New York's bow crashed into the Assaye's starboard bow, tearing a great gap in that vessel. The New York's bowsprit and figure head were carried away, and the latter was smashed into fragments.

There was great excitement on both vessels. The boat of the Assaye were lowered and the troops were mustered, but the bulkhead of the troopship saved her. Both vessels were able to ented Southampton; and the New York was docked at 6:30 for temporary repairs. Nobody was injured. It will be impossible to estimate the damage to the New York until she has been put into dry dock.

It is believed that both vessels have been somewhat seriously injured. Another troopship will replace the Assaye.

FIFTY-EIGHTH CONGRESS.

Regular Session.

Washington, March 17.—Senate—Another entire day of the senate was devoted to consideration, in executive session, of the nomination of Gen. Leonard Wood to be major general. Senator Blackburn, resuming his speech, occupied a little more than two hours and was followed by Senator Quarles, who consumed the balance of the day and expects to take another hour Thursday. It is predicted now that a vote will be reached before adjournment Friday. In addition to the set speeches which will be made by Senators Teller and Foraker, Senator Alger, formerly secretary of war, will take 15 or 20 minutes in defense of Gen. Wood's executive ability. He will speak from a personal point of view.

House—Subsidies to railroads for special mail facilities came in for considerable criticism by Mr. Robinson (Ind.) and Mr. Gaines (Tenn.), the latter characterizing them as a "legalized steal." Rural mail carriers found many friends on the floor, who advocated increased pay for them and the privilege of acting as agents for newspapers and trades people. Mr. Flood (Va.) denied that Perry S. Heath was entitled to credit for inaugurating rural free delivery. He said Heath made the claim, "notwithstanding the fact that he had not emerged from the postal scandal with a name as unsullied as the Alpine snows thrice bleached by northern blasts."

Washington, March 18.—Senate—With the paraphernalia for playing Jai Alai, a game which figures conspicuously in the contest against the confirmation of Gen. Leonard Wood to be major general, the members of the United States senate amused themselves for more than an hour Thursday afternoon, protected from the gaze of the public by the closed doors of an executive session. A lively interest was manifested in the game. It was stated by members of the committee that the game will be introduced at the St. Louis exposition. Senators Proctor, Cockrell, Quarles, Foraker, Teller, Scott, Pettus, Blackburn and others who participated in the hearings before the military affairs committee, where the game was explained by experts, were the exponents of Jai Alai.

House—Throughout the day the post office appropriation bill was under discussion and little progress was made. The minority leader declared the post office was rotten from turret to foundation stone and the republicans were trying to reorganize it on an appropriation bill. Just before adjournment Mr. Southwick (N. Y.) precipitated a brief but lively debate by having read an editorial from the New York World giving republicans credit for anti-trust legislation and the merger prosecution. It was offered by way of reply to Mr. Williams, who asked Wednesday if the merger decision was to be used by the republicans as a theatrical political brick.

Washington, March 19.—Senate—In executive session the nomination of Brig. Gen. Wood to be major general was confirmed by a vote of 45 to 16.

House—The house was in session a little over three hours Friday, an early adjournment being taken to permit members to make a trip to the site of the proposed Jamestown exposition. Although the post office appropriation bill was under discussion the entire time, only one page was completed, making 11 pages in all disposed of. Several amendments were adopted, the principal one being the inserting of a new paragraph in the bill providing for an appropriation of $500,000 for "unusual business" at third and fourth-class post offices. The postmaster general, however, is requested to make public the regulations under which the allotments are to be made before using any part of this amount and a similar requirement was imposed in the case of the expenditure of the $1,000,000 for separating mails at third and fourth-class post offices. The paragraph appropriating $90,000 per annum for the lease of a post office building in New York city to be erected by the New York Central railroad was agreed to after it had been amended so as to not interfere with the discretion given the postmaster general in the matter of the selection of a site.

GEN. WOOD CONFIRMED.

A Notable Contest In the Senate Comes to An End.

Washington, March 19.—By the action of the senate in executive session Friday Gen. Leonard Wood became a major general, taking the rank from August 8, 1903, the day President Roosevelt made the promotion. The contest against his confirmation has been a notable one, beginning November 10, 1903, soon after congress convened in special session and continuing through the present session until Friday, when by a vote of 45 to 16 the nomination was confirmed. The late Senator Hanna was recognized as the leader of the forces opposed to Gen. Wood and had it not been for his death before the disposition of the case it is conceded that the vote would have been much closer.

Five democratic senators voted with the majority in favor of confirmation. They were Senators Cockrell, Pettus Patterson, Clarke (Ark.) and Dubois.

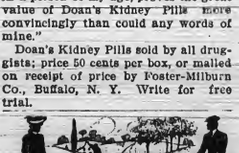
EIGHT YEARS OF TORTURE.



No sufferer more keen than kidney suffering. Sick kidneys make bad blood; cause weak, stiff and aching backs; cause blind, sick and dizzy headaches, lack of appetite and loss of sleep; keep you all tired out and spoil digestion.

To have perfect health, you must cure the kidneys. Read how one man was cured by Doan's Kidney Pills after eight years of torture.

Henry Soule, of Pultney St., Hammondsport, N. Y., says: "For eight years I suffered constant agony from kidney complaint. I endured the worst torture from gravel and the kidney secretions were excessive and contained sediment like brick dust. I had to get out of bed from ten to twenty times a night and the loss of sleep wore me out. Indigestion came on and the distress after eating was terrible. Doan's Kidney Pills effected a complete and lasting cure, and after the symptoms of kidney trouble were gone my stomach began to work as it should. This lasting cure, especially in a person of my age, proves the great value of Doan's Kidney Pills more convincingly than could any words of mine."

A FIERCE CONTEST.

The Battle Between the Torpedo Boats Described.

Thirty Russians on Board the Stereguschtchi Were Terribly Mutilated—By a Shell From the Jap's Gun—A Sickening Sight.

St. Petersburg, March 19.—Concerning the loss of the armored cruiser Boyarin at Port Arthur, a private letter received here says that the vessel was struck by a floating mine dropped by the Japanese. Naval engineers are preparing to raise the Boyarin, though it is considered doubtful that she will be fit for fighting services, as it is feared that the tremendous concussion sustained from the explosion of the floating mine has more than likely strained the frames.

A correspondent who has just visited Port Arthur telegraphed Friday from Mukden as follows:

"Despite the various bombardments at Port Arthur the external aspect of the city remains unchanged, although the enemy fired an enormous number of projectiles. The marine monsters in the harbor look like enormous black hulls and the battleships and cruisers bear the marks of the fighting. The black clouds of smoke from their stacks overhang the town.

"Near the entrance of the harbor can be seen the charred wrecks of the Japanese fire ships. Aboard one of the farthest out was found the body of a Japanese officer who had shot himself.

"Six hours of firing by the heaviest guns during the last bombardment did not demolish a single building, but cost a few lives. The husband and children of the Baroness Frank, who was decapitated by fragments of shell flying in through the window, were unharmed.

"The enemy in endeavoring to stand as far as possible outside the range of the Russian batteries, rendered their own ineffective. The people are getting used to the bombardments and the Japanese squadron cruising in the offing caused little alarm. Occupations are resuming their wonted course and many stores have been reopened.

"Not a few women heroically refuse to leave Port Arthur, regardless of the tragic death of Baroness Frank. During the height of the cannonading one woman, armed with dressings for wounds, wandered the streets ready to afford aid to the wounded.

"During the engagement between the Russian and the Japanese torpedo boat destroyers the boats came into very close quarters, being within a few fathoms' length of each other. A torpedo from the Russian destroyer Vlastiti tore off the stern of one of the enemy's destroyers, her captain standing on the bridge as she sank amidst wild cries."

London, March 21.—Nothing has reached here to confirm the report that a battle has taken place on the Yalu in which the Russians captured 1,800 prisoners.

A dispatch from St. Petersburg dated Sunday says there has been no change in the situation and that all is quiet on both land and sea between the Russian line from Ping Yang to the Yalu river and the Japanese line from Gensan. There have been slight skirmishes between scouts, but no battle has taken place, as the distance between the opposing armies is great. The bulk of the Russian forces, the dispatch adds, has not yet passed the Yalu river.

A correspondent of the Times at New Chwang cables as follows: According to information received here the reason the Vladivostok forts did not reply to the bombardment by the Japanese was because the batteries were not provided with guns. Since the bombardment, parties have been working night and day to place guns in position. The Russian losses were slight because the batteries were deserted.

A correspondent of the Times with the Japanese forces, by wireless telegraphy via Wei-Hai-Wei, under date of March 20, sends over a column of matter which is mostly a description of the torpedo fight between the Russians and the Japanese on March 9.

He confirms the fierceness of the contest. The vessels were so close that the Russians threw charges of explosives on to the bridge of one of the Japanese torpedo boat destroyers. These, however, failed to detonate. All the vessels engaged were more or less damaged. The Japanese losses were six killed and eight wounded. That the Russians were defeated, in spite of the superior numbers, is due to the better shooting of the Japanese and the fact that the Russian vessels were armed with 3-pound guns while the armament of the Japanese ships was made up of 6-pounders.

In reference to the fight of three hours which occurred later, the correspondent says the Russians fought with desperation and the Japanese with confidence born of their past victories. One Russian commander was killed early in the fight. A lieutenant then took command, only to fall, shot in both legs. The command devolved upon the sub-lieutenant, who also was killed after taking the wheel himself. When the coxswain fell this vessel was captured by the Japanese. The other Russian vessels escaped. On the Japanese side one destroyer was hit on the water line, two of her compartments were flooded and her quickfiring ammunition was wetted. This vessel retired from the action. Her officers escaped narrowly from a 12-pound shot which struck the platform in front of the bridge, killing one man and sweeping the bridge with splinters. The same vessel received a 3-pound shot through the hull, but the damage was repaired within four days.

A Japanese lieutenant who boarded the Stereguschtchi said he had never seen a more sickening sight. Thirty bodies, terribly mutilated by a shell, were lying on deck. As the Japanese approached, two Russian blue jackets rushed from the conning tower, locked themselves in the cabin aft, and refused to come out. Two stokers jumped overboard, and were picked up. These, with two wounded men, were the only survivors of a crew of 55. When the Stereguschtchi sank the men who were locked in the cabin sank with her.

The Japanese concentrated their fire first on the Russians' 12-pounder, and put it out of action early in the fight, leaving her with only her 3-pounders against their own 12-pounders and 6-pound guns. The Japanese had three killed and four wounded.

Describing the bombardment of Port Arthur on the same day, the correspondent asserts that more than 110 shells fell in the town. The effect of the great shells from the 12-inch guns must have been appalling.

NOTHING BUT PROMISES.

Republicans Do Nothing Beyond Passing Appropriation Bills for Themselves.

The claim of the republican party that it is "the party that does things," hardly agrees with the "let well enough alone" policy, upon which the elections were fought last fall. The majority that controls congress is doing nothing but pass the appropriation' bills and even many of the promises made in the last republican national platform have not been redeemed. Monopolies have not been restrained; the trusts are still working on full time. The reciprocity treatles, made with so much noise and expense by Mr. Kasson, have never been ratified. The bills for the relief of the laboring men are still being fought over in the committee and it is safe to say will, if favorably reported, only pass the house of representatives for political effect. Shipsubsidy, that was promised to the ship trust, has been again postponed until after election, for which the taxpayers must give thanks to the resolute opposition of the democrats who have stirred up the voters so that republican congressmen "fear the people."

The pleading of Secretary Taft for free trade with the Philippines gets no response from "the party that does things." The republican majority in congress says:

"Yes, we recognize the need; the islands are sadly cramped for want of trade facilities and in a year or so we will do something about it."

There is one thing that "the party that does things" never omits and that is, to make extravagant appropriations. "The old flag and an appropriations" is still the battle cry of these patriots.

EVERYTHING IS CLAIMED.

All That Remains for the Republican Party to Do Is Amend the Old Testament.

Representative Sheppard, of Texas, was piling it upon the republicans in the excellent speech which he made the other day on the tariff question, for claiming all the prosperity under the sun, says the Johnstown Democrat.

"Why, Mr. Speaker," said this fervent young Texan, "the next thing I expect to see is some republican rising in his place here and proposing to amend the Old Testament. I expect some prophet of prosperity will rise in his place and move to strike the name of the Deity from the first line of the first chapter of the Book of Genesis, so that it will read:

"'In the beginning the republican party created the heavens and the earth.'"

Here is just a small part of what the strenuous Mr. Roosevelt has cost the country during his brief but glorious reign:

Improving and furnishing white house	$175,000
Refurnishing Mayflower, president's yacht	100,000
Office building at white house	65,000
Cost of keeping two ships ready this summer for president's use	25,000
Refitting Mayflower in 1902 and 1903 for president's use	65,000
Cost this year	30,000
Cost of keeping Mayflower and Sylph in 1902-03	60,000

He now wants $100,000 more for stables and when he gets them he will think of something else to add to the luxury of his surroundings. He comes a little high—but think what a joy it is to have him.

DEMOCRACY THE ONLY HOPE

A Reduction of the Tariff Will Not Be Made by the Republican Party.

There may be some republican candidates for congress next fall who will promise to vote to reform the tariff, but if they are elected they will be powerless to carry out any such proposition, says the Indianapolis Sentinel. There are a number of republican members of the present congress who gave like promises, but they are either sleeping or perchance have forgetten. They are certainly not trying to accomplish anything in that direction. Only a short time ago Senator Spooner, the republican leader in the senate, declared openly that there would be no tariff legislation at this session of congress, claiming that as a presidential campaign was about to begin, agitation of the tariff would hurt business. He evidently did not speak without a thorough understanding of the attitude of his party in both houses. If those who promised reform before election were in earnest they would join with the democrats in forcing the committee of ways and means to report one of the several bills that are now before the committee, but which the great majority of the republican members do not wish to vote upon. It would require 15 republicans to join the democrats and force a vote on tariff reform, but they will not do it. The moral to the voters, therefore, is, vote only for the candidate who really favors reducing the tariff and not those who promise to do so merely to secure their election.

"GRAFT" IN SHIP-SUBSIDY.

The Old Gang Planning a Legalized Raid on Uncle Sam's Strong-Box.

The fact that the old ship-subsidy gang of grafters have again made their appearance in Washington and are making a more determined effort than ever before to break into Uncle Sam's treasury, and that a commission will be appointed to draft a plan for this congress to pass at its short session, which will legalize the raid upon the treasury, calls attention to the results of ship-subsidy experiments in other countries. No countries, in proportion to their population, have paid greater subsidies to the shipping interests than have France and Italy. And no countries afford better examples than do these of the failure of this means of reviving shipping.

The French ship subsidy system dates from the year 1881, and was rearranged in 1893. The payments in the year 1896 (the latest date contained in the United States special consular reports) were:

	Francs.
For bounties to navigation	9,547,720
For bounties to construction	4,136,248
For postal subsidies	26,185,000
Total	39,864,068

Thus the yearly payment from the French treasury for the encouragement of shipping reached in 1896, an average year, the great sum of nearly 40,000,000 francs ($8,000,000). Now let us see the result. According to the report of the United States consul at Havre of September 6, 1899, the total increase of French mercantile tonnage in the five years from 1893, the year of the enactment of the new law, until 1898, was 66,961 tons, "the increase being limited to vessels which receive no benefit from the bounty law of 1893, while the steam tonnage engaged in meeting foreign competition has actually showed a decrease."

After 18 years of bounty payments a committee of the French parliament in 1898 reported as follows:

"We do not hesitate to say without fear of contradiction that our merchant marine is in such a state of decadence that there is reason to be uneasy about our naval fleet."

This is taken from the report of the United States consul at Havre to the state department of September 6, 1899, who continues as follows:

"Many other extracts may be quoted from the reports of various chambers of commerce, from the speeches made in the two houses of parliament and from lectures delivered by experts in economies, all lamenting the depressed state of the merchant navy of France."

As appears from the figures given above, the French government pays postal subsidies, premiums on the construction of French ships and premiums on voyages made by French ships. The effect of this policy is thus described by the United States consul at Marseilles in his report to the state department of July 20, 1899:

"The ship owners found the ship builders constantly increasing their prices, until the point was reached where the builders were accused of calculating the amount which proposed constructions would command and adding that amount to their own cost price, thus absorbing the premium for navigation and the one for construction."

This consul concludes that "the merchant marine of France is in an unsatisfactory condition" and gives it as his opinion that "the inferiority of the French merchant marine is attributable to the timidity or indifference of French capital."

The Italian government pays navigation subsidies and construction bounties, but the United States consul general at Rome in his report to the state department of July 25, 1899, makes the following comment:

"In view of the efforts of the Italian government to encourage Italian shipping, the long seaboard, and the necessity of shipping to the economical life of the country the results are certainly far from satisfactory."

It remains for the American people to decide whether to adopt the artificial expedient of the subsidy system, which must be continued indefinitely at ever increasing cost, or whether to approve the more logical principle announced by Mr. J. J. Hill, in the New York Journal of Commerce, November 19: "Who pins his faith to the natural advantages of the country and the wide-awake enterprise of its people, and not the paternal care and coddling of the government which can help one interest only at the expense of others. All that really live business men ask of the government is that it shall not put difficulties and obstructions in their way, and shall afford such protection of the laws as will give them a fair field for their energies. What they cannot then succeed in, they are willing to leave to others."

——It is quite evident that the republican organs would rather not play unless they are permitted to say who shall be "it" on the democratic side.—Binghamton (N. Y.) Leader.

——With the shipbuilding trust's securities stricken from the Stock Exchange list the collapse of that bubble of over capitalization is complete. A keener scrutiny of the securities before they were listed would have been more to the purpose.—N. Y. World.

——Those who have been trying so industriously to "smoke out" Senator Fairbanks on the vice presidential matter may find a crumb of comfort in the action of the Richland county (Ill.) republicans who have just instructed for Roosevelt and Fairbanks. The action of the convention was immediately telegraphed to the senator. His response to this show of partiality may give the anxious ones a line on his intentions. It is for him to decide whether he can afford to be defeated with Mr. Roosevelt, and that, no doubt is what gives him concern.—Indianapolis Sentinel.

STATE ODDS AND ENDS

END CAME QUIETLY.

The Kentucky Legislature Adjourned Sine Die at Midnight.

Frankfort, March 16.—Senate—The Kentucky legislature has adjourned sine die. The end came quietly and peacefully shortly before the "witching hours of midnight." The senate Tuesday passed the bill appropriating $2,500 for a monument to the Kentucky soldiers under Gen. Green Clay who were killed near old Fort Meigs, in Ohio, in 1813. House amendments to the county game warden bill were concurred in, and the bill passed as amended. The house bill to allow a deputy clerk to practice as an attorney in courts other than that in which he is a deputy was defeated. The house amendments to the bill making more specific the fees of county and circuit clerks were concurred in. The house bill to punish any one who draws or flourishes a pistol or other deadly weapon in a passenger coach or train, passed.

House—Bills passed: Senate bill appropriating $400 for repairing the monument over President Zachary Taylor's grave in Jefferson; senate bill, which originally appropriated $75,000 for the A. and M. college, but which was so amended as to provide only $25,000; senate bill, which appropriates $15,000 annually in addition to the present annuity for regular expenses of the A. and M. college; senate bill, providing for the collection of revenues in Beckham county, just as in other counties of the state; senate bill, appropriating $15,600 for the Eastern asylum. The original bill provided for $42,000; senate bill, prohibiting the selling of liquor at wholesale in local option districts.

TRUE SOUTHERN COURAGE.

Confederate Daughters Continue Meeting in a House Which Was on Fire.

Louisville, Ky., March 17.—True southern courage was shown Wednesday afternoon by members of the Albert Sidney Johnston Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, meeting with Mrs. Basil W. Duke, when they proceeded with routine business undisturbed by the fact that the attic of Gen. Duke's residence was aflame and three fire engines were pumping streams into the blaze. The fire involved the possible loss not only of a historic home, but of a collection of antique furniture, portraits and heirlooms which is priceless. Mrs. Duke, a sister of the noted confederate cavalry raider, Gen. John H. Morgan, calmly advised the members of the order to proceed with the election of officers, as the firemen would attend to the fire. The loss was slight.

NONE VETOED OR APPROVED.

Bills Passed By the Legislature Not Acted Upon By the Governor.

Frankfort, Ky., March 17.—Gov. Beckham did not approve, nor veto, Wednesday any of the large number of bills on his desk. The one known as the "McInerney bill" is still in his hands and he has nine more days, under the constitution, in which to dispose of it, and all others that come to his hands during the last ten days of the session. It has been urged in some quarters that the "McInerney bill" is unconstitutional, but it is not known if the governor takes that view of it.

Death of L. K. Marty.

Newport, Ky., March 17.—L. K. Marty, who for years had been prominent in business and financial circles in Campbell county, died Wednesday morning at his home in the Kentucky highlands. The immediate cause of his death was kidney trouble, although he had been ill for the greater part of the winter.

A New State House.

Frankfort, Ky., March 18.—The commission provided for under the recent state capitol bill, composed of the governor, auditor, attorney general, secretary of state and treasurer, will hold its first meeting Saturday, to take steps towards the erection of a new state house.

State Banks Sued For Back Taxes.

Paducah, Ky., March 18.—State Auditor's Agent Frank Lucas filed suit against every state bank in Kentucky for back taxes for the past five years. These suits involve the payment of state and county taxes on about $45,000,000 of property annually.

Patent Medicine Venders' License.

Frankfort, Ky., March 19.—The bill to charge patent medicine venders a license of $50 was vetoed by Gov. Beckham Friday because the same license is provided for in the agreed doctors' bill, which has been approved by the governor.

Capt. Tebeau in Louisville.

Louisville, Ky., March 19.—George Tebeau, owner of the Louisville baseball team, arrived here Friday from Kansas City. He has signed 29 men. The players will report here for practice March 23. The season will open April 20.

Governor Vetoed the Bill.

Frankfort, Ky., March 19.—Gov. Beckham vetoed the bill which provides for the payment of county clerks of two cents per name for recording the school census reports from each school district.

THE TOWBOAT GOBLE.

Sunk in the Mouth of the Big Sandy—Two Men Were Drowned.

Ashland, Ky., March 19.—The steamer M. B. Goble, which sank in the mouth of the Big Sandy Thursday midnight, will be almost a total loss. She had just returned from Ashland, where she went to coal, and was very heavily loaded on the bow. Capt. Carl Mace, of Ashland, one of the owners, was at the wheel, and just as the boat entered the mouth of the Big Sandy the bow began to sink and in three minutes she rested on the bottom in 30 feet of water. About six inches of the pilot house is out of the water. Failure of the siphon pump to work properly and the heavy load on the bow is thought to be the cause. The Goble was just ready to hitch onto her tow of timber to be taken to Louisville and carried a double crew of 12 men. First Engineer Charley Mains, of Ashland, stood by his post and was caught like a rat in a trap as was also the cook, William Bartlett, of Catlettsburg. The other ten members of the crew escaped by swimming to the rafts of timber about 100 feet away. The Goble was owned by M. B. Globe, of Catlettsburg, Capt. Carl Mace, of Ashland, and Mont J. Goble, of Cincinnati. She was valued at $6,000 and was insured for about $4,000 in a Cincinnati insurance company.

SHOT HIMSELF.

He Jested With His Wife Before He Took His Life.

Louisville, Ky., March 19.—Albert L. Smith, a Louisville man of wide acquaintance over the country, committed suicide Friday by shooting himself with a revolver. He left his wife laughing in one room while he entered the next. A minute later she heard the pistol shot and found him lifeless on the bed. He left no explanation of his deed. He was the proprietor of the largest men's furnishing store in Louisville and Saturday he was to open a handsome new store in Fourth avenue. His brother committed suicide two months ago by leaping from the Big Four bridge into the river.

The Louisvilles Lost.

Louisville, Ky., March 19.—In the last game of the season the Cincinnati Y. M. C. A. basket ball team won from the Louisville Y. M. C. A. by the score of 24 to 15 after a hot contest here. A large crowd was in attendance, and the home team made a great effort to carry away the honors.

Postmaster Accused.

Paintsville, Ky., March 18.—Before United States Commissioner H. S. Hawes Thursday Jeff Murray, postmaster in Galen, Ky., was held on the charge of having used postage stamps to purchase merchandise and reporting them to the government as having been cancelled.

On a Trip of Inspection.

BOONE CO., RECORDER

Wednesday, - - March 23, 1904.

W. L. RIDDELL, - - Publisher.

FOR CONGRESS.

HON. CLIFFORD E. NADAUD, of Kenton county, is a candidate for Congress from the Sixth Kentucky District, subject to the action of the Democratic party.

HON. D. LENN GOOCH, of Covington, is a candidate for Congress in this the Sixth Congressional District of Kentucky, subject to the action of the Democratic party.

HON. E. C. SMITH, of Carrollton, is a candidate for Congress from the 6th Congressional District, subject to the action of the Democratic party.

THE Senate bill to submit to the people an amendment to the Constitution to return to the viva voce system of voting is a law, the signature of the Governor not being required.

THE number of persons who censure Judge Cason and Dr. Rouse for their efforts to protect this community and probably others from the smallpox, is growing very small.

THE fight Senator Foraker is making in Ohio against the Dick-Herrick-Cox combination, is getting hot and very interesting. The President has fired a few hot shot into the camp of the combination.

HON. E. C. SMITH, candidate for Congress, will be in Petersburg on Tuesday the 29th inst., will speak at Hebron at 7 p. m. that day; he will spend Wednesday in Burlington; Thursday, in Florence; Friday, in Walton, and will speak in Verona that night.

The Harrodsburg Democrat says: "The contest for the salvation of the Democrat party in Kentucky is on in earnest." After all it will turn out to be a contest among the "pie grabbers" who have little concern about the "salvation of the Democratic party."

IT is certainly very wrong for anyone to impute to Dr. Ranshaw a selfish motive in pronouncing Wm. Wilson's disease smallpox by charging that his pay is much better when he pronounces a case smallpox than it would otherwise be. Such a charge is untrue, malicious and actionable.

THE March report of the bureau of statistics of the Department of Agriculture shows the amount of wheat remaining in farmers' hands on March 1 to have been about 132,600,000 bushels, or 20.8 per cent of last year's crop, as compared with 24.5 per cent of the crop of 1902, on hand on March 1, 1903, and 23.2 per cent of the crop of 1901 on hand on March 1, 1902.

THE RECORDER makes the following suggestion as a solution of the perplexing question of how to nominate a Democratic Presidential ticket that will be satisfactory both the Bryanites and the Clevelandites: Let them toss a copper for choice of position, and then nominate one for the head and the other for the tail of the ticket. About the only objection to this plan lies in the fact that it would be too much like tying a cat and a 'possum together by their caudle ornaments and suspending them from a pole.

WHEN you read the following from Senator Blackburn you are bound to addmit that his head is level as regards the political situation in this State: He says:

"The Republicans are going to give us a desperate fight this fall, and if our party is not organized in such a way as to retain the confidence of the masses of the voters, then we will be weak before the campaign opens and will grow weaker each day. It is true that we won by a big majority last fall, and no one was more gratified than I, but that big majority gives me no hopes of a similar majority this fall, when the returns show that Governor Beckam received but few more votes than he did three years ago, while Belknap received 20,000 less than Yerkes did then. Now these 20,000 Republicans who voted in 1900 and did not vote last fall, are not dead, and you may be assured the every man of them will be on hand to vote for President and Congressman. With these 20,000 voting the Democrats will have a narrow margin left and a hard fight."

Says the Dayton, O., Journal:

"Now comes the morning after at Springfield to think it over. Was the victim worth the sacrifice? Washington C. H. and Urbana have struggled in vain to live down the blot upon citizenship. The older they are the blacker appears the blot in retrospect. Now let the Courier Journal rail at Ohio justice and discourse valiantly upon a comparison."

Rail at Ohio justice? Why, we have never railed at Ohio justice! Twenty-five years ago, when the Cincinnati newspapers—particularly the old Gazette—were railing at crime in Kentucky, we prepared and issued an "Ohio Crimes Supplement." It consisted of eight full pages made up exclusively out of specials to the Gazette and Commercial, sent by their own correspondents from all over the Buckeye State, detailing the killings, wife-beatings, burglaries, arsons seductions, forgeries and other lawless acts, perpetrated during a single week, prefaced by a mammoth cartoon on the initial page, representing Richard Smith standing upon a stack of Bibles, with a spyglass leveled upon Kentucky, oblivious of the violence going on all about him. For a time at least this, "shut 'em up."

The Journal continues:

"One of the misfortunes brought upon the State by lawlessness in Springfield will doubtless be renewed outcry on the part of the press of the South about lynching in Ohio. It is perfectly well known to the editors of Southern newspapers that the press of the North rarely condones these outbreaks of the mob. Ohio newspapers, as a rule, will be found on the side of law and order. The exceptions are marked and notorious."

Here we have the zealot's consciousness not so much of his own wrongdoing as of its coming home to roost. Yet even in his house of glass he cannot help throwing stones. The pharisee always felicitates himself that he is not as the publican and sinner, and, with your Northern sectionalistic pharisee, the South is always the publican and sinner. Yet in the South, as in the North there is the most general and genuine respect for law on the part of the mass and body of the people and the press, the exceptions to the contrary being hardly worth noting. Indeed our esteemed Dayton contemporary is good enough in this connection to say:

"Credit must be given particularly to the Courier-Journal for some recent weighty utterances against the practice of lynching. But this outspoken condemnation of a wholesale crime that is the disgrace of the American people, is not what it should be at the South, and the neglect at the South is undoubtedly one of the influences that promote the recurrence of hideous atrocities in the North. It is time for the whole nation to awake to the defense of its laws. On the integrity of these hangs the hope of liberty. The Springfield mob is beneath the possibility of excuse or defense. But at least it did not burn its victim nor subject him to slow torture. It has preserved some traces of humanity which the average Sauthern mob lost long ago."

If we wanted to be ugly and to make reprisal, we might answer, "No, they did not burn the victim but they went to work burning out the negro quarter, visiting their lawless violence upon the innocent along with the guilty." But we have no such intention, are moved by no such spirit. A mob's a mob, the world over. The Journal needs to get it out of its head that there is any essential difference between Southern mobs and Northern mobs, Southern people and Northern people. North and South, we are one people.

Indeed we are the most homogeneous people on the face of the globe. Given the same conditions and we shall have in either section the same results. The pharisaism which would visit wrath upon one section which it would withhold from the other is equally unpatriotic and unjudging. At the same time, it should never be forgotten that it is the South, not the North which has the more serious aspects of the Negro problem to solve, that where there is one negro at the North to be dealt with, there are ten thousand at the South, and that the Southern negro is more barbarous and benighted, as a rule, than the least educated and civilized of the Northern negroes, making greater temptation along with greater danger for the intervention of lawless methods—for reason and excuse there is none—at the South than at the North.

Meanwhile, the Negro question is a race question, not a sectional or party question. Pluck the beam out of thine own eye, brother, pluck it out! It does not add to your strength of vision. It merely disfigures your beauty.—Courier-Journal.

In connection with comments on the constitutional convention then in session at Frankfort, the Advertiser says. "Our delegate, Mr. Chambers, this far, has pursued a very commendable course. He has, contrary to the custom of nearly all the rest of the members, talked but little; but that little to the point."

The Williamstown Courier gives the following account of the last "pistol bee" at that town:

On Thursday afternoon last the town was startled by the sound of rapid firing in the neighborhood of the only two saloons now open in Williamstown.

It immediately developed that one man was dead and another seriously wounded in consequence of the bloody affray. The dead man turned out to be clever Ed Garnett, the mulatto hostler at Stroud's livery stable, and one of the best known colored men in town, while the wounded one is a Falmouth saloon keeper named John Reddy, who had come over to Williamstown only that forenoon in company with another young man named George Woodhead. They appeared to know Garnett, or at least one of them did, and is said to have invited him into John Perry's saloon to take a drink.

Some trouble arose before they had actually taken the drink, and it is said that Reddy displayed a pistol and remarked to Garnett, "I would just as soon kill you as not," but made no attempt to do him any harm. Garnett left, and it is supposed procured a pistol, and returned to the saloon soon after. The two white men were there and the trouble was renewed. This time it is said, Reddy struck Garnett in the face with his fist, and snatching up a beer bottle broke it over Garnett's head.

At this juncture Garnett drew his pistol and opened fire on Reddy who fell to the floor with a severe wound in the face. Garnett fired again at the prostrate man, when some one, said to be Woodhead, shot him, and he fell to the floor never to rise again. His body was carried outside and laid on the pavement. Afterwards it was taken to the home of Bob Jones, from whence it was buried Friday. Reddy was taken to the office of Dr. Menefee, where his wound was dressed and found to be less serious than was at first supposed.

He and Woodhead were taken into custody and later appeared before Judge Conrad, and through their attorney, Capt. A. G. DeJarnette, waived examination and were held to appear at the next team of the Grant Circuit court to answer any indictments that may be returned against them.

The bond of Reddy was fixed at $3,000, which he gave, with E. D. Reddy, John Dunn, R. H. Elliston and J. R. Donahoe as sureties. That of Woodhead was fixed at $5,000, and was signed by Joseph Woodhead, Elizabeth Woodhead, John Woodhead, Ella Woodhead and E. D. Reddy, and they were released and returned to Falmouth.

It has long been known that a man is not at his best for hard mental work directly after a hearty meal, but the real dangers of work under such conditions are perhaps not only in the arteries of the body but also, in all probability, in those of the brain and this makes it easy for a weakened point to give way.

We recently have had a striking instance of death from apoplexy occurring in a prominent physician while making an after-dinner speech and the notable death of William Windom, a few years ago, under similar circumstances will be remembered; and still other cases might be mentioned. The danger from this cause has not been recognized, but when we remember that these public banquets involve a pretty hard indigestion of food and a consequent rise of blood presence, it need not be wondered at that sudden deaths from "apoplexy" during afterdinner speeches are often recorded.

Apoplexy is a well known possibility of mental strain; the weak point may be unknown to the subject himself and not revealed by any objective symptoms. The individual may have passed a life insurance examination successfully only a short time before, as is reported to have been the case with the physician referred to, but the special stress becomes too strong for some point of weakness, and the result is fatal. It is not work, whether mental or physical, that kills. Intellectual workers, as a rule, are among the longer lived, but special stress under certain circumstances, such as posteonvivial occasions, when the normal tendency to rise of blood pressure in the peripheral circulation is most marked, may be disastrous.—Journal of American Medical Association.

Notice.—In order to insure my customers absolute safety from any of the contagious diseases now circulating, I have had Dr. Rouse to fumigate my barber shop. This process kills every living germ therein. Those coming to town and fearing exposure to disease will do well to come to my shop and have their clothing saturated with Fragrine, the well known germ killer. For the good of humanity I will apply Fragrine to all who call, absolutely free of charge.

People are a comin' and a goin' just about the same. And, by the way, the real danger of contracting the smallpox in Burlington is over, as upon the first indisposition of a person here, he or she goes home and stays to await developments.

Remember that there will be a county Democratic mass convention held in Burlington on the 23d day of next month for the purpose of selecting delegates to the Congressional District convention which will meet in Newport on April 27th to nominate a Democratic candidate for Congress.

It is intended to prevent the accidental shooting of quails by persons who are hunting rabbits.

Colds Are Dangerous.

How often you hear it remarked: "It's only a cold," and a few days later learn that the man is on his back with pneumonia. It always cures and is pleasant to take. For sale by all druggists.

We call attention of our readers to the opening of Harris Fitch, at Lawrenceburg, Ind., who conducts perhaps the best hardware and implement store in Southern Indiana. Those who have witnessed the display of implements at Lawrenceburg Fair for several years do not need to be told what this opening means. There is no establishment in Cincinnati that carries such a variety of goods for farming purposes.

There seems to be a great deal of misunderstanding about the new law making the school term 6 months instead of five. Some are under the impression that teachers will only get the same for teaching six months as they have been getting for five months, but that is a mistake. It is true that taxes were not increased to pay for another month, but it is done by changing the present apportionment of the sheriff's revenue; the school fund has been 22 cents but now it is 26½, 3 cents were taken from the Sinking Fund, and 1½ cents from the General Expenditure Fund and added to the School Fund. A calculation will show this to provide more than money enough for one month's school. With a little effort on the part of a district a seven month's term can be had.

Three suits each were filed in the Boone County Court, last Friday, against the Boone County Deposit Bank, and the Walton Depost Bank by Frank A. Lucas, of Paducah, Auditor's Agent from the State-at-Large, to collect back taxes alleged to be on individual deposits which the depositors failed to list with the assessor for taxation. Three suits are filed against each bank in order to cover each phase of the case. These suits will be filed against all the deposit banks and trust companies in the State. So far the bankers throughout the State are not in the least alarmed over the matter. If there should be a recovery against the two Boone county banks, they would each have in the neighborhood of $3,000 to pay as back taxes on deposits. The suits go back five years.

Florence, Ky.

The family of James Slayback, who lives one mile out on the Bellevue 'pike, had to be taken out of thier house in a wagon yesterday as the creek had surrounded it and threatened to carry it away.

Considerable excitement was created in Burlington, last Saturday afternoon, when the doctors announced that William Wilson, utility man for the Boone County Telephone Co., had smallpox. When he was taken sick, Dr. Rouse was called to see him and thought he was taking gripp. In a few days an eruption appeared on his face, and then it was thought he was taking chickenpox of which there had been several cases in town during the winter. As the pox developed the doctor suspected that he had a case of smallpox on his hands, and having never seen a case of the disease, he informed County Judge Cason, and requested that a physician who had had experience treating that contagion be called to see Wilson. Judge Cason at once telephoned to Dr. Ranshaw, the Covington Health officer, who came out Saturday afternoon and pronounced Wilson's a genuine case of smallpox. Most of the citizens at once took issue with the doctors and at one time that evening it looked like an indignation would be held to give expression of the disapproval of the doctors' opinion and the action of the county judge in sending for the Covington health officer. Some who took a dispassionate view of the situation, said the proper steps had been taken—that the disease was contagious and ought to be stamped out, whether it was smallpox or not. Wilson was quarantined as was also his brother, Charles, who has the same disease. Yellow flags were hung out to mark the location of the patients. The excitement that resulted Saturkay afternoon when the disease was pronounced smallpox has about subsided, but as Robert Wilson the brother of Will and Charlie, and the person who first had the disease was about town several days while broken out, it is feared that other cases may develop. He is quarantined along with his brother Will. Among those who did not believe the disease was smallpox, but indorsed the action that had been taken to stamp it out, was county clerk Adams, who saw numerous cases of smallpox while he was in the army during the civil war. Sunday morning he went to Will Wilson's and called him to the window, and one glance satisfied him, and he says it is a genuine case of smallpox or he never saw one. O. J. Ryle, another old Confederate soldier, who saw hundreds of cases while he was a prisoner of war, took a look at the patientt through a window, and does not hesitate to say that he has smallpox if he ever saw a case.

Robt. Wilson, jr., who it is said was the first to have the smallpox, declares that he has been away from home but once this winter, and then he drove a friend to Ludlow and returned without getting out of his buggy, so from whence the disease came no one knows.

When Robert Wilson, jr., broke out he was working for W. T. Davis near Limaburg. He came to his father's here in Burlington, where he remained until his father and family moved to the toll gate near Hebron. William Hedges and family moved into the house which was vacated by Mr. Wilson in Burlington and he and his wife and son are somewhat uneasy, although they have occupied the house about 18 days and have shown no signs of contracting the disease.

After moving to the toll gate near Hebron Robert Wilson, sr., and family had what was supposed to be chickenpox. When Harrison Clore, owner of the turnpike was informed, last Sunday, that the disease had been pronounced smallpox he ordered the toll-gate thrown open, and directed the members of the family to keep away from the gate. Mr. Clore took this action on his own motion, and did it without grumbling.

A great many are being vaccinated, and there is no necessity for any excitement.

The Witness of the Face

HOW THE COUNTENANCE OF THE CHRISTIAN SHOULD SPEAK OF THE CHRIST.

Sermon by the "Highway and Byway" Preacher.

(Copyright, 1904, by J. M. Edson.)

Chicago, Sunday March 20, 1904.

Text:—"And all that sat in the council, fastening their eyes on him, saw his face as it had been the face of an angel."—Acts 6:15.

HERE are three references in the Bible to the illumination with a supernatural glory of the faces of men—Moses after his communion with God on the top of Mount Sinai; Jesus on the Mount of Transfiguration, and Stephen before the Jewish council. And of the three incidents the last is perhaps the most striking and suggestive for the Christian. Moses and Jesus withdrew from the active scenes of life and upon a mountain top felt the touch of the radiant glory and the presence of God, while Stephen in the midst of that hostile Jewish council, with lying witnesses accusing him and the angry multitude surging about him, was transfigured before them, and they beheld his "face as it had been the face of an angel." It is not strange that Moses' face should shine with a supernatural light and glory after he had talked "face to face" with God. That Jesus should have been transfigured, so that "His face did shine as the sun, and His garments became white as the light," is but in perfect harmony with the place and the occasion, and the communion with the Heavenly visitors. On the mountain top with God beholding His perfect righteousness and receiving His holy law; on the mountain top with the three loyal disciples, and the gates of Heaven swinging open, and Moses and Elijah stepping forth into their midst, and God's voice declaring: "This is My beloved Son, hear ye Him!" It but makes the story complete to say that Moses' face shone, and that Jesus was transfigured before them. But with Stephen, how different? No mountain top, but a judgment hall. No quiet communion with God in which the soul could mount up and up in its sweet, ecstatic joy, but the angry cries of the surging multitude, the voices of the accusing witnesses and the condemnation of the judges. And yet Stephen's face shone. There was a peace and joy and glory withal, which illuminated his features with a glow which was angelic and Heavenly.

STEPHEN'S shining face—the love light gleaming in the eye, a reflection of the Divine love; the placid brow; the strong but tender lines about the mouth; the Heavenly smile playing on his face and yet not weakening but rather intensifying the earnest, longing look with which he beheld those about him; all this was not dependent upon outward conditions, but was the outshining of the inward presence of his Lord. His face a witness to the condition within; an index to his character, a corroboration of the testimony of his lips. To Stephen in this remarkable degree was given the outshining presence of the Holy Spirit, and it may be the possession of every Christian—in lesser degree, perhaps, and yet the same indwelling presence of the Lord to light up the face and make it shine for Him. One great trouble with the Christian generally is that he is largely influenced and affected by his surroundings. Like the chameleon, he takes on and reflects the hue of his place and condition. If it is dark and forbidding, the face instantly reflects the somber hues. If it is stormy, and difficulties lie in the pathway, then is the face distorted with the frown which is the outward expression of the disquiet within. If danger threatens it stamps its terror upon the brow. If disappointment and privation come the countenance quickly reveals how deep have been the wounds. And so, unless everything is serene and lovely, the surroundings pleasant and safe, and the desires and needs satisfied, the face reveals the inward unrest and discontent. The witness of the face is dishonoring to God and sadly contradictory of the Christian faith and profession. Like Moses we may withdraw to the mountain top of communion with God and our countenances reflect the glory of the presence of our Lord, but none the less should the face shine with Divine and Heavenly light in the difficult and trying places, even as in the case of Stephen. The mirror can only reflect the objects in front of it. It is not able to reveal those behind it. The Christian is not a mirror only to reflect the conditions and circumstances which surround him, but he is a transparency through which his Lord may shine out into the most forbidding and untoward conditions.

THE LORD is skilled in transforming faces. He is able to take the most ordinary, yea, even homely, countenance, and make it lovely with the reflected light of Heaven. Scripture does not tell us what kind of a looking man Stephen was. As we think of him with his face transfigured with the glorious light of his risen Lord we are apt to picture him as a young man of great personal charm and manly beauty, a man with a strikingly handsome face that would attract attention anywhere. We do know from the testimony of Scripture that he possessed a most Christ-like character, was full of grace and the Holy Spirit, and he may have been a man of singular physical charm, with face and figure of an Apollo; but the more I try to imagine how Stephen looked the deeper does the impression become that he had many physical defects, not the least of which was his plain and ordinary, if not positively homely, countenance. And if such was the man Stephen, the illumination of his face by the flooding light and presence of the Holy Spirit would make it all the more striking and noticeable. It does not need a pretty face to become beautiful under the touch of the Divine hand. Time and time again have I seen faces which in themselves were positively homely and repugnant transformed and made beautiful by the light which shone out from the soul where the Christ had been enthroned. It was a beauty and charm which belonged not to the face, but to the life and character, and shone out through the face. You have seen it, too. You can recall faces which lacked every graceful line and curve, and yet faces which glowed with a radiance that spoke eloquently of the Christ-life behind the face.

"ALL THAT sat in the council, fastening their eyes on him, saw." Stephen was the observed of all observers. Upon him were focused the multitude of eyes of that large and dignified and learned company. They were searching for the sign of fear, confusion, trouble, doubt, retreat, but instead, they saw the lights of Heaven playing over his features and making it glow with a supernatural radiance. And as that council searched the face of Stephen, so is the world searching the countenances of the followers of Christ. What does it see there? Does it see the light which reminds of Christ and Heaven? or does it behold the shadow cross the countenance, does it see the frown knit the brow, does it witness the angry flash, or the disagreeable, unkindly sneer; what is it the world sees? What witness is your face bearing for the Master? It is not pleasant to be looked at, as was Stephen, but the scrutiny of the world is upon the Christian even as that of the council was upon Stephen. The Christian cannot escape it. Because the Christian makes professions which place him in a class distinct and separate from the world, the world is eager to watch and see if there is any real difference. It watches the face, for through the face it largely reads the character, and may guess the conduct from the lines and expressions which mark the face. What think you is the judgment of the world when it sees a gloomy Christian? Will such visage attract and be a good indorsement of the religion which the individual behind the face professes? Will it make the world long for the same kind of religion? Nay, verily, the world will turn from such with the sneer of disgust and say: "If religion stamps the face in that way, none of it for me."

AND in contrast to the gloomy Christian there is the careless, frivolous Christian, the Christian who is glad to feel safe in Jesus and yet who thinks only of having a good time generally; perhaps not indulging in any positive sins, but nevertheless only seeking and caring for the superficialities of life, living on the surface. The character of such a person is written upon the face. The expression of the eye; the selfish, sensual, weak lines about the mouth; and the curl of the lips which are ever busy framing careless, light speech and never know the wholesomeness of grave and reverent conversation; all these things in the face betray the person behind the face. And when the world sees such a face, what is its verdict? Is that face witnessing for the Lord it professes to love and serve? Is the world able to read there the Christ expression? Is it made to think of angels and Heavenly things? Ah, Christian, with perishing souls all about you, with sin performing its awful work of death on every hand, how dare you bear such witness with the face which should shine for your Lord? Let God work a deep work in your heart and your face will begin to light up with that radiance which comes from knowing Jesus and having Him as an indwelling presence in your heart.

THE face of the Christian should be a benediction, a sermon to those who look thereon. I remember hearing a man who was not a Christian say of a certain person whom he passed frequently upon the street in his neighborhood: "I knew she was a Christian by the expression upon her face." In Longfellow's Evangeline the poet pictures her in the closing years of her life, after the tragedy of her young womanhood and her long, fruitless search for the loved one from whose side she had been torn, as giving her life in sweet, Christ-like service to others, and then goes on to tell how—

"The dying
Looked up into her face, and thought, indeed, to behold there
Gleams of celestial light encircle her forehead with splendor,
Such as the artist paints o'er the brows of saints and apostles,
Or such as hangs by night o'er a city seen at a distance.
Unto their eyes it seemed the lamps of the city celestial,
Into whose shining gates ere long their spirits would enter."

Thus should the Christian's face speak of its Lord, and of the joy and peace and comfort of Heaven. The witness of the face is sure. If it be not of the Christ which is possessor of the heart and the inspiration of the life, it will speak of the other things which rule in the life.

RUSKIN speaks in his "Modern Painters" of "features seamed by sickness, dimmed by sensuality, convulsed by passion, pinched by poverty, shadowed by sorrow, branded with remorse; bodies consumed with sloth, broken down by labor, tortured by disease, dishonored in foul uses; intellects without power, hearts without hope, minds earthly and devilish; our bones full of the sin of our youth, the Heaven revealing our iniquity, the earth rising up against us, the roots dried up beneath and the branches cut off above; well for us only, if, after beholding this our natural face in a glass, we desire not straightway to forget what manner of men we be." So surely does the face bear the marks of the life. We cannot escape it. We may attempt to mask the real self behind a pleasant exterior, but the real self flashes out unawares and betrays the actor. I have studied faces which were handsome and which lit up with an attractive light. But as the first impressions faded away the real self began to stand out upon the face and I could trace here and there lines which I knew meant there was something in that life-heart which was dishonoring to God and harmful to the life. A little child not having learned to mask the face and hide behind it the evil in the heart and life can be clearly read.

THE face then more or less surely witnesses as to the life and character of the person behind the face. And the Christian's face above all others should be in harmony with the profession. A face lighted up with the radiance of the indwelling Christ is a recommendation, an indorsement, of the Gospel which is well-nigh irresistible. Saul was among those who beheld the face of Stephen as it had been the face of an angel. How much do you suppose his conversion was due to the light which he saw radiating from the face of that brave disciple that day? Much, I believe. I do not believe he ever forgot that face. I do not believe, sleeping or waking, he could shake off the consciousness that behind that man Stephen was the shining presence of the One he preached as the Christ, the Savior of men. That wonderful face and that startling climax which came when the eyes of Stephen penetrated to the very heart of Heaven and he declared that he saw "the Son of Man standing on the right hand of God!" Saul saw the shining face, and could not help connecting it with the vision which Stephen had. Christ in Heaven the source of the light which shone from his uplifted face. Day and night, I believe, Saul pondered over these two things—the face and the vision—until at last on that eventful day near Damascus the full light of Christ's presence, of which on Stephen's face he had seen a reflection, burst in upon his soul and overwhelmed him. It takes the shining face to indorse the testimony for Christ.

DO YOU know I somehow feel that Jesus' command, "Let your light shine before men, that they may see your good works and glorify your Father who is in Heaven," has a deeper significance and meaning than we give it. We put all the stress upon the works, upon the actions and deeds of the body and the words of the lips, and forget all about letting the face shine for Jesus in full and blessed and reinforcing harmony with the works. I have seen Christians performing kindly works of ministry in the name of the Master—I have done it myself, again and again, God forgive me!—whose faces had the seven shades of gloom stamped upon them. Some people think to be religious and perform religious duties one must assume a sad and sanctimonious expression which would almost chill a corpse. Letting our light shine means more than doing and speaking, it means an illuminated face—a countenance whose light and expression tell of the Christ for whose sake and in whose name the deed is wrought or the testimony is given. "Arise, shine; for thy light is come, and the glory of Jehovah is risen upon thee." Arise! Let no longer the darkening self shade the face, but arise and shine for thy light is come! The witness of the face of the Christian should always be of that light which has shined into his heart. Shine, because Jesus is in the heart! Shine because it is your privilege and your duty to do so. Shine, because the world is watching you. Shine with beaming face, that the world may be attracted to the One who can transform the life and put a song in the mouth and a new light in the face. And remember, Christian, that perhaps the reason your face is not lit up with Heavenly light is because the joy of the fullness of the presence of the Christ is not felt within. Go back a few verses in the story of Stephen and you will learn the secret of his shining face. He was full of faith and the Holy Ghost, and grace and power, and he wrought mightily for his Lord. And if you would have your face shine you must have the same presence within. That which is within a man is what shines out of a man. You may be able to perform Christian duty without faith and the Holy Ghost. You may be able to speak the Gospel message without faith or the Spirit's prompting, but you cannot illuminate your face with the radiance of the Christ unless He is within and faith is claiming all the richness of His fellowship. That lamp cannot give forth light unless the flame is within, and you cannot witness for Christ by the radiance of your face unless the Christ is within to illuminate it withal. Let us then seek the filling of the Spirit that the witness of the face may be for the Christ whose we are and whom we serve.

LIONS GO DEER HUNTING.

Big California Cats Kill More of the Timid Animals Than All the Hunters.

More deer are killed every year in California by the mountain lions than by the bullets of the hunters, states the Los Angeles Times.

Next to the jaguar, our mountain lion is the largest cat in the two Americas, and he is the champion deer slayer of the world. Within 30 or 40 miles of Los Angeles he catches the fleet-footed, graceful creatures and waxes fat on the sweet flesh. He knows no deer season other than all the time.

Wherever there is good deer country in this or any other southwestern state, there, also, is the best place for lions, and that is one of the reasons why the large herds of deer are restless, seldom staying long in one locality. There is nothing that they fear more than the sight or smell of a mountain lion. Not even the sudden appearance of a hunter will so quickly drive them away from a range of hills.

The lion's method of hunting the deer is not unlike that of the big cats of Africa and India in pursuit of the antelope and deer of those countries. Having found a spring or pool where the desired game comes to water at nightfall, the lion selects an overhanging limb or ledge of rock, whence one leap will carry him to the back or throat of his prey, and thereon lays himself out in perfect accord with the limb itself. In the gathering dusk the imperfect eye of the deer has little chance against this hidden terror, and the wind, usually his faithful ally, can help him none now, for the lion is far and away too old a campaigner not to lie up wind from the spring.

The deer comes; one leap from the limb or ledge, and the sharp teeth and powerful paws soon break the tender neck; and don't you believe it when anyone tells you that a California lion can't carry away a deer. The writer has followed the plain, broad trail of the heavy pads for over half a mile, and then come suddenly on the place where the killer had stopped to rest. There in plain outline was the imprint of the deer's body; but for that whole distance the lion had carried it well up and clear of the ground. Such "portages" are not infrequent in the career of a hunting lion, as these animals never eat their game where they kill it. Sometimes they hunt in pairs, but in six or eight years spent in the hills, the writer has seen but one such hunting pair.

Like the rest of the cats the world over, the mountain lion's mainstay in hunting is patience. He will wait for hours on a narrow limb or on a rocky ledge in the coldest night rather than get out like a coyote and scour the slopes for his supper; with feet as noiseless as an owl's wing, he will follow an unsuspecting rabbit or belated spike buck until a favorable opportunity for a leap presents, and then it is generally "all day" for the hunted. But of all things the lion loves deer meat, and, while he will dare a great many dangers for young pig, his liking for deer is even greater than that.

AN OBJECTIONABLE TERM.

His Wife Was Particular as to His Manner of Referring to Her, Then She Found Out.

"I always hate," said the lady who was twirling her glasses, "to hear a man refer to the lady whom he has wooed and won as 'my wife.' 'My wife,' indeed! Pouf! In the next breath he speaks of 'my horse' or 'my dog.' I'd like to have such a man for a husband a little while. I think I could teach him a few lessons that would be good for him. When a man has occasion to refer to the lady who lowered herself by accepting his ring at the altar, he should speak of her as 'Mrs. So. and So' or 'Mrs. Jones,' as the case may be. I'd like to hear my husband mention me as his wife! I think he would limit himself to just that once!"

"And yet," said the little lady with the rather timid manner, "it seems to me that a man might do worse than speak of her as 'his wife.' When your husband was over at our house the night before last, Mrs. Frithington, he and my husband played ping-pong, and I happened to be in an adjoining room for a few minutes, where I could overhear their conversation. I thought it sounded awfully nice when Henry spoke of me as 'his wife.'"

"Well, of course, some women are so constituted that they prefer to be regarded as inferior beings, and where a case of that kind exists it may be just as well that the husband does take it for granted that he is her proprietor. But you didn't hear John Frithington refer to me as 'his wife,' I'll venture."

"No; when he spoke of you he merely called you 'the old woman.'"

Some of John Frithington's friends seem to think that his wild, hunted look is of late more in evidence than usual.

Typical English Girl.

Richard Le Gallienne has no great love for the typical English girl. In his picturesque, vivid way he described her one night at the Lambs' club, in New York. Finally he said:

"I was walking down an English lane with an English girl on an August afternoon. The sun shone through a soft haze, and in the green fields many white lambs played.

"'Is it any wonder,' I said, 'that poets from time immemorial have made the lamb the emblem of innocence?'

"The young girl smiled radiantly. 'Lambs,' she said, 'are, indeed, delightful animals, especially with mint sauce.'"—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Miss Nettie Blackmore, Minneapolis, tells how any young woman may be permanently cured of monthly pains by taking

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"YOUNG WOMEN:—I had frequent headaches of a severe nature, dark spots before my eyes, and at my menstrual periods I suffered untold agony. A member of the lodge advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, but I only scorned good advice and felt that my case was hopeless, but she kept at me until I bought a bottle and started taking it. I soon had the best reason in the world to change my opinion of the medicine, as each day my health improved, and finally I was entirely without pain at my menstruation periods. I am most grateful."—NETTIE BLACKMORE, 28 Central Ave., Minneapolis, Minn.

Painful Periods

are quickly and permanently overcome by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. The above letter is only one of hundreds of thousands which prove this statement to be a fact. Menstruation is a severe strain on a woman's vitality,—if it is painful something is wrong. Don't take narcotics to deaden the pain, but remove the cause—perhaps it is caused by irregularity or womb displacements, or the development of a tumor. Whatever it is, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is guaranteed to cure it.

If there is anything about your case about which you would like special advice, write freely to Mrs. Pinkham. She will treat your letter as strictly confidential. She can surely help you, for no person in America can speak from a wider experience in treating female ills. She has helped hundreds of thousands of women back to health. Her address is Lynn, Mass., and her advice is free. You are very foolish if you do not accept her kind invitation.

Details of Another Case.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Ignorance and carelessness is the cause of most of the sufferings of women. I believe that if we properly understood the laws of health we would all be well, but if the sick women only knew the truth about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, they would be saved much suffering and would soon be cured.

"I used it for five months for a local difficulty which had troubled me for years, and for which I had spent hundreds of dollars in the vain endeavor to rectify. My life forces were being sapped, and I was daily losing my vitality.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cured me completely, and I am now enjoying the best of health, and am most grateful, and only too pleased to endorse such a great remedy."—MISS JENNIE I. EDWARDS, 604 H St., N. W., Washington, D. C.

Mrs. Pinkham, whose address is Lynn, Mass., will answer cheerfully and without cost all letters addressed to her by sick women.

WESTERN CANADA HAS AN EXCELLENT CLIMATE.

The Saskatchewan Valley Very Highly Favored.

An interesting feature of Western Canada is its climate. Those who have made a study of it speak highly of it. The Canadian Government Agents are sending out an Atlas, and at the same time, giving valuable information concerning railway rates, etc., to those interested in the country. As has been said, the climate is excellent. The elevation of this part of Canada is about 1,800 feet above the sea, about twice that of the average for Minnesota. It is a very desirable altitude. The country has a very equable climate, taking the seasons through. The winters are bright and the summers are pleasantly warm. R. F. Stupart, director of the meteorological service for Canada, says:

"The salient features of the climate "of the Canadian northwest territories "are a clear, bracing atmosphere during the greater part of the year, and "a medium rainfall and snowfall. The "mean temperature for July at Winnipeg is 66, and Prince Albert 62. The "former temperature is higher than at "any part of England, and the latter "is very similar to that found in many "parts of the southern countries."

At Prince Albert the average daily maximum in July is 76 and the minimum 48. Owing to this high day temperature with much sunshine, the crops come to maturity quickly.

Moisture is ample in the Saskatchewan valley, being about 18 inches annually. It is notable that about 75 per cent. of the moisture falls during the crop months. Thus, Western Canada gets as much moisture when it is needed and with several hours more sunshine daily than land further south gets during the growing season, it is not difficult to understand why crops mature quickly and yield bountifully.

Winter ends quickly, sowing is done during April and sometimes in March. Harvest comes in August, about the middle. Cyclones, blizzards, dust and sand storms are unknown.

SHE SOWED LIVER PILLS.

But It Is Not at All Likely That She Waited for Them to Take Root.

There is a woman in Phoenix, Ariz., who has the correct idea all right, but, whether it will work out remains for the future to disclose, states the Republican of that town.

Recently her husband bought a small ranch, and with him she has been much interested in planning improvements, especially in the growing line, with which to adorn the place.

The other day beds were prepared for sweet peas, and the lady of the house was busily engaged in assorting her seeds and carrying the little packets out of doors, where their contents were transferred to the beds in regular order. As each variety was planted, the name was placed on a small marker, as is the custom with gardeners.

In a particularly choice location the contents of a packet were laboriously dropped, one by one, until the row was filled and the earth nicely smoothed over it. When the lady picked up the packet to properly write the marker she discovered that she had carefully planted her mother's package of liver pills.

For Growing Girls.

West Pembroke, Me., March 21.—Mrs. A. L. Smith, of this place, says that Dodd's Kidney Pills are the best remedy for growing girls. Mrs. Smith emphasizes her recommendation by the following experience:

"My daughter was thirteen years old last November and it is now two years since she was first taken with Crazy Spells that would last a week and would then pass off. In a month she would have the spells again. At these times she would cat very little and was very yellow, even the whites of her eyes would be yellow.

"The doctors gave us no encouragement, they all said they could not help her. After taking one box of Dodd's Kidney Pills, she has not had one bad spell. Of course, we continued the treatment until she had used in all about a dozen boxes, and we still give them to her occasionally, when she is not feeling well. Dodd's Kidney Pills are certainly the best medicine for growing girls."

Mothers should heed the advice of Mrs. Smith, for by so doing they may save their daughters much pain and sickness and ensure a healthy happy future for them.

TELLING AGES OF CATTLE.

It Can Be Done with Almost Absolute Exactness by the Teeth of Domestic Animals.

One of the great sensations of this year's international was the turning down of a pen of 15 head of Aberdeen-Angus steers, two years old and under three, by the official veterinarian. A protest had been filed against this grand lot of cattle and was based upon the allegation that they were over age. To settle the matter the official veterinarian, acting for the exposition management, examined the mouths of seven head of the lot of 15 cattle, and made his report to the effect that two of the eight were over three years old. This decision sustained the protest and threw the pen of cattle out of the competition, thus preventing them from winning the grand championship of the show, to which they would otherwise have been entitled.

This is a most unfortunate occurrence, but the veterinarian could pursue no other course in the matter, as he found two of the animals clearly four years old. Even where but six broad permanent teeth are seen the animal may be considered 42 months old, if all the teeth are fully through and in wear. "Six-tooth" cattle are, however, given the benefit of the doubt by veterinarians, as there is some evidence to show that forcing may induce slight precocity in the cutting of teeth. Great discrepancies, however, cannot possibly be caused by an manner of feeding or kind of environment so that a full-mouthed steer cannot on any pretext be considered possibly within the specified age limit allowed for show animals in the class in question.

The illustrations accompanying this statement are taken from Kuidekoper's "Age of Domestic Animals" and will make the subject clear to stockmen.

The age given under each cut is an average one, taking everything into consideration, and every reader will find them corroborated if he will go to the trouble of examining the mouths of cattle of which he knows the age perfectly.

At last year's show a similar protest was filed against a fine lot of cattle shown in class for steers two years old and under three, but was not sustained, as no animal was found to show more than six broad permanent incisors.

We trust that stockmen generally and cattle exhibitors in particular will study the accompanying illustrations carefully and make their exhibits conform to them at future shows. Action to this effect may be taken by the management showing dentition departures from standard types will not be eligible to exhibition. It would be well in the premises for exhibitors to make themselves familiar with the subject and see to it that their animals intended for showing have teeth corroborating statements made relative to dates of birth. Many desire to have it believed that forcing materially effects dentition and changes the normal appearance of the mouth, indicating age, but it may be regarded as certain that no full-mouthed steer will be allowed to compete in classes for cattle three years old at future meetings of the International.—Farmers' Review.

Treating Seed Potatoes.

Recent investigations made at the Ohio experiment station show that a disease, heretofore but partially recognized, injures potato tops severely at times. This is the potato rosette, and this disease appears to be general. Seed treatment in 1903 has increased the yield where the disease prevailed from 25 to 125 per cent. on a light crop. Bulletin 145, just published, gives the second series of results in treating for this trouble. Formalin at the rate of one pint in 30 gallons of water, is the solution used. Immerse the seed potatoes in this for two hours, after which the tubers may be dried and cut for planting. This bulletin will be sent to all citizens of the state who may apply for it.—Ohio Experiment Station, Wooster, O.

FARMING IS A PROFESSION.

No Other Calling Offers as Many Inducements to Bright Young Men as Agriculture.

If we note the graduating classes in our higher institutions of learning, we will find plenty of young men preparing to enter the so-called professions, but comparatively few fitting themselves by study and mental discipline for the profession of farming.

A small portion of these will, by reason of energy and ability and fortunate combination of circumstances, become eminent and perhaps wealthy, but a large proportion will be called upon to do the drudgery of their profession, and after striving for years will find themselves with less money and less influence than they would have had in some less attractive, but more useful occupation.

And the sad thought about this matter is the fact that many of these young men left good farms, where a life of enjoyment and healthfulness could have been followed without a fraction of the annoyance and worry that have come to them in the profession they have followed. They saw only the bright side of the life they selected and recognized only the dark side of the farm life.

It would be well for the young men and well for the state if in the future there can be more young men attracted to the profession of farming. We say profession for the reason that the knowledge now required to farm successfully is worthy the name profession.

One of the most serious obstacles in the way of such action on the part of farmers' sons in the past has been the indifference and in some instances the antagonism of the so-called agricultural colleges to such a course.

If the managers of these institutions would realize the fact, as some of them are already doing, that the prime object in establishing these institutions was to aid agriculture, and that the greatest possible aid they can render agriculture is to graduate men fully equipped to conduct it intelligently and according to the latest scientific methods, there would be greater demand for agricultural education.

There is a difference in results between a policy on the part of an institution that attracts young men to agriculture and a policy that drives them away from it.

No occupation or profession to-day offers the inducements to young men of energy and brains as agriculture, whether it is considered from the standpoint of the agricultural scientist imparting information or from the standpoint of the practical farmer applying that information.

The tendency is toward the profession of farming and the more that can be done, to strengthen the tendency in that direction the better it will be for the young men seeking a profession, for agriculture and the state at large. —Mirror and Farmer.

VALUABLE PASTURE GRASS.

The Brome Grass Withstands Either Drought or Excessive Moisture and Matures Quite Early.

In discussing the question of grasses before the Maine State Dairy association, Prof. Hurd said: "The following good qualities possessed by the brome grass make it one of the most promising grasses, especially for pasture lands. It can endure almost any degree of cold, and can stand a high temperature during the summer months. It withstands well either drought or excessive moisture. It matures early, ripens soon after it heads, and live stock relish it more than any of the grasses, with perhaps the exception of orchard grass. Its feeding value equals that of timothy. Some fault has been found with its tendency to tiller, but the tendency to thicken at the base retards its growth, but that seems an advantage. Its real value is in pasture rather than hay. It stands close grazing, is ready earlier than others, furnishes late pasture and is worthy of strong endorsement. Its chief drawback is the high price of seed, which is sown at the rate of 15 pounds to the acre. A small quantity brought to maturity can be grown for seed, and will in a measure overcome this difficulty.

A PECULIAR CLAIM.

Youth Frightened by Strange Light in a Colliery and Owners Are Sued for Damages.

One of the most remarkable claims under the workmen's compensation act has been heard at the Tredegar county court, the judge reserving his decision.

Frederick George Shellard, a lad aged 14 years, was in the employ of the Powells Tillery Steam Coal Collieries company in May last. He was a pit boy, earning ten shillings a week as an assistant to his father, a collier. On one occasion the father sent him to get what is known as a "stick."

Amid the gloom and loneliness of the colliery the lad says that he suddenly felt something brush past him and he was confronted by two glaring eyes. This greatly terrified the lad, for most miners are exceedingly superstitious. He cried out to his father to come and help him, and was so overcome by what he regarded as an apparition that he had to be taken home.

The judge suggested that the eyes were those of a cat, but the solicitor for the lad did not readily assent to this explanation.

Three days afterward the father took the boy again to the colliery, with a view to convincing him that there was nothing to alarm him. So great was the shock, however, that the boy has not been able to work underground since. The medical evidence showed that the lad now suffered from St. Vitus' dance, brought about by fright.

Compensation was claimed at the rate of 6s 3d a week, but the company repudiated liability.

MAGAZINE FOR THE INSANE

Employe of Kansas Institution Begins Publication of Organ for Benefit of Inmates.

A magazine for insane patients of Kansas in the state asylum at Topeka, has been founded by Clarence E. Chase, a man who has spent a large part of his life as an asylum employe. This magazine is called the Crank. The editor is an artist and somewhat of a poet, and the publication contains only matter written or drawn by him. The magazine has this to say in its own defense:

"The Crank is the organ of the poor, the discouraged, the misunderstood everywhere. It is designed especially for the patients of the Topeka state hospital, but we hope it will interest, instruct and amuse others. As the crank is the medium between the power and its object so our Crank is the connecting link between the public power and its objects of charity."

Mr. Chase always signs his name "Azazel." The articles in the Crank are all written by Mr. Chase, and like his poems, are nearly all connected with the state hospital and its inmates.

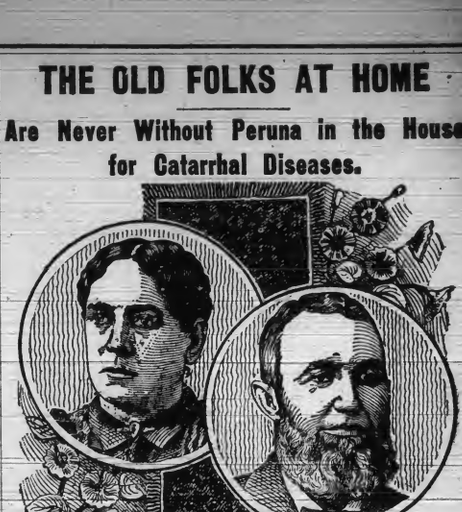
BIRD SINGS NATIONAL AIR.

Canary in Great Britain Famous for Rendering of "Life on the Ocean Wave."

A British tradesman has an eight-months-old canary that sings "A Life on the Ocean Wave." He values it at £50.

The bird is famous for miles round, and is in the habit of performing before large audiences in local hostels.

Its ancestors back to its great-grandfather were equally famous. Its great-grandfather sang the same song, and lived for 17 years.



The present songster, therefore, has become perfected through four generations of art. Having the inbred gift of song, he was trained with a small mouth organ. The owner is now teaching him another ditty.

THE OLD FOLKS AT HOME

Are Never Without Peruna in the House for Catarrhal Diseases.

MR. AND MRS. J. O. ATKINSON, INDEPENDENCE, MO.

UNDER date of January 10, 1897, Dr. Hartman received the following letter:

"My wife had been suffering from a complication of diseases for the past 25 years.

"Her case had baffled the skill of some of the most noted physicians. One of her worst troubles was chronic constipation of several years' standing.

"She also was passing through that most critical period in the life of a woman—change of life. In June, 1895, I wrote to you about her case. You advised a course of Peruna and Manalin, which we at once commenced, and have to say it completely cured her. She firmly believes that she would have been dead only for those wonderful remedies.

"About the same time I wrote you about my own case of catarrh, which had been of 25 years' standing. At times I was almost past going. I commenced to use Peruna according to your instructions and continued its use for about a year, and it has completely cured me.

"Your remedies do all that you claim for them, and even more. Catarrh cannot exist where Peruna is taken according to directions. Success to you and your remedies."

John O. Atkinson.

In a letter dated January 1, 1900, Mr. Atkinson says, after five years' experience with Peruna:

"I will ever continue to speak a good word for Peruna. In my rounds as a traveling man I am a walking advertisement for Peruna and have induced many people during the past year to use Peruna with the most satisfactory results. I am still cured of catarrh."

John O. Atkinson,
Box 272, Independence, Mo.

When old age comes on, catarrhal diseases come also. Systemic catarrh is almost universal in old people.

This explains why Peruna has become so indispensable to old people. Peruna is their safe-guard. Peruna is the only remedy yet devised that meets these cases exactly.

Such cases cannot be treated locally; nothing but an effective systemic remedy could cure them. This is exactly what Peruna is.

If you do not receive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

BEAVER.

Some time since it was announced in the Recorder that there would be a debate at Beaverlick between the Methodists and the Baptists as to the position of John Wesley and the Methodist standards on the Sacrament. Failing to hear from Bro. Earl, after repeated urging, the Methodist had concluded that he intended to ignore his agreement to meet the issue. Therefore Bro. Mills announced that he would preach a sermon along these lines on April 10th at Hughes' Chapel, whereupon Bro. Earl intimated that he would try to be ready in May. Accordingly, not wishing to do him an injustice, and wishing to give him a fair opportunity to prove the truthfulness of his statements the Methodists have decided to give the Brother more time to find his "representive man". Bro. Earl also now intimates as one reason why he has for so long a time ignored the many letters of Bro. Mills, urging that he meet the issue, was that he had been informed that the Methodist church was not backing their pastor in his demands for a debate and fair play. Now let all be assured that the Methodist are a unit in this matter, and their official board has unanimously decided that the matter must not rest.

Good manners at the table are almost an infallible evidence of refinement and careful breeding. A safe general rule to be followed there, as well as elsewhere is that of consideration for the feelings of those about you—a desire to avoid giving offense by uncouth or coarse actions. It is well, however, to remember the following timely precepts: Eat and drink leisurely and without noise—it is not appetizing to have the hog trough and its accompaniments brought vividly to mind at a meal; do not scrape your plate, tilt it up to get the last drop, or wipe dry with a piece of bread—stinginess on the part of host or hostess might be implied; if you mix messes on your plate, it looks as if your desire for hash had not been gratified; carrying your mouth to the food, instead of the food to your mouth, indicates an acquaintance with chop sticks or something worse; taking chicken and other bones in your fingers is uncouth, and might imply ignorance of the use of knives and forks; loud talking or mysterious whispered conversation are both in bad taste for obvious reasons; discussion of distempers, medical treatment, etc., is trenching on dangerous ground; avoid sneezing by pressing your finger against your upper lip, under the nose; keep your elbows at your sides and your hands in your lap when you are not eating, and do not lounge in any way or top back your chair. Many other points of etiquette must be learned by observation.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXIX. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 30, 1904. NO. 24

County Correspondence.

COMMISSARY.

March.—The world never stops for anybody to catch up.

James Beard and wife were guests of Richard Loudeu and wife last Sunday.

We are in receipt of three notes of inquiry as to Ani's telephone number. It is 8-1 2 green.

W. T. Ryle and wife spent last Sunday with their son-in law, Bernard Rogers and wife.

Ed Burress and Wm. Slayback will crop together again as last year, and are preparing to put out 9 acres of tobacco.

During her husband's absence, Mrs. Jesse Louden spent Saturday night and Sunday with her husband's father and mother.

Ira Ryle & Co., delivered their tobacco, at Petersburg last week, at 7 cents straight. Total number of lbs. 1,429; amount of sale $100 03.

The day is always too short or too long—too short for the busy man, and too long for the man who can't steal a chicken until the farmer goes to bed.

Jesse Louden spent last Saturday night with his brother-in-law, Elbert Kelly, and on Sunday the two called on Eddie Kelly and wife, who are now housekeeping.

T. J. Walton, W. B. Walton and Mrs. Julia Dinsmore, are the largest tobacco growers in this vicinity. The total number of pounds grown by them in 1903 is 45,457, and their total amount of sales, $3,177 63.

We are frequently asked if we see uncle Button Smith when at Burlington, and how he is getting along. For the latest and most reliable information regarding uncle Button, inquire of Charlie Snelling.

Flave Louden's tobacco weighed 4,877 lbs. Amount of sale $341 39. This with the crop of Jasper McGuyre brings the total number of pounds grown on the farm of W. B. Walton to 13,602 and total amount of sale to $896 34.

Mrs. Ed Burress went to her father's near Limaburg, last Sunday, for a week's visit, and, of course, Ed batched during her absence. It is not much trouble to fry meat and egge and make coffee. I made the hens hustle to keep him in eggs.

Asa Delph, who lived on Pete Clore's farm, divided tobacco with Pete. Asa sold his to Conner, of Burlington, at 6 cents straight—weight, 3,500; amount, $210. He delivered by way of Commissary, and as he returned stopped and left $1.50 for the RECORDER.

W. I. Rouse received a communication, last Tuesday, from the P. O. Department, stating that the agreement on proposed F. R. D. Route No. 1, from Burlington, has been received and approved, and placed on record. We believe when the department comes to it in the regular order of business, the route will be put in operation.

I noticed in a paper, a few days ago where some fellow, who is fonder of figures than we are, has been engaged in a lot of calculations from which he emerges with the announcement that the average man uses 11,800,000 words in a year. I suppose he means by that that the average man's tongue is twisted about 32,354 words every day; 1,344 every hour of the 24; 22 every minute, and one-third of a word every second, if you wish to follow the statistical idea to its smallest reduction. The calculation said noting about the number of words the average woman would use in the same length of time. The person who made the calculation evidently was not brave enough to risk the effect on the fair sex by announcing their word record for the same length of time, but I am willing to risk it. My estimate is this: The average woman's conversational powers are to the average man's as 3½ to 1, which allows her 71 or 72 words a minute, and I think this is about right. This includes sewing society gossip, spoontalk when the parlor light is low, talking while asleep, curtain lectures, and neighborly exchanges of repartee over the back fence.

READ IT THROUGH.

'Twould Spoil This Story to Tell It in the Headlines.

To use an eighteenth century phrase, this is an "o'er true tale. Having happened in a small Virginia town in the winter of 1902, it is a story very much of the present. Up to a short time ago Mrs. John E. Harmon, of Melfa Station, Va., had no personal knowledge of the rare curative properties of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. "Last January," she says, "my baby took a dreadful cold and at one time I feared she would have pneumonia, but one of my neighbors told me how this remedy had cured her little boy and I began giving it to my baby at once and it soon cured her. I heartily thank the manufacturers of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for placing so great a cure within my reach. I cannot recommend it too highly or say too much in its favor. I hope all who read this will try it and be convinced as I was." For Sale by All Druggists.

THE CHAMPION LOSES.

James Britt Given the Decision Over "Young Corbett."

He Was Heavily Punished, Yet Was at All Times Willing to Take More, and Finally Outgamed the Champion.

San Francisco, March 26.—James Britt, of California, was given the decision Friday night over William Rothwell, better known as Young Corbett, of Colorado, in a 20-round contest at Woodward's pavilion.

Up to the 17th round Corbett's advantage was apparent, but in that round Britt rallied and rained right and left blows on various portions of Corbett's anatomy, forcing the champion to clinch to save himself. The styles of the two boxers were entirely distinctive. Britt fought for the body most of the time, while Corbett devoted his attack for the head, face and jaw. Britt weighed just 129 pounds, but Corbett's weight was not made public, though it is understood was at least a pound and a half below the agreed weight, 130 pounds.

Both men fought hard in every round. Britt, in his crouching attitude, was able to guard his stomach effectively, though Corbett was able to land hard on his head and jaw. In the first few rounds Britt found the Denver man's stomach repeatedly, though his blows lacked steam.

It was without doubt the greatest fight fought in California. Britt's ability to assimilate punishment and his endurance were simply marvelous. At no time during the 20 rounds did Britt break ground. He always brought the fight to Corbett, who was breaking ground and clinching most of the time. Britt was heavily punished, yet was at all times willing to take more, and finally outgamed the champion. The pace that both men set was of a nature to make both men tire. However, their condition brought them, after a minute's respite, to the center of the ring with renewed vigor. Britt was better at the outfighting, Corbett superior in the infighting. Britt had the best footwork and the greatest speed. Corbett showed himself the cleverer fighter at times and the heavier hitter.

After the fight Referee Graney said: "I simply gave the decision to the man who had the best of the fight."

A batch of challenges was received and read by Announcer Jordan. Buddy Ryan, Eddy Hanlon and Kid Herman challenged the winner of the Britt-Corbett fight. Numerous local celebrities also were there with challenges, among them being Spider Welch and Jack Cordell.

ANOTHER ATTEMPT.

Effort Made to Sink Merchant Vessels at Port Arthur.

The Japanese, However, Failed to Block the Entrance to the Inner Roadstead and Their Vessels Were Driven Away.

St Petersburg, March 28.—An official dispatch from Port Arthur to the emperor says that at 1 o'clock Sunday morning the Russian searchlights disclosed four large merchant steamers making for the entrance to the harbar, supported by six torpedo boats.

A heavy fire was opened on them by the batteries and some war ships.

The torpedo boat Stilni, commanded by Lieut. Kripiski, turned the merchant vessels from their course by blowing up the prow of the first and then boldly attacked the enemy's torpedo boats. In the fierce fight which followed Chief Engineer Swyeroff, of the Stilni, and six marines were killed and the commander and 12 men were injured.

The Japanese plan to blow up the entrance to Port Arthur was frustrated, however, and the channel is still clear.

Vice Adm. Makaroff, commanding the Russian naval forces at Port Arthur, has sent the following telegram to the emperor:

YI HIUNG, EMPEROR OF KOREA, With His Son, the Crown Prince.

"I beg most humbly to report that at 2 o'clock this morning the enemy made a second attempt to block the entrance to the inner roadstead. For this purpose they dispatched four large merchant steamers, convoyed by six torpedo boats, to the entrance.

"The enemy's ships were promptly discovered by the searchlights and were bombarded by the batteries and by the guardships Bohr and Otvajny.

"Fearing the enemy's ships might break through, Lieut. Krinizki, commanding the guard torpedo boat Stilni, attacked the enemy and destroyed the bow of the foremost Japanese steamer with a torpedo. This steamer turned to the right and was followed by two others with the result that the three were stranded to the right of the entrance. A fourth steamer went to the right of the enemy's ships and likewise sank to the side of the Fairway. The Stilni then battled with the enemy's six torpedo boats. Engineer Artificer Swyeroff and six seamen were killed and the commander and 12 seamen were wounded.

"At daybreak the enemy's battleship and cruiser squadrons appeared, and I proceeded with the fleet under my charge to meet the enemy.

"The second attempt of the Japanese to block the entrance to Port Arthur has failed, thanks to the energetic defense by the sea and land forces who acted as they did during the first attempt.

"The harbor remains perfectly clear."

FIFTY-EIGHTH CONGRESS.

Regular Session.

Washington, March 23.—Senate—The senate spent the greater part of the day on the Indian appropriation bill. Mr. Lodge took exception to the provision exempting candidates for the position of Indian agency farmer from civil service examination and on his suggestion the amendment was passed over without action. Other features arousing discussion were those relating to the designation of Indian school superintendents as Indian agents and authorizing the payment of claims made by Indian tribes on account of the difference between the value of payments made them in greenbacks and coin payments as required by treaties. Later in the day Senator-elect Dick, of Ohio, appeared in the senate chamber, the first time since his election. He went direct to Senator Foraker's seat and was cordially greeted.

House—Outside of a few routine matters, the house of representatives devoted the entire day to further discussion of the post office appropriation bill, but disposed of only one page of the bill. Mr. Butler (Pa.), endeavored unsuccessfully to have passed an amendment designed to transfer back to the office of the first assistant postmaster general jurisdiction of the free delivery and rural delivery services. An amendment by Mr. Tawney (Minn.), which was agreed to, prohibits the postmaster general from ordering out of post offices telephone companies other than the Bell Co. An amendment by Mr. C. B. Landis (Ind.) prohibiting the further rental of canceling machines, was adopted after a spirited debate.

Washington, March 24.—Senate—The senate again spent the greater part of the day considering the Indian appropriation bill. Three hours of the time was given to a discussion of a claim of $50,000 for services rendered the Choctaw Indians. It finally was eliminated for the Indian bill. The civil service debate was renewed and there was considerable discussion of the policy to be pursued in secring employes for work on the Panama canal.

House—When the house adjourned Wednesday some progress had been made in the reading of the post office appropriation bill for amendment, but only six pages were disposed of. The appropriation for the railway mail service was carefully scrutinized and in the case of inland mail transportation by star routes the appropriation was scaled down from $8,100,000 to $7,850,000.

Washington, March 25.—Senate—The senate Thursday passed the Indian appropriation bill. After the routine features of the bill had been disposed of Mr. Bacon again raised the question of civil service appointments, basing his remarks upon the statement made by Mr. Hoar Wednesday that senators from states of political faith different from that of the president should be consulted in the matter of appointments of office. Mr. Bacon contended that the southern states were practically disfranchised under a republican administration and said that this condition of affairs was contrary to the intention of the founders of the government. Early in the day Mr. Gibson spoke in support of his bill for the repeal of the desert land, the timber and stone laws, and of the commutation clause of the homestead law.

House—The house again put itself on record against any investigation of the post office department. Eight pages of the post office appropriation bill were disposed of. The question o. an investigation of the post office department was brought up by Mr. Williams, the minority leader, who proposed an amendment providing for a select committee of five members of the house and three senators to make a complete investigation of into the alleged frauds in that department. He taunted the republicans for their failure to order an investigation and said the party was opposed to it. The chair sustained a point of order by Mr. Overstreet against the amendment and when Mr. Williams appealed the chair was sustained 133 to 99.

Washington, March 26.—Senate—Senator Hansbrough charged in the senate Friday that the movement to secure the repeal of the desert land law, the timber and stone law, and the commutation clause of the homestead act were due to the efforts of a lobby composed mainly of the holders of lands bought in large tracts for railroad companies, who desire thereby to increase the demand for their property. Senator Dubois intimated that the pressure for repeal was due to large holdings of forest lieu lands by the railroads. Senator Gibson Thursday advocated the repeal of the laws in question. Senators Hansbrough and Dubois contended that the repeal would be unwise. Senator Newlands favored modifications of the law. The bill making appropriations for the support of the District of Columbia was considered for several hours, but without completing it. The senate then took up the private pension calendar, passing a large number of bills. During the day former Vice President Morton appeared on the floor of the senate, where he was warmly greeted.

House—The house passed the post office appropriation bill, after a prolonged debate on the paragraph affecting rural letter carriers, which Thursday was stricken out, but which Friday was inserted with enthusiasm under a special order of the committee on rules. Every amendment and substitute offered to this paragraph was voted down. Mr. Moon made an unsuccessful attempt to recommit the bill, with instructions to strike out the appropriations for special facilities over trunk lines south of Washington and west of Kansas.

HAPPY WOMEN.

Wouldn't any woman be happy,
After years of backaches suffering,
Days of misery, nights of unrest,
The distress of urinary troubles,
She finds relief and cure?
No reasonwhy any reader
Should suffer in the face of evidence like this:

Mrs. Almira A. Jackson, of East Front St., Traverse City, Mich., says: "For twenty years I never knew what it was to have good health. Every physician consulted said I had liver trouble but their medicines did me no good. Just before I began using Doan's Kidney Pills I was almost paralyzed. I could hardly stand on my feet because of the numbness and lack of circulation. Had a knife been thrust into my kidneys the pain could not have been more intense. My sleep was disturbed by visions of distorted figures. The kidney secretions were annoyingly irregular and I was tortured with thirst and always bloated. I used seven boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills. The bloating subsided until I weighed one hundred pounds less, could sleep like a child and was relieved of the pain and the irregularity of the kidney action. My circulation is good and I feel better in every way."

A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine which cured Mrs. Jackson will be mailed on application to any part of the United States. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. For sale by all druggists, price 50 cents per box.

FLOODS IN INDIANA.

Danger of a Water Famine in Indianapolis.

Much Damage to Property Resulted in Different Parts of the State—Several Lives Lost and Narrow Escapes Were Made.

Indianapolis, Ind., March 28.—White river continued to rise throughout the day until all former high water marks had been passed. At 9 o'clock a height of 17 feet 8 inches was reached. This was six inches above the highest previous record. The river was still rising at this time and the officials of the water company predicted that the 18 foot mark woud be reached.

With the continued rise of the river the danger of a water famine becomes more imminent. With a foot of water in the engine room the employes of the West Washington street pumping station feared that the plant would have to be shut down. Four more inches of water, it is said, would force a suspension. Should the Washington street station be crippled the city would be entirely out of the water supply, as the Indiana avenue pumping station was abandoned with the breaking of the Fall creek levee Saturday.

Realizing the seriousness of the situation the city officials late Sunday decided to appeal to the national guard for protection. Worn out with the exertion of the past three days and suffering from exposure and the loss of sleep, the city policemen and firemen were able no longer to keep at their work. Two companies of the national guard were immediately ordered to report for police duty. These are under command of Maj. Conde and will aid in protecting property and life.

The terrors of the flood were greatly increased by the suspension of the power house of the Indianapolis Traction and Terminal Co. Water flooded the engine rooms and not a car moved after 5 o'clock. Hundreds of persons dependent upon trolleys to reach their places of residence were stranded from home. Late Sunday night a few of the city cars were operated with power secured from the interurban companies. The company officials announced that the water would have to recede more than three feet and a half before they could turn their fly wheels.

With the continued rise of White river hundreds of families living in the low lands had to abandon their homes.

Many houses were swept down stream and dashed to pieces against the stone bridges. It was generally thought late Saturday night that the greatest danger had been passed and that those not yet water bound need have no further fear, but the situation became alarming early Sunday and warning was sent out to all living in the bottoms.

The policemen and firemen were again called upon to conduct rescue work. Many families had delayed too long and were unable to leave their flood besieged homes. Boats and wagons were used as on the two days previous in getting the water bound residents to places of safety.

Brownstown, Ind., March 28.—The country for miles around Brownstown is under several feet of water and White river is still rising rapidly. The pumping station and the power house and nearly all of the factories have been flooded and have suspended operations. Sunday the levee, which protected thousands of acres of farming land, broke and the entire territory has been inundated. Samuel Brown and Dunham Robertson barely escaped being drowned in White river. The river had overflowed the bottoms at the edge of town and the two men put out in a boat to reach some grain on the opposite side of the stream. The craft was caught by the current and capsized, and they were being swept down the torrent when they caught a large drift which had accumulated where some trees grew. They were compelled to wait for several hours before rescuers took them off.

From a point in the middle of the flood below Brownstown gunshots were heard all day and evening, and it is believed that a person or several persons are in distress in the midst of the flood.

The railroads in Jackson county have sustained immense damage as the result of the flood. Not a train on the Southern Indiana road has passed either in or out of Brownstown for 24 hours, and there is little prospect that traffic will be resumed until Tuesday night. A large railroad bridge near Cortland is half submerged and is expected to go out at any moment.

Dr. John Clifford, of Stendell, drove on a bridge over Patoka river and it floated away. Striking a tree, the bridge was overturned, both horses were drowned and the physician saved his life by climbing into a tree. He was rescued several hours later.

White river rose three feet Saturday at Petersburg and is still rising. In many places the river is ten miles wide, and much stock has been drowned.

Noblesville, Ind., March 28.—The flood at Noblesville began to recede early Sunday, leaving behind it much desolation. The damage done surpasses all records.

The large bridge on the Central Indiana railroad, near Noblesville, is a twisted mass of steel lying at the bottom of the river. A wrecking crew has been at work on the bridge of the Lake Erie & Western railroad since daylight, but no trains have been able to cross.

A washout occurred under the grade of the Indianapolis Northern in Hamilton county, which can not be repaired for several days. No cars have been running since Saturday morning.

The southern part of Noblesville, which was supposed to be out of danger, is Sunday under water.

No one was drowned, but there was much suffering and several deaths may occur from exposure. Hundreds of people were forced to spend the night in empty storerooms and livery stables.

The creeks in all parts of Hamilton county are still out of their banks, and it is reported that dozens of the bridges will be destroyed. The American strawboard works and the box factory are still under water, and at this time the damage can not be estimated. The water on Strawboard avenue, in the southern part of Noblesville, has reached the tops of the windows in the lower stories of the houses. Many homes with their contents have been destroyed.

The Noblesville water works plant and power house are still flooded, and the city is without fire protection or light.

Much damage was done at St. Paul by the flood. The stone quarries are all under water, and the small streams are raging. Flat Rock river and the small streams are raging. Flat Rock river is higher than was ever known.

Bluffton, Ind., March 28.—The Wabash river has been rising steadily since Saturday night and Sunday night it was higher than it has been for 25 years. Hundreds of acres of the lowlands are under water, and people here are fearful that the reservoir at Celina may break, causing great loss of life. The road leading north of the Bluffton and another to the east are both under water and impassable. Dr. C. L. Landfair, of this city, in trying to reach town over the North road narrowly escaped drowning. His horse fell off the grade and slipped down a steep embankment into ten feet of water. The horse was drowned and the doctor stood on the overturned buggy, almost submerged, until rescued, in a half frozen condition, by Henry Reed and Wilbert Kellogg, who reached him with ropes. Families of Wm. Fields, David Hurt and Wm. Dilbone, living on the north bank of the Wabash, were rescued in boats, their houses being filled with water.

Terre Haute, Ind., March 28.—The water reached its highest stage here Sunday night. In West Terre Haute, a district where the high water has not reached since 1883, 50 houses are under water and about 200 people have been driven from their homes. The national road is under about six inches of water. At Taylorsville, a suburb, everyone has been driven from their homes with the exception of Mrs. Taylor, widow of the founder of the town, who refuses to go.

The Trenton interurban line is under 15 feet of water and the track has been washed out north of Numa. A 500 foot fill which is just above the interurban line and on which the C. & I. tracks are located has been washed out, leaving the trestle work with no support. The trestles were weighted down with engines Sunday afternoon.

Delphi, Ind., March 28.—A break in the Wabash levee Sunday flooded nearly the whole city to a depth of about six feet. The water rushed to the Monon railroad grade, where it stopped. There is only a small culvert through the embankment and as the water is rising rapidly the situation is serious. The citizens are thinking of dynamiting the grade in order to relieve the city from greater calamity.

Wabash, Ind., March 28.—The Wabash at this point is receding. The Wabash Paper Co. has sustained the greatest damage. All manufacturing plants which were closed on account of the flood will not resume operations until the last of the week.

Marion, Ind., March 28.—Three lives have been lost in the flood between Gas City and Jonesboro. Teddy McGovern, Robert Howe and William Carter, in efforts to rescue the family of James Martin from a dwelling caught in the midstream, were drowned or frozen to death in the branches of trees and in the driftwood. Willis Carter, who was taken out of a floating house after more than 12 hours spent in the flood, is dying from exposure. The family of James Martin, five in all, were rescued unharmed before the house broke in fragments and was carried away.

NO CHARGE FOR POSTAGE.

Arguments of the Protective Tariff League Are Distributed at Public Expense.

The Sioux City Tribune is in receipt of a postal card from the American Protective Tariff league containing the following:

"Dear Sir: Under separate cover, we beg to hand you our first document for the presidential campaign of 1904, entitled, "Why First Voters Should Be Protectionists." If you should need additional copies for your personal use advise us. If you can consistently use the following notice of the document, No. 45, we should be under additional obligations. Yours very truly, "AMERICAN PROTECTIVE TARIFF LEAGUE."

The Tribune has also received the "separate cover." It came from Washington, with the frank of Congressman J. T. McCleary, of Minnesota, and on the left-hand corner of the envelope is printed: "Part of the Congressional Record: Free." The contents of the envelope was a pamphlet of 32 pages, purporting to be a copy of a speech delivered by Congressman McCleary in the house on the subject of "Why First Voters Should Be Protectionists."

This speech, it is needless to say, was never delivered in the house or anywhere else. It got into the Congressional Record through the usual request for "leave to print." It had no right, other than that established by partisan usage, to become a part of the Congressional Record; it has no right to circulate in the United States mails free, except the right conferred by partisan might.

The object of Congressman McCleary in getting "leave to print" is perfectly plain now. He was asked to do so by the tariff league in order that the people of the United States, regardless of party, could be compelled to pay the expense of carrying the league's literature in the mails. The league is rich, but it is also thrifty when it comes to saving postage bills. It is likewise consistent in doing this brazen thing. Its command to the American people has always been, "Pay, pay, pay," and why shouldn't they pay postage bills as well as tariff subsidies?

It is to be hoped that when the first voters receive these documents they will not overlook the object lesson contained in the graft worked upon the country. They can ask themselves if it is a respectable cause that resorts to petty trickery to compel the government of the United States to pay its postage bills. It is not a public enterprise in which all people are interested; the people as a whole are not concerned with missionary work of a political character among first voters; it is no part of our government to further such business. This is supposed to be a government of all the people—republicans, democats, populists alike. And here is a little band of plutocrats, made rich by tariff favors, and representing not even the republican party, as it is understood by most republicans in the west, getting a congressman to help them work a graft to the end that they be spared a little private expense in furthering their own interests.

——The would-be heneficiaries of the ship subsidy scheme must be pained to think that, with all the "graft" that has been distributed within the last few years, they are about the only ones that have got left.—Binghamton (N. Y.) Leader.

——When Secretary Hay is not otherwise engaged, he might estimate how much American manufactures would gain by obtaining an open door in Manchuria and losing their markets in Russia proper.—Detroit Free Press.

——Once upon a time the tariff's friends claimed that it compelled foreign manufacturers to open factories in this country. It certainly works the other way now. The Canadian branch of the locomotive trust, just established, can buy from the steel trust material for engines to be made and sold in Canada cheaper than the same materials are sold here.—N. Y. World.

PRICES OF STEEL TRUST.

American Goods Disposed Of in Canada at Prices That Are Un-American.

Once more the Iron Age contains information that will increase the uneasiness of the "stand-patters" on the tariff question. If the republicans do not soon adjourn their congress they will be compelled to recognize the rapidly growing sentiment in favor of a do-something as against a do-nothing policy on the tariff question. Items like the following from the Iron Age, of March 3, are getting very numerous and are making the people madder and madder:

"Toronto, Feb. 27, 1904.—American iron and steel products are still being offered on this side of the line at prices which cause dismay among Canadian manufacturers of like goods. A notable example is the cut in steel bars. These are quoted for the Canadian trade at Pittsburg six dollars a ton below the price current in the United States. Nor is this the only inducement. Besides the concession offered by the manufacturers of the bars, there is the additional advantage of low freights on shipments from Pittsburg. A Montreal manufacturing concern, wishing to place an order for steel bars, has, let us suppose, a bid from the company in Hamilton, Ont., and one from a Pittsburg steel mill. The Hamilton company should have a material advantage in freight rates, for the haul from their mill to Montreal is only about half that from Pittsburg to Montreal. Yet the freight rate on the Pittsburg Steel is only two cents higher than that on Hamilton Steel delivered at Montreal.

"Babbit metal from the United States has been sold in Canada at quite low prices recently, 4½ to five cents, freight and duty paid, being the usual range of the quotations.

"On the 23d inst. the Canadian Pacific Railway company announced that it had an option from the Pennsylvania Steel company to take all the rails required on their system this year and next at $18 a ton, f. o. b. at mills, or $21 delivered in Montreal."

The Pennsylvania Steel company is one of the five or six members of the steel rail pool which has held the price of steel rails in this country firmly at $28 a ton for three years. This trust is protected by a duty of $7.84 a ton on foreign rails. This duty added to its Montreal price shows that the trust lacks just 84 cents a ton of getting the full benefit of the tariff in this country. This is cutting pretty close to the tariff line. It is not unlikely that the trust is cutting entirely up to the tariff line on sales in others parts of Canada or of the world.

The tariff is a great blessing to some people, but not to those on the outside of the protected trusts.

BYRON W. HOLT.

——The evidences of harmony in New York should and will encourage the democrats in other states to get together. They will spell hope to them and induce them to go strenuously about mending their own fences. So long as there appeared to be a lack of unity among the empire state democrats the inducement was lacking to those of other states to do their best. Now, however, that it appears that they can count upon their brethren in New York doing their full duty, democrats everywhere will feel like exhibiting the same spirit.—Pittsburg Post.

——If the statisticians were to get together and figure the expenditures incurred by President Roosevelt, since his accidental elevation to the presidential chair, they would find a total of almost $1,000,000 on the expense account, and he has been in office less than three years.

——Whatever views President Roosevelt may hold as to the satisfactory outcome of the postal fraud prosecutions, it is hardly to be expected that Postmaster General Payne, who at the outset branded the charges as "hot air," will wax enthusiastic over the convictions secured.—Detroit Free Press.

FROM ALL OVER THE STATE

TORNADO IN LOUISVILLE.

Houses Blown Away and General Havoc Wrought.

Louisville, Ky., March 26.—A tornado, coming from the south, struck the eastern part of Louisville at 10:15 o'clock Friday night, tore the roofs from houses, blew out windows, flooded cellars and played havoc generally, increasing in violence as it traveled. One mile south of the city it struck the residence of Henry Dubourg, on the Eighteenth street road, and blew the entire two-story frame building away, the family of eight person barely escaping with their lives. Half a mile from the home of Dubourg the house of Alexander Lawson was blown down and Mr. Lawson was caught in the debris, being badly wounded.

The residence of William Winns, a mile south of the city, was greatly damaged by the storm.

Barns and outbuildings of all kinds in the neighborhood were blown away. Great damage was done to stock, and in one place more than 100 trees were twisted up by their roots and laid flat on the ground.

At the Masonic Widows and Orphans' home the roof of the apartments occupied by both boys and girls was lifted and whirled through the air. Windows were blown in and the window of the chapel, costing $250, a gift from Jerusalem Lodge No. 9, was demolished. Fences around the institution were leveled.

Rivers of water swept through Nineteenth, Twentieth and Twenty-first, Main, Market and Rowan streets. It came so quickly and with so much force that sewer caps were carried away. Residences were flooded, many to the depth of six inches, and at Nineteenth and Main streets the Fourth district police station was flooded.

THE MISSING PALMIST.

Rings Valued at $800 Lost by Mrs. W. H. Harrison.

Lexington, Ky., March 26.—No trace of the missing palmist, Charles Hudson, who is wanted in this city, has yet been found, but the police made it known Friday night that one of his victims was Mrs. Harrison, wife of W. H. Harrison, general passenger agent of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad Co, who lost two rings valued at $800.

Among the papers and letters found in the room which he had hurriedly vacated was a letter from a prominent Frankfort woman, asking him if he could aid her in preventing her husband from associations with other women. She promised him several clients from Frankfort if he could succeed in such an undertaking.

A RACE WITH DEATH.

It Was Won By a Little Girl By the Delaying of a Train.

Lexington, Ky., March 25.—A race with death was won by Ruth Miles, a 5-year-old girl from Hyden, Thursday night, by delaying the L. & E. train from Jackson, a half hour. Hyden is a remote mountain town. Physicians announced Tuesday morning that the child's life could be saved only by having an operation performed on her lungs in a Lexington hospital. A flat boat was procured and the little girl with her entire family floated down the Kentucky river to Jackson, a distance of 60 miles. They were 51 hours on the water. They saw that they would he a half hour late in reaching the railroad station and telephoned for the train to wait, which was done. Physicians said Thursday night that a day's delay in reaching Lexington would perhaps have cost the child its life.

A CRUEL DEED.

Hung a Little Son in a Bag and Kindled a Fire Under Him.

Paducah, Ky., March 25.—Grant Howard, a Negro, committed the most cruel deed early Thursday ever recorded in local police circles here. He took his 10-year-old son, Leroy, and placed him in a sack and tied the sack with its contents to a rafter in the stable. He apparently kindled a large fire under the hanging bulk and left for the city. The boy's screams attracted people. He was cut down and was unable to talk for five minutes. Then he explained that his papa had treated him so barbarously because he wanted to sleep with him.

The father is charged with malicious assault with intent to kill and attempted arson.

Howard is being closely guarded, as he is in danger of being lynched.

Died Unexpectedly.

Versailles, Ky., March 26.—Mrs. Elizabeth Ellston Moore, aged about 28 years, wife of Mr. Orah H. Moore, died unexpectedly at her home, near Mortonville, this county, after an illness of only a few days.

THIS is the season of the year for sap to rise, and that is just what he did, politically, in Louisville.

OHIO made considerable history during the month of March—one lynching and a knock-down-and-drag-out political convention.

WITH his veto hatchet the Governor knocked out appropriations to the amount of $200,000 or more. Very likely he did a good work.

GOV. BECKHAM vetoed the bill making the county of Thorn. The reason he gave for the veto may be also as applicable to the new county of Beckham.

So far Russia has made but little progress towards whipping the Japs. The latter seem to have gotten the best of the fighting by both land and sea.

SENATOR BURTON, of Kansas, was found guilty, in the Federal Court at St. Louis, of the charge of accepting money to protect the interests of the Ralto Grain and Security Company, of St. Louis.

THE Democratic nomination for Judge in the Fifth Appellate Judicial District will be made by a delegate convention. The call for the convention is exactly like that for the Congressional convention in this district. Conventions have become quite popular in Northern Kentucky in the last several months.

IN a public statement Attorney General Hays severely criticises the action of Gov. Beckham in vetoing the bill providing for assistants at a yearly cost of $6,200 for the Attorney General's department, and declares that the veto was not prompted by the spirit of economy. He charges that the employment of attorneys for the State outside of the Attorney General's Department in the last four years has cost the State $124,681.52, and was contrary to the statuet. Furthermore, he says the Governor and Auditor have, in addition, given employment to special attorneys in 300 more cases now on the dockets and that these will cost the State an additional $60,000, at the lowest estimate. He says if an attempt is made to employ attorneys outside of his department within the next four years he will fight it in the courts.

Gov. Beckham comes back at the Attorney-General, and characterizes his attack as "unwarranted and based on false statements." He says that Attorney General [illegible] perverted the records in order to disparage him and deceive the public. The Governor also says that much of the money paid out for attorney's fees which Attorney General Hays charges to his administration was paid for attorneys employed under the administration of Gov. Bradley and Gov. Brown. He concludes by saying that he has no apology for vetoing the measure, and would do it again if it came before him.

McCreary and Blackburn and Watterson are what is left of the old guard of Kentucky Democracy when Democracy was the synonym of ability, integrity and honor. They have seen it degenerate to machine rule and petty partisanism. They have seen it pass into the hands of small fry politicians and corruptionists, who hesitate not to drag its proud banner in the mire for the sake of ring rule and personal gain. These gallant old captains have set themselves to the task of redeeming the party and the State from the death grip of the machine. In that task they will have the support of a brave people grown weary of political freebooters and rough riders. It is a fight for the salvation of Kentucky Democracy.—Harrodsburg Democrat.

Yes, these gallant old captains are engaged in a good cause, but can they carry it out successfully? It begins to look doubtful. The "small fry politicians and corruptionists" in every part of Kentucky are beginning to flock to McCreary & Co., and, after all, is there not danger of the party organization being captured by the "small fry" when the next State convention meets? Gov. Beckham who had the almost unanimous support of those same politicians, last year, appears to be the one against whom the reorganization is directed, and so fast are his loyal supporters of one year ago deserting him that he will soon find himself in a mauner alone in the political world—in other words he will be reorganized out of power in the party, as a result of a few impolitic moves he has made since he was elected last fall.

An Interesting Letter.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

The House of Representatives adjourned March 15th, at 11 o'clock p. m. The closing hours were characterized by speeches of members, expressive of friendship and attachment formed for one another by associations, amidst a shower of paper balls, books and other missiles, flying about the chamber. Good feeling and mirth prevailed throughout with many regrets of parting.

The House was composed of 41 lawyers; 30 farmers and traders; 8 doctors; 5 merchants; 4 newspaper men; 3 teachers; 1 minister; 1 architect; 1 oil man; 2 saloon men; 3 all-round men.

We found every department of the State government in good condition, both financially and otherwise, with honorable, capable and efficient men in charge, from the Governor down to the humblest clerk.

Since 1902 the business of every department of the State government has materially increased; and under the provisions of the revenue law enacted in 1902, revenues have increased 25 per cent without any additional burden on the tax payers. Including the amount collected from the National Government, we found in the treasury, in round numbers, $1,606,500, and the State practically out of debt, with approximated revenues from the assessment of 1903 greater than for any year in the history of the State. So we felt justified in making the following appropriations which have been approved by the Governor:

State Capital	1,000,000.
St. Louis Fair	75,000.
Children's Home	15,000.
Confederate Home	57,500.
Hopkinsville Asylum	75,000
Danville Deaf and Dumb School	22,000.
Eddyville Penitentiary	40,000.
Frankfort "	26,000.
A. & M. College	25,000.
Lexington Asylum	15,000.
House of Reform	12,364.
Boonesborough Monument	2,500
Total	$1,365,464.

Leaving out capitol appropriations and adding some minor appropriations not yet approved, will make for 1904, near 390,000 as composed with 330,000 for 1902.

The running expenses of State Government was increased, as it was found that the increased business of the State made it necessary to increase the clerical force in nearly every department, besides additional duties and service were imposed on the head of every department during the building of the capitol.

From my personal observation of the conditions of the State's affairs and the able and efficient manner in which the State's business is conducted, we can build the capitol and all necessary buildings, including a Mansion for the Governor, and take care of all our State institutions and leave a surplus in the treasury, without any increase of taxes.

We are again confronted with the old chestnut, that the last legislative body was the best that ever convened in Frankfort. That speaks well for continuous progress from the beginning; but it is as it should be, whether it is correct or not.

The House was composed of sober, discreet and conservative men, with few, if any, exceptions. Many of them able and brilliant and destined to fill high positions in social and political life.

The legislature did some good work and some that might have been left undone with credit, but every measure has its advocates, let it be good or bad, and on either side the influence of the press and the lobby with or without money, are the most powerful influences the legislature has to combat.

It was with much regret that I observed a number of the legal profession in the House—the profession that once stood solidly as the high priest and bulwark of liberty, and the champion of the poor and oppressed, so extremely sensitive to the influence of the press, and on every occasion line up with corporate greed.

In the irrepressible conflict now being waged between autocracy and democracy, autocracy was much encouraged when a law was passed giving to a special class a special privilege, recognizing only one class of creditors and one class of debtors, and denying to another class of creditors that labor under the same difficulties, the same rights and privileges; and again the same encouragement was given autocracy when a law imposing a tax on manufactured tobacco and on the sale of cigarettes was repealed and a tax imposed on meat, reversing the Democratic doctrine of taking the tax off of the necessaries of life and putting them on the luxuries. These with some other unimportant bills we should not have passed.

The rains last week did the farmers in this county damage to the extent of several thousand dollars in the way of destruction to fencing and the washing of their land. In many places soil from the fields was piled to the depth of a foot or more in places on the public roads, and from the looks of the fields that were torn up by the water, it will take a long time to restore them. This has been an unusually hard winter on land.

It always cures and is pleasant to take. For sale by all druggists.

To the citizens of Walton, Ky:

On behalf of The Levy-Price Co. of Cincinnati we wish to extend you our heartfelt appreciation and gratitude for the cordial reception given our representatives last Saturday while in your midst. The good will and feeling so heartily expressed by everyone that we had the pleasure of meeting, assures us that Walton is fully doing their share towards making a success of the new enterprise that we believe with the most confidence, will prove not only beneficial to ourselves, but also to every citizen and prospective citizen of your beautiful village.

Thanking you again for your many favors, and assuring you of our appreciation of them, we remain Sincerely yours.

The Levy-Price Co.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

On Saturday March 19th at 4 p. m. was taken the first actual step of what promises to be the turning point in the history of Walton, Ky.

At that time ground was broken on the five acre tract lying just south of the corporation line on Lexington Pike, for the first building to be erected by The Levy-Price Company, of Cincinnati, to be used as tailor shops in the construction of Young Man's and Children's Clothing.

This building which is the first of a series will have every modern convenience for the comfort of the workers and the production of properly made garments.

The idea that this company is working on is to have their output made under the best possible conditions, plenty of light, fresh air, and made by people who take an interest in their work.

In order to accomplish this they will engage bright ladies or girls who are desirous of earning a competence for themselves, and while experience and knowledge of sewing machines or hand sewing is desirable, a large force of instructors will be on hand to teach any who are willing to learn, and salaries will be paid while learning.

The first building will require about two hundred persons and those living in Walton or nearby should make application for position as soon as possible as the building will be ready for starting about the first week in May.

A banquet of generous bountitude was served to the managers of the Company and representative men of Walton Saturday night by mine host Diers, and speeches expressing the good will and hopes for the new enterprise were freely made.

It is the purpose of this company to make surroundings as pleasant as possible for their employes, social clubs will be encouraged, entertainments given and arrangements are under way to furnish without charge the use of the newest books and magazines published.

It is understood that many new houses are to be erected for the numerous families that are bound to follow this new enterprise to Walton, and while there will be positions for about two hundred this spring, additional buildings for which plans are under way will ultimately furnish steady employment to about one thousand workers.

With this as a beginning there is no reason why Walton with its numerous natural and other advantages should not become a veritable hive of indpstry, a Mecca of prosperity, and the goal of industry and health.

Those desiring situations are requested to leave or mail their application to Kahn Bros. Walton, Kentucky, stating what experience if any, they have had, where they live and if they do not live in Walton, whether they will move there if engaged.

Walton is to be congratulated on its enterprise in securing the location of these shops.

It Saved His Lege.

P. A. Danforth of Lagrange, Ga., suffered for six months with a frightful running sore on his leg; but writes that Bucklen's Arnica Salve wholly cured it in five days. For Ulcers, Wounds, Piles, it's the best salve in the world. Cure guaranteed. Only 25 cts. Sold by All Druggists.

Only two new cases of smallpox have appeared in Burlington since the last issue of the Recorder—Charles Wilson's wife and child. Both of these cases are very mild. Leslie Kennedy, the colored man reported last week as having gone home to await developments, has a mild case. Outside of Kennedy's case the disease has been confined to the Wilson families, and it is believed the worst is past. J. M. Eddins is the local quarantine officer, and has given the isolated parties the best of attention.

AN EASTER MESSAGE

Agnes Norwood sat alone in her room—where, indeed, she sat always, now—her face buried in her hands. She was not weeping. It had been long—oh, so long—since she had shed tears. She only strove to shut out from her mind the vision of a happy world that mocked her grief. What was Easter to her, Easter with its joys, its glad songs and beautiful flowers? If those who called themselves her friends could understand how they probed the unhealed wound of her aching heart, would they be so thoughtless as to urge her to sing. How could she sing, she whose song had been so sudden and ruthlessly hushed months ago? Can the woodland songster fluttering among the dead leaves, its breast pierced by an arrow, tune its little throat to melody? No more could she sing with a heart that throbbed only to pain.

A ray of spring sunshine crept in between the folds of the window curtain. She arose and drew the shade.

Agnes Norwood had once been a part of that world of brightness and beauty to which she seemed to belong, but her Gethsemane had come at the supreme hour of her life—at a time when she was radiantly happy—and its dark shadows had wrapped themselves so closely about her that she had not since been able to penetrate their gloom. It was in May that she had promised to be Arthur Cameron's wife. Before the June roses were gone death had claimed him. There had been a short illness, a sudden alarm, and then the end. The brilliant young life had gone out.

When Agnes strove to recall what had taken place in those awful days of darkness and hopelessness she had a confused sense of the solemn hush, the sorrowful faces, and a kind voice that tried to point her to the "stars shining through the cypress trees." The only reality was the great wave of desolation that had settled down into her heart when that which represented all that life had for her was carried out of her sight.

Since then the days had come and gone alike, as one long painful dream. In vain had the anxious parents and sympathetic friends tried every expedient to waken within her the old passion for music. In those other days Agnes' sweet voice had thrilled large audiences. The congregation of the First church had not forgotten the Easter solo of last year. They were eager to secure the same singer for the coming Easter. But Agnes refused to see any one, and in answer to all entreating letters on the subject wrote a firm refusal—it was impossible for her to sing.

When the church bells rang on Easter morning there was no music in the chimes to the heavy-hearted girl. Their notes jarred upon her sorrow. The perfume of the Easter lilies in the sunny bay window of the breakfast room oppressed her. When a robin, one of the earliest of the season, alighted in a tree by the open casement and poured forth his little soul in a burst of melody, Agnes involuntarily put her hands to her ears. At last she impulsively donned her wraps and fled from the house.

The home of the Norwoods was well out on the outskirts of the city. Only a mile away was beautiful Woodvale cemetery. Spring had come early. The snow was nearly gone, and in places the ground was already quite dry. This Easter morning a south wind blew softly and the warm sun lingered lovingly on the low mounds in the sacred city of the dead. It shone with particular brightness on one marked by a slender granite shaft.

Agnes entered the cemetery and walked rapidly down the avenue that lay nearest this mound. Leaning her head wearily against its monument, she remained motionless, with closed eyes and drawn brows. What though the south wind caressed so lightly the silent home of the sleepers? It would pass on to riot among scenes of gaiety. The sunshine, too, would soon desert them for some less lonely spot. Darkness would come as the darkness that had settled over her life. How could there be light hearts and songs and gladness in this sad, sad world? Life was so pitifully brief, and death was over all. Yes, life itself was death. They had tried to tell her that she would meet her dearest again, but did they know? No, no, they could not. And she was young yet. How could she endure the long life that stretched before her, the years that must pass before she could interpret the mystery of death? Oh, if she might only receive some message, some least token that Arthur still lived!

She shifted her eyes for a moment to the blue sky and then brought them wearily back to earth. Close by the monument a little pale flower, one of spring's first hepaticas, had pushed its frail petals above the ground and was lifting its tiny head to the sunlight. Agnes bent over it and tenderly drew away the dead grass. How came it there? By human hand? No, it had risen from the dead. "Risen from the dead," she repeated softly to herself. Yes, it had died with the summer, but only to await earth's resurrection day, when from the germ of its old dead self sprang this wondrous new life, this pure and beautiful thing. She touched tenderly its petals with a strange feeling of awe. It seemed to breathe out a message of hope and trust, a token of God's own love. It told her of the new life that begins with the decay of the old, of immortality beyond death, of an eternity when time shall end. It whispered of a faith that is stronger than sight, and of a God of love.

Long Agnes knelt over the little blossom that spoke comfort to her soul, until she had come to learn that life is not death, but death is life; that love lives beyond the grave, for it is eternal. Her heart was softened at last. Then came tears like rain—the first that had wet her lashes since that terrible day. When, after a long time, the passion of her sobs had worn away, she rose and left the cemetery, taking with her the little flower that had brought her a message from him who, though the doorway of death, had passed into life.

The morning service in First church was not yet concluded when a little figure clad in black entered softly and stole into the first vacant pew. The beautiful Easter lilies at the altar had a message for at least one soul in the congregation that morning. From the pulpit came the closing words of the sermon: "Because I live, ye shall live also." They are the words of the Son of God himself, who hath tasted death for every man. In the face of this Divine attestation to the immortality of the soul, we cannot but cry: "Oh, Death, where is thy sting? O Grave, where is thy victory?"

Upon the hush that followed the minister's words came the strains of the great organ, which swelled and throbbed with its glad message. The congregation arose and sang, "Christ, the Lord, is risen to-day."

With the last stanza, a voice of wonderful power and pathos rose above the others, and the people turned to see a fair, sweet face, upon which shone the light of a faith triumphant, as Agnes Norwood sang the words, as she had never sung before:

"Made like Him, like Him we rise,
Ours the cross, the grave, the skies."—

In Austria and Hungary.

In the Austrian Tyrol Easter pranks, like our April fool day jokes, are perpetrated. Hospitality is universal at this time and nobody asking for shelter is refused. A Hungarian Easter custom in the Kalaka. It consists in the farmers gathering together the corn or hay and doing a day or two of labor gratis for their poorer neighbors who cannot employ hands. The wife of the peasant for whom the work has been done awaits them with an excellent supper. This is generally followed by a dance, and the festivities are kept up until morning.—Albany Argus.

Hunting Easter Eggs in Germany.

Easter is a very important day in Germany. It is looked forward to by the children with almost as much pleasure as Christmas. After breakfast the hunting for eggs begins and it generally takes a long time to find them, for hares are shy little creatures, and the nests are always hidden away in the queerest places.

The children usually find the eggs in pretty baskets or boxes, and sometimes they will come upon a beautiful white sugar hare, sitting on a mossy nest filled with colored eggs.—Union Signal.

LOVE ON WHEELS.

BY JOHN WICKLIFFE GRAY.

Would she come to-day?

John Haworth leaned back in his invalid's chair and scanned every vehicle that appeared from the uptown horizon. He was seated in the big bay window that looked out over the trees and meadows and winding roads and paths of the park. Now and then the light June breeze wafted across the street the prattle of half a dozen children at play on the greensward nearest where the invalid sat. To the philosophic and the speculative, it was an ideal spot to study human nature as we find it on the sidewalk—the lights and shadows of the past shining dimly through the features of those who hurry by.

But the speculation of John Haworth ran in another direction. And every morning for two weeks it had been the same. Before that time he had helped to pass the tedious hours by watching the faces just below him on the street from the time they came into good view four doors north or south until they were gone, to give place to others.

There was a look of eagerness on the invalid's face as he glanced at his watch for the fifth time within the half hour. It lacked but five minutes now of the time when the Bicycle Girl, as he chose to call her, would pass through the entrance of the park almost opposite.

"I think he might take a bit more exercise, walking in the park, for instance, in the next day or so." John turned to see his mother and Dr. McRae, the family physician, enter the room. "There will be no further necessity for my services, I think. How does that sound, John?" he added, cheerily.

"Almost as good as the sight of home after two years in the Philippines, Doc. I think—" he broke off suddenly and turned his eyes to the street.

Yes, there she was. The same natty, tailor-made riding skirt and jacket; the same fluffy, dark hair that refused to be kept under the jauntiest of little caps.

The girl glanced up and—was it a bow? Or had she merely turned her head to guide her wheel into the park driveway. Who was she? he wondered, as he had scores of times before in those two weeks he had been sitting by the window slowly regaining the health that a long fever had stolen.

"I think I'll get out my bicycle in a day or so," he continued, afer the interruption.

"A good idea, but, mind you, not too much at first. Take it easy, and the exercise will be of as much benefit as double the amount of indoor labor with dumb bells," answered the doctor.

"A case of pleasure and medicine, eh, Doc?" said the invalid, with a smile.

"Yes, pleasure is half the cure, with exercise or medicine," he answered.

It was three days later that John's bicycle, the trusted servant of other days, was brought forth from the attic and, with the help of the porter, put in condition.

Ah, but it was glorious to have even a little strength to pedal, thought John, as he took his first ride through the park. He was on the bicycle path that ran down among the alders, where it wound in and out like a snake, crossed a little bridge and then wormed its way around the hill. It needed only a companion to make the day and his enjoyment perfect. And naturally he reverted to the Bicycle Girl who crossed into the park every morning.

He had not seen her since that day when Dr. McRae was in the room, and now, three days after, in desperation and growing fear that he would not see her again, he had come out alone.

Suddenly, out of a by-path, the girl of his thoughts darted. There was a simultaneous twist of front wheels away from each other to avoid a collision. In a moment they were contemplating each other, with a foot on each on the ground and their handle bars touching.

There was a simultaneous laugh.

"Pardon me," he said, removing his cap.

"There's nothing to pardon," she said, smilingly, as both wheels were righted. John knew instinctively that she would smile like that.

"I see I have bent several spokes," said John. "I suppose I might as well straighten them now," he added.

John took out his kit, only to find his wrench missing.

"May I borrow your wrench?" he asked.

"Certainly, Mr. Haworth," she answered.

"You know my name?" she exclaimed, delighted as well as surprised at the turn of affairs.

"Yes, I was at college with your sister. And I want to thank you for a beautiful silk shawl you sent me, though we have never met. I am Josephine Randall." A scarcely perceptible color mounted to her cheek as she extended her hand. John remembered, now, the shawl he had placed in the homeward-bound box of curios for his sister's chum, Miss Randall, who was frequently mentioned in the letters he had received on the other side of the world.

"Both myself and the shawl are honored," he exclaimed, with warmth.

"We would have met before perhaps, had your sister been at home," Miss Randall went on.

"Now that we have met, may not we finish the ride together?" he asked, wistfully.

And thereafter the invalid soldier pined no more for a companion a-wheel. Two bicycles instead of one crossed the street to the park every morning.

FOLDING BED DANGEROUS.

The dangerous character of the common household folding bed has at last received judicial recognition.

The incidents that led up to the ruling began with the purchase by an unsuspecting Brooklynite of a folding bed, guaranteed sound and kind.

So confident was the furniture man of its tractability that he agreed to put it up in a safe condition. Right there was where the seller laid the foundations for trouble.

The bed worked all right for a month—didn't even balk. Then one morning the wife attempted to remove a sheet from it while it was standing open, and the headboard promptly came over and broke her jaw.

Wife and husband both sued the furniture seller, the former for her injuries and the latter for the loss of his wife's services. The supreme court in Kings county dismissed the complaint because the plaintiff failed to show some reason why the bed collapsed.

The appellate division, speaking perhaps from a wider experience with folding beds, has now decided differently. The inference from its decision is that no man can be expected to understand the ways of a folding bed.

At least, the judges have unanimously decided that the case should have gone to the jury and that a new trial must be had.

WAITS YEARS FOR SMOKE.

Odd Manner in Which a Pennsylvania Justice of the Peace Celebrated His Election.

Before a gathering of friends John H. Rock, Sr., the recently elected justice of the peace at Latrobe, Pa., smoked a cigar that had been kept by him for more than 20 years.

In 1884 Mr. Rock was a candidate for justice of the peace, running against the late Henry Oursler. While passing the store of the late Thomas Longergan, he was hailed by the latter and called into the store.

"Here, John," said Mr. Lonergan, "if a good cigar and I want you to smoke it when you are elected squire."

Mr. Rock took the cigar home and laid it away in a bureau drawer. Election came around, and he was defeated by Mr. Oursler. The cigar was allowed to remain in the drawer for 20 years intervening, or until the recent election, when Mr. Rock again ran for justice and was elected.

REMARKABLE OPERATION.

Surgeons Amputate Part of Body with Crushed Limb and Patient Recovers.

A remarkable antiseptic surgical operation has been achieved at the Port Jervis (N. Y.) hospital in the recovery of Frank Fetters, who lost his right leg and portion of his body.

Fetters is 20 years of age, and his home is in Covington, Ky. In October last he fell from a freight train in the eastern division yard of the Erie railroad, and his leg was crushed close to the body. The hospital surgeons realized that they had an unusual case on hand, but amputated the leg so that the thigh bone was disarticulated at the hip, and much of the surrounding tissue removed.

The patient rallied from the shock and recovered. Recently he was discharged from the hospital, and, having no place to go, was removed to Orange farm, at Goshen. He is able to get about with the aid of crutches.

HADN'T THOUGHT OF THAT.

There Were Obstacles to the Free Movement of Doors That Opened Outward.

There was a man who had read that it was safer to make the doors of all houses open outward instead of inward, says the Chicago Tribune.

He remembered it, and when he built a house of his own he had all the outer doors hung in accordance with that idea.

One bright morning in March he moved into his new home.

Late in the evening of the same day it began to snow, and it kept on snowing until the ground was covered a foot deep.

Then the wind blew and piled the snow in drifts.

After which it began to rain.

The rain later turned to sleet and the mercury sank 30 degrees.

And the next morning the neighbors were astonished beyond measure at the sight of a frenzied man with his head thrust out of a second story front window of that house, gesticulating wildly to a boy on the sidewalk and begging him for heaven's sake to go and call the fire department and have the ice and snow blasted away from his doors so he could open them and get out of the house!

A Wonderful Discovery.

Broadland, S. Dak., March 28.—Quite a sensation has been created here by the publication of the story of G. W. Gray, who after a special treatment for three months was prostrate and helpless and given up to die with Bright's Disease. Bright's Disease has always been considered incurable, but evidently from the story told by Mr. Gray, there is a remedy which will cure it, even in the most advanced stages. This is what he says:

"I was helpless as a little babe. My wife and I searched everything and read everything we could find about Bright's Disease, hoping that I would be able to find a remedy. After many failures my wife insisted that I should try Dodd's Kidney Pills. I praise God for the day when I decided to do so, for this remedy met every phase of my case and in a short time I was able to get out of bed, and after a few weeks' treatment I was a strong, well man. Dodd's Kidney Pills saved my life."

A remedy that will cure Bright's Disease will cure any lesser Kidney Disease. Dodd's Kidney Pills are certainly the most wonderful discovery which modern medical research has given to the world.

Wilfully Misunderstood.

Abiding In the Darkness

Perilous Position of Those Who Will Not Accept the Christ

Sermon by the "Highway and Byway" Preacher.

(Copyright, 1904, by J. M. Edson.)

Chicago, Sunday, March 27, 1904.

Text:—"The people that sat in darkness saw a great light, and to them that sat in the region and shadow of death, to them did light spring up."—Matt. 4:16.

"And this is the judgment, that the light is come into the world, and men loved the darkness rather than the light; for their works were evil. For every one that doeth evil hateth the light, and cometh not to the light, lest his works should be reproved."—John 3:19-20.

WICE has God sent light into the world. Once in the beginning when He swung the great sun into its place in the heavens, and again when He sent that greater light, the Son of Righteousness, into the darkness of the world's sin. Some one has said that "the first, wonderful and beautiful as it is, is but a faint type of the true and glorious Light of Life. To every man that second Light is as free as the first, and if he will accept it the darkness is forever past." More God cannot do. The Sun of Righteousness is shining even more brightly than the orb of day, but, if men will shut themselves up in the darkness of sin, as in a subterranean vault, they alone are to blame that His glorious rays do not penetrate its blackness." And as the man who would shut himself away in the dark cavern where the sun could never penetrate might refuse to believe that there was any sun and any glorious light, so the man who loved the darkness of sin and refused to come to the Divine Light might contend that there was no Sun of Righteousness, and no glorious Light to chase away the blackness of sin, but it would not alter the facts in either case. The great sun is in the heavens giving freely, fully and constantly of its glorious, life-giving light, and the greater Light, the Son of God, has come into the world and shines with ever increasing brilliancy and seeks to draw men from the darkness and "the region and shadow of death" to the light and safety in Him. The man in the sunlight does not need argument to convince him that the sun is in the heavens sending forth its light. He knows it because he sees and feels it. But the man in the cave might be prone to argue the point and you would never be able to convince him while he clung to the dark recesses of his retreat. But get him out in the sunlight and all doubt and all desire to argue would disappear.

NOTWITHSTANDING the fact that Light has come into the world, there are many who love darkness rather than the Light. They prefer to sit in the shadows instead of coming out into the blessed, life-giving Light. They abide in the darkness. They see the Light, even as one in a dark cavern might see far in the distance the glimmering light of the sun as it crept through the crevasses of the rocks. They know it is shining out in the regions beyond them, but they cling to the place of darkness. Such were those who came into touch with Jesus when He was upon earth—His neighbors at Nazareth who allowed prejudice and envy to blind their eyes and who sought to destroy the true Light which had shined unto them—the scribes and Pharisees and the multitudes that followed their leadership; all these were they of whom Scripture declares that the Light shined in their midst and yet their darkened minds and hearts of unbelief apprehended it not. And such are those to-day who come into touch with the Light of the Gospel—Christ in the world in the Spirit—and yet who will not turn to that Light but prefer the darkness of their own ways. Preferring the darkness when the soul of man was intended to find life in the Light. We do not wonder that the earth worm delights to burrow into the dark bowels of the earth. We do not wonder when the hideous crawling things which lurk in the darkness flee from the light and plunge into the darkest hole that can be found. It is their nature. They can know nothing higher and better. But think of the bright-faced flower whose beauty and very life depend upon abiding in the glorious light of the sun, choosing rather the darkness of some damp cellar! Could it thrive? Could it live? Indeed no, you say. And neither can the soul of man thrive and live in the world's darkness of sin. It has been made for a higher and better experience; for Light instead of darkness; for Heaven instead of eternal separation from God in the outer darkness.

GOD calls it darkness, for such it is. But the Devil gives it other names. He calls it worldly enlightenment, personal liberty, pleasure, ease, luxury, indulgence, etc., etc. The Devil always likes to change the names of things. He learned the trick away back in the beginning of man's history when he called the fruit of the forbidden tree good, and wholesome and desirable. And the present advertising age has learned the trick to an amazing degree, and attractive and high-sounding names and phrases are lacked upon articles for sale which help sell the goods, but do not in the least change their true character. The world has answered the question: "What's in a name?" by replying, "Everything, everything!" The name sells the goods. And the Devil likes to call the darkness of this world by other and attractive names. Sin is pleasure; self-indulgence is independence; unbelief is intellectualism; what God calls the whited sepulchre, full of dead men's bones, is culture and refinement and elegance, and religious forms and ceremonies. And by this method the Devil keeps his dupes sitting in the darkness and the region and shadow of death. God calls it darkness, the Devil calls it light; God calls it death, the Devil says life, life, life in abundance! Let us enjoy it! But it is darkness, black darkness, no matter what the Devil says. No matter how people choose to delude themselves with the thought that this indulgence, that desire or ambition, is not darkness, it is darkness unless Christ the Light is the center and purpose of it all. God calls it darkness now because that which is not of the Light is to be darkness throughout eternity.

DARKNESS means separation from God. You cannot mix light and darkness. Where the light is there is no darkness. In the presence of God and His Christ the darkness disappears. But like the great piling rocks which shut out the light from the dark cavern beneath, so the world's unbelief and sin shut out the Light of the Sun of Righteousness. Separation from God! That may not mean very much to you in this life. It did not mean very much to the rich man. He fared sumptuously every day. He had friends and a good time. Seemingly there was nothing which his heart could wish. But he was in the darkness and would not realize it. He was separated from God, and he did not seem to care. The Light shined near him, at his very gate, but he would not leave the darkness that he might come into the Light. And as we have said he did not seem to be conscious of separation from God, but when the few fleeting years of his life had fled away and time was swallowed up of eternity, then he realized what separation from God meant. He knew the awful pressure and torment of the outer darkness. The man without the wedding garments on of Jesus' parable is the picture of the man who had abided in the darkness through this life and then thought he could somehow slip into the light and joy of Heaven, but he was quickly detected, and the judgment upon him—"bind him hand and foot and cast him out into the outer darkness, there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth"—shall be the final judgment upon every soul that continues to abide in the darkness rather than come to the blessed Light. The outer darkness is where they belong. Separation from God here means separation from God throughout eternity. What an awful price to pay for the few miserable, paltry pleasures which this life can give! And yet it is the price which thousands of precious souls are paying.

IN EPHESIANS Paul speaks of the "rulers of the darkness of this world." The Devil and his minions hold despotic sway over the regions of darkness. Think you, oh, man! oh, woman! that if you refuse the dominion of the Ruler of the Light, Christ Jesus, you escape all rule and power? I want to tell you that you are under the dominion of a power that is seeking to crush your soul to hell. He will give you all the latitude you want in indulging every whim and desire and passion and lust, but you are under his power while you think you are rejoicing in your so-called freedom, and at last the ruler of the darkness where you have been abiding will have your chains forged so strong and fast that the endless years of eternity will not be sufficient to break their power. You are a prisoner of the darkness, and do not know it. You are intoxicated with the wine of the pleasures and purposes and desires of life, and do not realize that the ruler of the darkness is in control of your life and destiny, and that while you abide in the darkness you cannot escape his power. So many, many people who are abiding in the darkness fight heroically against the baser rule of the Devil. They seek what they call the highest and best in life. They overcome the sinful indulgences of the flesh and then flatter themselves they have emerged from the land of darkness into the land of glorious light, but theirs is a more perilous bondage. The Devil is still in control through the heart of unbelief, and what cares he what delusion keeps them within the borders of his darkness. While they are there they belong to him, they are under his dominion. They never can escape until they get into the land of Light where Jesus holds sway.

NOTICE the attitude of the people who are abiding in the darkness. "The people that sat in darkness," in the position of ease and rest, as though that was the safe and proper place for them to be. There are those who are in the darkness, who are ill at ease; who have an ill-defined sense of their danger; who know in their inmost hearts that the Light which they see before them is the place for them to be. And then there are others who are "sitting" in darkness. There is everything in the attitude and bearing. Do you recall the scene at the river where Gideon led his army? There were those who scooped the water up to their mouths as they ran, and then there were the larger number who came and getting down on all fours as though there was no other important business on hand; as though that was the place for them to stay. There was Bunyan's Christian groping in the land of darkness, conscious that he was in the place of danger, and then there were the members of his household, and his neighbors and friends who sat at home and ridiculed his anxiety and tried to get him to sit down quietly at home. Thank God! Bunyan gives us the picture of the wife Christiana rising and following her husband later into the land of Light, whither he had gone, but in that city of Destruction in the land of darkness there were many who never were troubled and who never arose to flee the darkness and come out into the Light. What is your attitude in the land of darkness? Are you at ease? Are you satisfied? Are you sitting, sitting, sitting, enjoying all that this life can give and utterly indifferent to the Light which is shining for you? Do you realize that you are sitting "in the region and shadow of death?" Think you that there were any who were content to sit quietly in the house while the angry Mount Pelee was belching forth its fire and smoke and deadly ashes? "In the region and shadow of death." There were none who sat then. The danger of death forced them to flee. Death stalks through the land of darkness as surely as destruction wasted Martinique. Dare you sit contentedly in the darkness? Dare you be indifferent to the Light which is shining for you? Flee, flee to that Light and escape the region and shadow of death!

THEY who abide in darkness are under judgment. "And this is the judgment, that the Light is come into the world, and men loved the darkness rather than the Light." "He that believeth on Him (that is, he that cometh to the Light) is not judged;" but "he that believeth not hath been judged already." Under judgment! Do you realize what that means? It means that here and now the sentence of death has been passed upon those who persist in abiding in the darkness; who will not come to Christ, the Light. It means that those who are abiding in the darkness become their own judge. Somehow or other the Devil has circulated the thought and impression that judgment is not passed upon guilty and unbelieving mankind until the presence of God is gained, and then it is hoped and expected that some extenuating circumstances will be presented; some loophole of escape discovered; some way in which the Judge may be mollified and punishment escaped. How often you hear one saying that he will take his chances in the next world. That he will do the best he can, and thinks it will be all right. And what does this attitude of mind mean? It means that there is no thought that judgment has already passed upon those who will not come to Christ. They think that the matter is not settled until the presence of God is reached. Of course, the ruler of the darkness seeks to delude his subjects in that way. Why should he not try to still the conscience and lead people to hope for escape from the darkness beyond the grave? But, oh, friend, you who are abiding in the darkness, hear God's Word! Believe no longer the Devil's lie! The Devil calls you a good man. He holds up before you all your virtues. He shows you all the ugly failures and sins of those who are trusting in Christ, and then he says: "It will be all right, my boy. God will never condemn such a splendid fellow as you are. Take your chances." But stop! The Devil is blinding you to your peril by an awful lie. God is not the one that will judge you. You pass judgment upon yourself when you turn from Christ, the Light. God only executes that condemnation which you have pronounced against yourself when you choose the darkness rather than the Light. "And this is the judgment, that the Light is come into the world, and men loved the darkness rather than the Light!"

AND why do they love darkness rather than the Light? "Because their works were evil." This may require a little examination to discover its exact and full meaning. What is evil in God's sight? Is it only what evil means to man—the baser manifestation of sin? Or does it include everything which cannot meet the white light of God's righteousness? Why was it Jesus could say to the woman sunken in the grosser sins of the flesh: "Neither do I condemn thee," and then could turn to the scribes and Pharisees who had been her accusers and who perhaps were not guilty of any such gross sin, and say: "Woe unto you, ye hypocrites?" Was it not because their attitude of unbelief was a greater sin in God's sight than that of the grosser indulgences of the flesh? The term evil includes everything from the positive sins of the flesh to the sins of the heart and head which shut out the Christ by unbelief. And those who are abiding in darkness are there because their works are evil, because they love the darkness (self and sin) better than they love the Light which God has sent into the world. They come not to the Light because they do not want to see themselves as sinners. How man does fight that declaration of God that "all have sinned and come short of the glory of God." "Ephraim is joined to his idols; let him alone." Shall we? No. Not while the blessed Light is shining! Not while we have voice and pen to declare the glad message of deliverance from darkness and salvation from sin! You who are sitting in darkness and the region and shadow of death, behold the Light! It is shining for you. Listen in the darkness which now surrounds you and you will hear the voice of Jesus say:

> "I am the dark world's Light;
> Look unto Me, thy morn shall rise,
> And all the day be bright."

And then if you will leave the darkness of rebellion and unbelief and come out into His Light, you may sing with all the ransomed throng:

> "I locked to Jesus, and I found
> In Him my Star, my Sun;
> And in that Light of life I'll walk
> Till traveling days are done."

NO APPETITE-EMACIATED-NERVOUS.

Many Women During the Spring Months Suffer From Extreme Lassitude, Loss of Appetite and Nervousness---What They Need Is Pe-ru-na, the Great Tonic.

Miss Bertha M. Rush, 5435 Kincardc treet, Pittsburg, Pa., Superintendent Junior Society of Methodist Protestant Church and leading Soprano of the choir, writes: "Words cannot describe my thankfulness to you for Peruna. I was a sufferer from systemic catarrh for years and was in a very much run-down condition. I was extremely nervous and had the most foolish fears over nothing. I was thin and emaciated.

"My physician advised me to leave this climate but as it was not convenient to do so at this time, I took the advice of a friend to use a bottle of Peruna. I took it faithfully and when the first bottle was gone I felt so much better that I bought six more and took them faithfully, after which I looked like a new woman.

"I gained in flesh, my appetite returned and all my old symptoms had disappeared. I am more than thankful to Peruna."—Miss Bertha M. Rush.

MISS BERTHA M. RUSH—PITSBURG.

Miss Rush Suffered With Systemic Catarrh—Was Nervous, Had No Appetite, Grew Thin and Emaciated. She Now Looks Like a New Woman After a Course of Pe-ru-na.

I AM TIRED.

Everybody is Tired—Spring Weather Does It—Every One Should Be Cautious.

Depression of the nervous system at the approach of spring is the cause.

General lassitude, dull, heavy sensations, continual tired feeling, with irregular appetite, and sometimes loss of sleep. Peruna meets every indication and proves itself to be perfectly adapted to all their varied peculiarities. Peruna invigorates the system, rejuvenates the feelings, restores the normal appetite and produces regular sleep.

That tired feeling which is the natural result of the depressing effect of warm weather immediately after the invigorating cold of winter, quietly disappears when Peruna is taken. Thousands are daily testifying to its priceless benefit.

Mrs. H. Kassatt, 1309 W. 13th street, Des Moines, Ia., writes: "I am happy to give my endorsement for your valuable medicine, Peruna, as I consider it a valuable medicine to take when the system is run down from overwork. About two years ago I felt that I must take a long rest as I had been unable to work for over a month and could not regain my strength. I could not sleep at night and was in a very nervous, high strung condition. I decided to try what Peruna would do to build up my strength, and am pleased to say that I began to improve very shortly, and in less than two months I was able to take up my work, and felt better than I have for years. I take it now twice a year and find that it keeps me in perfect health." Mrs. Kassatt was for over ten years the manager of a plant furnishing ladies' wear and employing hundreds of women.

Tired, Nervous Women.

There are thousands of them everywhere. A few bottles of Peruna would do them untold benefit. As a tonic and nerve invigorator it has no equal. It builds up the nerves, it gives strength to the circulation and at once restores the appetite and digestion. No feeble woman should be without Peruna.

If you do not receive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

ITCHING ECZEMA

And All Other Itching and Scaly Eruptions Cured by Cuticura—Complete Treatment $1.00.

The agonizing itching and burning of the skin, as in eczema; the frightful scaling, as in psoriasis; the loss of hair and crusting the scalp, as in scalled head; the facial disfigurement, as in pimples and ringworm; the awful suffering of infants and the anxiety of worn-out parents, as in milk crust, tetter and salt rheum—all demand a remedy of almost superhuman virtues to successfully cope with them. That Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Pills are such stands proven beyond all doubt. No statement is made regarding them that is not justified by the strongest evidence.

Holding It.

"Excuse me," he said, returning; "but you are sitting on my hat."

"I know it," replied the other, rising; "I was afraid some one would take it while you were gone."—Yonkers Statesman.

FOR CONGRESS,

HON. CLIFFORD E. NADAUD, of Kenton county, is a candidate for Congress from the Sixth Kentucky District, subject to the action of the Democratic party.

HON. D. LINN GOOCH, of Covington, is a candidate for Congress in this the Sixth Congressional District of Kentucky, subject to the action of the Democratic party.

About a year ago some of the agricultural papers called attention to a clergyman named J. D. Dietrich, who lived near Philadelphia and was doing wonders with fifteen acres of land. So remarkable have been the results attained that he is now the most talked-of farmer in the United States. Many reports have appeared in the newspapers, some of them doubtles exaggerated, yet the truth seems to be that he has demonstrated the value of intensive cultivation. He is prominently before the country becouse there is no other fifteen acres in the land devoted to the diary industry that is making so much money.

The little farm came into his possession by inheritance about twenty years ago. It was so worn ont that when he settled in the cottage and installed a horse and two cows in the barn he had to buy hay for the animals. The land would not produce the garden stuff and hay he required.

Dairy farms usually have large acreage, and cattlemen think they must have at least three or four acres to a cow. But here is a place where less than fifteen acres can be devoted to the livestock, for the buildings and garden require some ground, and yet this little place raises everything required for the support of from thirty-two to thirty-five cows and two horses the year round.

No cows or horses in the land are better cared for. The cows are of the best diary stock, their milk is pure and rich, and it brigs the highest price. The result is that the most money to the acre made in the dairying business in our country is made on this little tract of land.

One of the experts of the United States agricultural department has estimated that a full account of Mr. Dietrich's management and methods would be worth $40,000,000 to the dairy interests of the land.

The agents of the department have recommended to the Secretary of Agriculture that the sum of $200 a year be paid to Mr. Dietrich to edable him to run his place as a model farm.

He would have the profit of the place as usual and the extra money would compensate him for his time required to exp'ain everything to visiting farmers.

Intelligent study, good sense and hard work have made this little farm what it is. The first thing to be done was to enrich it.

The owner of the landsimply exhausted all sources of informatian about fertilizers, and then, of course he had to apply his knowledge in the best way to suit his own case. There is no richer land in the country today than this tract. The land is worked very hard and it pays to feed it abundantly.

Not an acre could be devoted to pasturage. Grass would not yield sufficient fodder; so the whole question of soiling or fodder crops was gone into. Wheat srops, corn oats, cow peas, etc., would produce the best results? How could they be sown alternately so as to grow at least three crops of fodder every season? All of these problems were exhaustively studied, and the solution was complete.

There being no pasturage, the cows must be foddered in stalls or in the barnyard, and this involved questions of the proper amount of exercise and air for the animals to keep them in the very best of condition. Difficulties in the way were successfully overcome, and the quality and condition of the cows would make them conspecuous at any State fair.

So the Summer crops provided plenty of food both for the open feeding yard also for the silos in which the Winter provender is stored. The experiment was somewhat unusual and involved some original problems, all of which seem to have been involved in the best manner.

The Resurrection Peace

Message Which the Risen Lord Brings to His Disciples.

Sermon by the "Highway and Byway" Preacher.

(Copyright, 1904, by J. M. Edson.)

Chicago, Sunday, April 3, 1904.

Text:—"Jesus came and stood in the midst, and saith unto them, Peace be unto you."—John 20:19.

THE scene of our text was in an upper room at Jerusalem, possibly the very place where Jesus had last met with His disciples and had eaten the passover supper. Behind bolted doors the fearful and troubled and perplexed disciples had gathered to talk over the wonderful events of that eventful Resurrection day. The empty tomb, the vision of angels and their story of a risen Lord, the appearance of Jesus first to Mary Magdalene, then to the other women, then to Peter, and then to the two disciples on their way to Emmaus—all these strange things troubled them. Within their hearts was a strange mixture of fear and hope, of guilty conscience and superstitious dread, coupled with the terror of the Jewish rulers who had wrought such bloody work in the condemnation and crucifixion of Jesus. No wonder they were ill at ease and troubled in spirit. One of them only a few hours before had cursed and sworn and denied that he knew Jesus. Two others had been clamoring under the very shadow of the cross as to which should have the chief place in His kingdom. Three of them had fallen asleep in the hour of His agony in the garden, when most of all He needed their sympathy. And all of them had forsaken Him and fled and left Him alone to endure the indignities and tortures of the trial and the suffering and death on the cross. And, with all this dark background of memory, is it strange that, as they gathered in that upper room after the surprising events of that day, they should be fearful and troubled? Realizing that their Lord was risen, and yet not understanding its form and meaning, conscious that in the darkest hours of Jesus' need they had proved faithless, is it to be wondered that as Luke tells us "they were terrified and affrighted?" And it was to such a group of disciples that Jesus came and spoke His reassuring words of "Peace."

"PEACE!" "Peace which passeth all understanding;" Peace which makes the troubled sea a calm. Peace which makes the soul indifferent to enemies without; to trial, persecution, hardship, danger. Peter who had cowered before a maiden and in fear denied his Lord, learned what that peace meant, and he could face Jewish mobs and preach fearlessly; he could stand boldly in the presence of the Jewish rulers and charge them with the death of Jesus. And so with all the other disciples. As the peace of the risen Lord came to rule in their hearts they were indifferent alike to dangers, or trials, or persecutions. They always rode above the storm, for they knew the meaning and power of the resurrection, and that no peril, no difficulty, no assault of the enemy could come to them except it was the will of their risen Lord and for His glory and the advancement of His kingdom among men. Peace! that wonderful peace which comes from the conscious presence of the living Lord. Surely, if that message of peace marked the Resurrection day so long ago, it should continue to be the message for all time, for consider how He who "made peace through the blood of His cross," and spake peace after His mighty victory over "death and the grave," is now at the right hand of the Father in Heaven, and ever liveth to make intercession for the saints. Peace, the peace which Jesus gives, is for you and me. We cannot live victoriously or joyfully without it. Let us receive the message of peace. Let us understand its meaning.

THERE were three distinct phases to the fearful troubled condition of the disciples' hearts as they gathered in that upper room that night, and they set forth similar conditions which exist with Christians to-day. First of all, their hearts were filled with doubts and with a sense of their disloyalty and faithlessness to their Lord. In the second place, they were in mortal dread of the Jewish rulers, and lastly, their life's hopes and plans, their expectation of filling a glorious mission, were all shattered and gone, and they knew not whither to turn. A doubting and guilty heart, a cowardly fear of enemies, a dark, uncertain future—what kind of condition was this? Surely there was no peace there. Surely it could not be expected that those disciples were ready or able to do efficient or faithful service. And how can it be expected of you and me that we can serve our Lord with honor and success while doubt and guilty conscience crowd our hearts? What kind of soldiers will we make if we fear and tremble before the enemy and dare not stand boldly forth for truth and righteousness? To what purpose will we serve if we do not realize our high calling and destiny? How is it with you, dear Christian? Are you a stranger to that peace which drives out doubt, which endures with holy courage, which inspires with a conscious mission? It is not your Lord's will for you. He longs to come and stand in your midst and speak peace to your heart; to take away all doubt, to give you His courage, to point you to your place and purpose in life. And the reason you have not that peace is because the resurrection of your Lord is not a real, living, vital hope within you. You do not realize the height and depth and length and breadth of its meaning. You have accepted the fact of Christ's resurrection. You believe it much as those disciples believed it as they talked in a vague and wondering way about the miraculous events of that day. You need to have Jesus come and speak peace with all of its fullness and sweetness to your heart, even as He did to the disciples on that first Resurrection day.

PEACE came to the disciples as they realized the literalness and meaning of the resurrection of Christ. And so must peace come to the heart of the Christian always. The consciousness that his Lord is a living Lord, a Lord who is in Heaven at the right hand of God, the Father, with the changed and glorified body of the flesh which He possessed during His earthly career, must thrill his being, chasing away doubt, giving heroism and definiteness of purpose. Oh, but you say, if I could only have stood with those disciples in that upper room and beheld with the natural eye the risen Lord, if I could have had the convincing proof which was vouchsafed to Thomas and put my fingers in the nail prints in His hands and feet, and thrust my hand in His side, then would the resurrection of Christ be more real and certain to me, and it would exert a more powerful influence over my life. Ah, faithless one, you forget what Jesus said: "Blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed." You forget how convincingly and overwhelmingly God has testified to the resurrection of Christ by His witnesses during those 40 days, until the company of disciples gathered on Mount Olivet beheld the risen Lord ascend into Heaven there to remain until the Gospel had been preached to every nation and His church had been made complete. You forget how to Paul was granted a vision of the risen Christ, and how Stephen saw Heaven's portals roll back and beheld the risen and ascended Christ standing at the right hand of God. You forget that we have a witness within, the Holy Spirit, to testify of the Christ and make real and certain to us all the wonderful truth about Jesus' crucifixion and resurrection.

THE resurrection confirms and illuminates the sacrifice made on the cross, it overcomes death, and it proves the earnest of present conquest and ultimate and glorious triumph. "A dead Christ," says Edersheim, "might have been a Teacher and a Wonder-Worker, and remembered and loved as such. But only a living and risen Christ could be the Saviour, the Life, and the Life-giver, and as such preached to all men." And you remember how forcibly Paul puts it to the Corinthians, to whom some false teachers were declaring that there was no resurrection. He says: "If the dead are not raised, neither hath Christ been raised; and if Christ hath not been raised, your faith is vain; ye are yet in your sins." This fact of the resurrection is "the foundation of the Church, the inscription of the banner of her armies, the strength and comfort of every Christian heart, and the grand hope of humanity." How glorious and full of meaning is the cross when we know that on the other side is the empty tomb and the risen Lord. What did the cross mean to those disciples until they understood the reality of Christ's resurrection? They knew that cross had borne the body of their Lord. They saw His body embalmed in spices and laid in the sepulcher. But think you that during those dark and awful days they realized what that cross meant to them? Think you that they realized that Jesus had died for their sins and the sins of the whole world? Think you that they had a sense of sins forgiven? I tell you nay, for such was impossible until they realized and understood His resurrection. The disciples had seen the dead raised, but it was only to this life. The dissolution of the body must be endured again. The widow's son must die again and be buried; Lazarus must again go into the tomb. They saw death controlled, but not overcome. But when they saw Jesus risen and changed in His glorified body, they knew that death had been overcome. "Death was swallowed up in victory." And with a Lord who could overcome Satan in the wilderness, who could endure the cross, and march in triumph through the tomb, overcoming death and the grave—what confidence and conscious power would be born in the hearts of His followers. With such a Conqueror and such a Leader it needed only the command "Go ye," and the descent of the Holy Spirit, to send the disciples forth to the conquest and on, on, towards the glorious triumph which is yet to crown the banner and cross of Jesus Christ. The light and glory of the resurrection reach back to the cross and vitilize the sacrifice there made, fill all the present with mighty power and hope, and extend on and on through eternity.

"WHEN and the disciples saw the Lord they were glad." Glad because all doubt was taken away, and glad because their Lord came with a message of peace, instead of accusation and condemnation. Ah, how the doubts had surged through their hearts during those days of loss and sorrow. Ah, how bitter was their sense of guilt as they remembered their desertion of their Lord. No wonder fear filled their hearts. No wonder they were troubled when they saw their Lord. Sin and faithlessness make cowards of us all, and we are filled with confusion and fear at the thought of meeting the Lord. Are doubts filling your heart, oh, Christian? Are you bearing about a load of guilt and sin? Are you conscious of having dishonored your Lord, of having fled duty's call, of having sought your own desires and pleasures? Then let Jesus come into your heart and speak His message of peace. As you wait in His presence, let the Spirit confirm to your heart as never before the blessed reality of your Lord's resurrection. Then peace will come. Doubts will disappear before the mighty fact of the resurrection, and you will realize that He speaks of peace instead of condemnation because He has borne your sins and your condemnation upon the cross. But doubts and sins were not the only things that prevented peace ruling in the hearts of the disciples. There were external causes for fear and trouble. The Jews who had taken the life of their Lord might come and drag them to death. They were filled with terror and sat behind doubly-barred doors. It seemed to them as though the powers of evil were triumphant. They felt themselves powerless and undone. There could be no peace while they cowered before the enemies of Christ. Jesus came and revealed Himself unto them as the risen Christ that they might know that all power was given unto Him in Heaven and in earth. That the seeming triumph of evil was only fulfilling the plans and purposes of God and working out His victory. Oh, Christian! Have you ever been overwhelmed with the sense of the power of evil? Have you ever felt that the forces that were against you were mightier than those for you? Such experiences do come. But turn to the risen Christ and let Him speak to your heart, peace. As you realize His risen power and glory, how the enemies about you will fade into insignificance! As you see your Lord, you will know that victory is yours and that no harm can befall you or persecution come which will not work out the glory and honor and purposes of God.

AND peace came to those disciples as they became conscious of a new call to service. Hopes had been shattered. Prospects dimmed. Jesus had called some from their fishing nets, and others from various avocations to unite with Him in the establishing of a kingdom. They had been filled with expectation and hope. They believed in their Lord and His claims, and they believed still in His claims, but death had cut short their hopes and expectations, and they knew not whither to turn. Their mission was ended. Their visions of glory and honor and power were gone. And with such disappointment and discouragement ruling in their hearts they knew not what peace was. And has it not been so with you and me? Some cherished purpose or plan, some lifelong ambition has seemingly been ruthlessly shattered and ended. Disappointed and discouraged, your heart has known an unrest and distress which is almost unbearable. So it seemed to the disciples in that upper room, and so it seems to you and me, sometimes. But a second time Jesus says to His disciples: "Peace be unto you," and then He adds the reassuring words: "As the Father hath sent Me, even so send I you." What! Everything not lost! What! A new and important mission ahead, a new call to service! Surely! As the Lord li-eth! That which has preceded has only been preparation. That which lies ahead is the great work to be done, the mighty mission to be fulfilled. The failures, the mistakes, the sins behind shall be but stepping stones to more complete service in the future. The disciples began to know that day what the peace of Christ meant as they heard His words and as they beheld His risen form. And so may you and I at this Easter time hear Jesus say to our hearts: "Peace." And as our heart pants to realize as never before the reality of the risen and living Lord, doubts will disappear, the glory of the cross will hide our sin and guilt forever, fear and dread of evil will vanish before the all-conquering presence of Christ, and consciousness of a new commission in the service of Christ will be felt. To you and me Jesus says: "Peace, as the Father hath sent Me, even so send I you."

ONE word more about the peace which Christ gives. It is His peace. Think of it! Not something which I work up from within, but something which Jesus sends to my heart from Himself. HIS PEACE. And it is not given as the world gives, with danger of loss or with time limit attached to it, but given unceasingly, unstintedly, eternally.

"PEACE, peace!
Wrought by the Spirit of Might,
In thy deepest sorrow and sorest strife,
In the changes and chances of mortal life,
It is thine, beloved: Christ's own bequest,
Which vainly the Tempter shall strive to wrest;
It is now thy right.

"Peace, peace!
Look for its bright increase;
Deepening, widening, year by year,
Like a sunlit river, strong, calm, and clear;
Lean on His love through this earthly vale,
For His word and His work shall never fail,
And 'He is our Peace.'"

Yea, and it is not only peace to the Christian but God promises—

"PEACE, peace!
To him that is far away.
Turn, O wanderer! why wilt thou die,
When the peace is made that shall bring thee nigh?
Listen, O rebel the heralds proclaim
The King's own peace through a Saviour's name;
Then yield to-day.

"Peace, peace!
Through Him who for all hath died
Wider the terms than thy deepest guilt,
Or in vain were the blood of our Surety spilt.
Even because thou art far away
To thee is the message of peace to-day,
Peace through the Crucified."

ABOUT PUTTING OUT FIRES.

Not Many People Really Understand How It Is That Water Extinguishes Flames.

"How does water put out a fire?" is a question that seems easy enough to answer, but when it comes to be explained the person who attempts it, unless he is versed in chemistry and science, is liable to find himself in a hole, says the Bangor (Me.) Commercial. The question seems simple enough on the face of it, but there are many simple chemical problems that go to make it anything but easy to solve.

In order to understand the action of water on fire one must have some intimate knowledge of the properties of fire. "Fire," says Prof. Garrett P. Serviss, "is a form of chemical combustion in which flames make their appearance. There may be combustion without flames, but not without heat. Wood in burning always gives off flames, as do some kinds of coal, but there are other kinds of coal that do not.

"In the process of combustion, there must be two things, at least, concerned. In the first place, there must be the combustible, or thing that burns, and in the next case there must be some supporter of combustion. When wood burns in the open air the wood is the combustible and the air the supporter of the combustion."

Bangor people who have seen big fires have probably noticed that during the progress of the blaze there have been times when the flames seemingly died out, would blaze up again with redoubled fury. The reason for this is that the water which has been poured on has supplied oxygen to the flames, giving them renewed vigor. This is the case in a high wind, when the fire becoming strengthened by the fresh oxygen, gets fiercer and fiercer and is thus harder to put out. In a dead calm, a fire is always easy to extinguish for the reason that all the oxygen in the vicinity of the flames has been consumed.

A little water is of no use in extinguishing a fire for the very reason that it is not enough to offset the heat of the flames, but is set off into its component parts and is burnt up in the flames—the oxygen only making the flames fiercer.

The question now arises how a lot of water, instead of supporting combustion, does the opposite and extinguishes the flames. The reason is that a huge volume of water falling upon the flames is too great for the heat of the flames to disassociate into its parts, but instead sort of extinguishes the flames. Water has a remarkable property, that of high specific heat. Many people in watching a burning building have noticed the firemen pouring streams of water on the blaze and the accompanying hissing noise and rising steam. The formation of the steam has suddenly drawn an immense amount of heat from the combustion going on in the building and so has tended to cool off the building materials and subdue the fury of the flames.

Because of the great specific heat capacity of water and the consequent absorption of heat from the fire to form the steam, there is not enough heat left to release the oxygen from the hydrogen, or, in other words to set the two combined gases burning, and thus the constant streams of water pouring in and on the fire and the clouds of steam rising serve as a sort of blanket, which shuts off the air from the flames and prevents them from obtaining more oxygen. This constantly being repeated tends to deaden the blaze more and more until it finally dies out.

THE POPE'S OLD WATCH.

Nickel Timepiece Treasured by the Present Pontiff as His Mother's Gift.

The favorite gossip of Roman drawing-rooms centers round the pope's simplicity and sweetness of character. During a recent interview the pope took out his watch and looked at it. It was an old, much-rubbed, much-battered nickel watch, attached to his waistcoat by an ancient leather boot-lace. One of the noblemen present, who noticed this humble timepiece, could not restrain his horror at the thought that the head of the church should have so poor a watch. He instantly took out his own watch—a valuable lever, with a monogram in jewels on the back—and begged the pope, as a great favor, to exchange watches with him, that he might carry away a personal souvenir of the visit. But the pope refused the offer with great vehemence.

"My mother gave me this," he said, caressing the old nickel turnip, "when I was a boy. I fastened it on with this very bootlace, and vowed that I would wear it so long as it would go at all. A vow," added his holiness, returning the watch to his pocket, "which I always believe to have been the cause of the admirable time that my chronometer keeps to this day and never gets out of order."

Boomerang Argument.

"Ma," remonstrated Bobby, "when was at grandma's she let me have pie twice."

"Well, she ought not to have done so, Bobby," said his mother. "I think once is quite enough for little boys. The older you grow, Bobby, the more wisdom you will gain."

Bobby was silenced, but only for a moment.

"Well, ma," he said, "grandma is a good deal older than you are."—Stray Stories.

Miss Hapgood tells how she was cured of Fallopian and Ovarian Inflammation—and escaped an awful operation by using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I suffered for four years with what the doctors called Salpingitis (inflammation of the fallopian tubes) and ovaritis, which are most distressing and painful ailments, affecting all the surrounding parts, undermining the constitution, and sapping the life forces. If you had seen me a year ago, before I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and had noticed the sunken eyes, sallow complexion, and general emaciated condition, and compared that person with me as I am today, robust, hearty and well, you would not wonder that I feel thankful to you and your wonderful medicine, which restored me to new life and health in five months, and saved me from an awful operation."—MISS IRENE HAPGOOD, 1022 Sandwich St., Windsor, Ont.

Ovaritis or inflammation of the ovaries or fallopian tubes which adjoin the ovaries may result from sudden stopping of the monthly flow, from inflammation of the womb, and many other causes. The slightest indication of trouble with the ovaries, indicated by dull throbbing pain in the side, accompanied by heat and shooting pains, should claim your instant attention. It will not cure itself, and a hospital operation, with all its terrors, may easily result from neglect.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I can truly say that you have saved my life, and I cannot express my gratitude to you in words.

"Before I wrote to you telling how I felt, I had doctored for over two years steady and spent lots of money in medicine besides, but it all failed to do me any good. My menses did not appear in that time, and I suffered much pain. I would daily have fainting spells, headache, backache and bearing down pain, and was so weak that it was hard for me to do my work.

"I used your medicine and treatment as directed, and after taking three bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, menses appeared, my womb troubles left me, and I have been regular ever since. I used fourteen bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier together, and am now restored to perfect health. Had it not been for you, I would have been in my grave.

"I will always recommend your wonderful remedies, and hope that these few lines may lead others who suffer as I did to try your remedies."—MRS. T. C. WILLADSEN, R. R. No. 1, Manning, Iowa.

Such unquestionable testimony proves the power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound over diseases of women.

Women should remember that they are privileged to consult Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., about their illness, entirely free.

RIDDEN BY THE TRUSTS.

When you hear a republican saying there is no need to reform the tariff, ask him why the rates in the Dingley bill—the present tariff law—were made so much higher than the McKinley law, which was higher than any other previous tariff. The fact that the rates are higher now than ever before would seem to demand reform.

It was admitted by Senator Dolliver, of Iowa, in a speech in the senate that the rates were purposely increased to allow for reductions that might be made in reciprocity treaties with foreign countries. Mr. Kasson was selected by President McKinley to negotiate reciprocity treaties and he did so with France, Nicaragua, Ecuador, Argentina and the British and West Indies.

But the republican leaders in the United States senate refused to allow those treaties to be ratified, and the Dingley law rates have continued to be paid by the people of the United States without the small concessions that the reciprocity treaties would have made on some articles. And yet the republican national platform of 1900 contained these words:

"Reciprocity and protection are twin measures of republican policy and go hand-in-hand." The Iowa state platform of 1901 said: "We endorse the policy of reciprocity as the natural complement of protection and urge its development as necessary to the realization of our highest commercial possibilities." And that tariff plank closed with this important declaration: "We favor any modification of the tariff schedules that may be required to prevent their affording a shelter to monopoly."

Nearly every state republican platform has declared for reciprocity, and some of them declared for such modifications of the tariff schedule as may seem to be required. The Idaho republican platform of 1902 declared outspokenly for tariff revision and contained the most radical antitrust plank that any political party has declared for. It says: "We favor a revision of the tariff without unreasonable delay which will place upon the free list every article and product controlled by any monopoly and such other articles and products as are beyond the need of protection."

In spite of these declarations and promises made by the republicans, President Roosevelt and the leaders in congress have determined to not even consider the tariff, or attempt to modify those schedules that give the trusts their monopoly of the market for many of the necessaries of life. The republicans refuse to ratify the reciprocity treaties of their own making and they refuse to reduce the Dingley rates, although they purposely placed those rates much higher than the protected trusts asked, that when the reciprocity treaties were ratified the trust and combines would still be amply protected. But the trusts controlled the republican leaders and have been strong enough to keep the law intact, and the protectionists declare it must not be touched.

Thus are we tariff taxed and trust ridden. Ask your republican neighbor how he likes this do-nothing programme of his party and if he thinks his prosperity is enhanced by it.

——Let the prevailing democratic motives be concession and unification. Let the democrats take the broadest view of the situation. It is a churlish and untoward spirit, indeed, which can resist the appeal for liberality and patriotism as against mere factionalism and past dissension. It is, under these conditions, a perverse human nature which can submit to narrow restraints; a niggardly human nature which could supinely tolerate the ugly prospect of losing again when a fine spirit of accord and an intelligent contest will bring victory.—St. Louis Republic.

——The Smoot case is becoming a political embarrassment for the republican leaders. If Smoot shall be expelled Utah, Nevada, Colorado, Montana and Idaho, where there is considerable mormon vote, will be put in the list of doubtful states. If the senate shall fail to expel him there will be eastern disgurt to contend with. It is more than likely, under the circumstances, that decisive action will be postponed until after the election. A position on the fence is confessedly awkward for the republican elephant, but there seems to be no help for it.—Philadelphia Record.

EXCLUSION OF CHINESE.

A Matter of Great Interest to Workingmen Ignored by the Powers at Washington.

The existing treaty of immigration between China and the United States expires December 8, 1904, if six months' notice before that date is given by either country. It is reasonably certain that China has, or will give, the necessary formal notice, for as construed by our government the Chinese are entirely dissatisfied with the treaty.

The Roosevelt administration seems entirely oblivious to the importance of immediate attention to this important matter, for if the treaty expires and no other takes its place, either our entire trade with China will be jeopardized or the doors will have to be open to unlimited Chinese immigration. It will be impossible to demand of China the open door for our goods and those of our people who wish to go to that country and deny the Chinese similar favors.

The Roosevelt administration doubtless does not wish the Chinese question to be brought to the attention of the country before the national election, for the labor leaders are strongly opposed to any Chinese immigration and the labor vote must be conciliated until after election. After election—always after election; the usual procrastination on important matters that politically cut two ways. How will labor fare after election at the hands of the republican politicians, when the business interests are demanding the open door in China? Will the interest of the workingman and his anxiety for Chinese exclusion be considered after election, when even now the eight hour bill, the anti-injunction legislation and other measures favorable to labor, are hung up in committees by the republican leaders in congress?

The trusts and corporations always hold the whip hand over a republican congress and any measures of relief for labor, or reform of abuses fare badly at the most propitious times and much worse after election.

COMMENTS OF THE PRESS.

——If any nation can clean up the Isthmus of Panama and make it a fit place to live the United States can do it, but all of the political sanitarians and renovators in the country can never remove the stain from the canal title.—Chicago Chronicle.

——The main fact is that in spite of all the beating of tom-toms and inarticulate cries of a few whirling dervishes of radicalism that shout for they know not what, and the country knows not whom, the vast, safe common sense of the democracy has recognized the need of harmonizing upon a safe and conservative democrat, and all factions are falling cheerfully into line.—Atlanta (Ga.) Journal.

——New York will act; New York will speak in a decisive manner. The convention will instruct the New York delegates for Judge Alton B. Parker. Judge Parker will be the nominee. The sentiment this year is distinctly a New York sentiment. Want New York wants it will get. Judge Parker will carry New York; the rest of the nation recognizes that. And it is New York's electoral votes that are expected to [illegible] the presidency.—Democrat.

——Before we erect a shipping monopoly we should conciliate the Filipinos by such tariff concessions as they seek, and prove in all ways that we have their interests at heart. If we give them tariff concessions they will probably want independence pretty soon. Secretary Taft intimates that it is not safe to give them that now, or even to intimate to them that the time will ever come when they will be fit for independence. Even tariff concessions would be dangerous. Anyhow, the tariff barons would not allow it.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

——The man whom the New York state democracy indorses will be the next president of the United States.—Albany Argus.

——There is plenty of good democratic doctrine, fellow-democrat; do not get discouraged. The party will stand on old-time principles and will favor present-day policies which are best for the people. In spite of our confusion in the past, the enemy is worse demoralized, and with a good platform and a splendid leader, the ranks will close and we shall see a splendid fight for victory all along the line.—Knoxville (Tenn.) Sentinel.

SOME NOTABLE CHILDREN.

The richest baby in the world is said to be the little son of the late Harold Brown, of Providence, R. I. The death, within a few days of each other, of his father and his uncle, left this youngster the possessor of a fortune which is estimated at between $40,000,000 and $50,000,000.

The youngest general in the world is Sultan Ahmed Mirza, youngest son of the late Shah of Persia and brother of the present shah. He was born in 1891 and is, therefore, only 13; but he is a full general in the Persian army and has a regular staff. He holds reviews of the troops and plays soldier with an army corps for a plaything.

The youngest king in the world is Daudi Chua, king of Uganda, who is now about eight. He holds his court seated on a scarlet throne with a leopard skin mat under his feet, and bearing in his hand a toy gun. The British exercise a protectorate over the young king and his kingdom, and have established for him a sort of parliament, which he opens regularly with much pomp.

The youngest professional organist in the world is Kathleen Mills, who presides over the great organ in the Catholic church at Ongar, Essex, England. The regular organist falling ill, little Miss Mills took her place and played for several Sundays with such skill on the instrument that all the people were astonished when they found out that a child of 11 years was presiding over the keys and stops.

NOTES OF THE RAILWAYS.

In order to get at the grain raised in Lee county, Ill., the Chicago & Northwestern railroad has contributed $1,600 to help the farmers of that section build a good turnpike.

Experiments made by the scientists appointed for the purpose by the French government show that the resistance of the atmosphere to the motion of a high-speed train often amounts to half the total resistance which the locomotive must overcome.

It is apparently the intention of the Turkish government to nationalize, as far as possible, all railways in the Ottoman dominions. Foreigners may be needed to initiate operations, but ultimately Constantinople hopes to assume undivided control.

The Southern railway proposes to furnish to engineers and conductors annual passes at 1 cent on the basis of service. Those who have been five years in the service are to be given annuals, good over the division on which they are employed; those having ten years to their credit are to receive annuals good over the entire line, and the wives of those who have served 15 years will be included in the privilege.

THE INDUSTRIAL WORLD.

Hamburg's ocean traffic has grown from 6,758 vessels in 1885 to 14,073 in 1903.

On account of the depressed condition of the salmon market, many canneries in Alaska will not be operated this year.

Much use is made of [illegible] Algeria of sulphate or copper; more than 20,000 [illegible] exported last year from the United States.

Siberia exports about $15,000,000 worth of butter a year. The milk is very rich, only about 20 pounds being needed for a pound of butter, as against 28 in Denmark.

The Russian government intends to distribute next year a sum of over $150,000 as a subsidy to private steamers on the rivers Amur, Petchora and Lena, and their affluents, and on Lake Baikal, for the transportation of mail matter at regular intervals.

FUN ON A STREET CAR.

And This Nonsense Was Heard in the Sedate and Sensible City of Philadelphia.

On a Walnut street car the other day, says the Philadelphia Record, two women who evidently knew each other but slightly struck up this conversation: "Why, Mrs. Brown! How d'ye do?" "How d'ye do, Mrs. Green? I wasn't sure it was you at first." "Yes, it's me, all right. How's Mr. Brown?" "Oh, he's all right. How's Mr. Green?" "He's all right, too. How's the children?" "They're all right. How's yourn?" "They're all right."

There was a slight pause, as though neither knew what to say next. Suddenly one had an inspiration. She giggled a minute and then said: "Say, my husband asked me the other day what your first name was, and to save my soul I couldn't tell him. What is it?"

Then it was the other woman's turn to giggle. "Why, it's Millicent," she said. "Millicent? How do you spell it?" "Oh, it's an easy name. M-i-l-l-i-c-e-n-t." "Well, you can't never say you ain't got a cent to your name, can you?"

A scream of laughter followed this witticism, and they began to slap each on the wrist.

His Signature.

"Charming! Exquisite! Perfectly delightful!" she exclaimed, peering through her starers at the young artist's latest picture.

"I am glad you like it," he said, with becoming modesty.

"Like it? Could anybody help liking it? So original! That queer little animal with the funny long legs in the right hand foreground! What a delicious conceit! How can you imagine such impossible things, Mr. D'Aubre?"

"I'm—er—you mean this?" he asked, pointing to the strange thing in the lower corner.

"Yes, of course."

A VENERABLE PASTOR CURED BY PE-RU-NA.

This leads to partial loss of hearing, smell and taste, as well as digestive disturbances.

Peruna corrects all this by its specific operation on all the mucous membranes of the body.

One bottle will convince anyone. Once used and Peruna becomes a life-long stand-by with old and young.

Rev. J. N. Parker, Utica, N. Y., writes:

"In June, 1901, I lost my sense of hearing entirely. My hearing had been somewhat impaired for several years, but not so much affected but that I could hold converse with my friends; but in June, 1901, my sense of hearing left me so that I could hear no sound whatever. I was also troubled with rheumatic pains in my limbs. I commenced taking Peruna and now my hearing is restored as good as it was prior to June, 1901. My rheumatic pains are all gone. I cannot speak too highly of Peruna, and now when 88 years old can say it has invigorated my whole system. I cannot but think, dear Doctor, that you must feel very thankful to the all loving Father that you have been permitted to live, and by your skill be such a blessing as you have been to suffering humanity."—Rev. J. N. Parker.

A Bishop's Letter.

T. H. Lomax, D. D., Bishop 2nd Dist. A. M. E., of Charlotte, N. C., writes:

"I recommend your Peruna to all who want a strengthening tonic and a very effective remedy for all catarrhal complaints."—T. H. Lomax.

If you do not receive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

The spring is the best time to treat catarrh. Nature renews herself every spring. The system is rejuvenated by spring weather. This renders medicines more effective. A short course of Peruna, assisted by the balmy air of spring, will cure old, stubborn cases of catarrh that have resisted treatment for years. Everybody should have a copy of Dr. Hartman's latest book on catarrh. Address The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio.

FOR CONGRESS.

HON. CLIFFORD E. NADAUD, of Kenton county, is a candidate for Congress from the Sixth Kentucky District, subject to the action of the Democratic party.

HON. D. LINN GOOCH, of Covington, is a candidate for Congress in this the Sixth Congressional District of Kentucky, subject to the action of the Democratic party.

HON. E. C. SMITH, of Carrollton, is a candidate for Congress from the 6th Congressional District, subject to the action of the Democratic party.

HON. JOSEPH L. RHINOCK, of Kenton county, is a candidate for Congress, from the 6th Congressional District, subject to the action of the Democratic party.

JAPAN has been defeating the Russians some more—just what a majority of the people hope she will continue to do.

THE President has announced that he will not be able to attend the opening of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition.

A DIVINE healer has been performing some wonderful cures at Indianapolis, recently, if reports sent out from that city are true.

THE Parker presidential boom appears to be taking shape in the east. It cannot be called of a mushroom growth, as he has been under consideration for some time as available timber.

IN Grant county the Democrats nominated a full ticket for county officers to be voted for one year from next November. Nominations were made by a primary that was a warm number.

W. R. HEARST, of New York, has agents hustling in several States for Hearst delegates in the Democratic national convention, and a Hearst-Bryan combination is feared by the conservative Democrats, who have not put forward a candidate.

Agents of W. R. Hearst endeavored to lease an entire hotel in St. Louis for the national Democratic convention. Failing to do this they have secured all the available rooms in three hotels, and Mr. Hearst's bill for room rent will be $3,500 a day during the convention.

BOTH the ex-Boone county men who were candidates in the Grant county Democratic primary election, last Saturday, were snowed under. H. Clay White was beaten for County Judge, and Claud Adams, for County Superintendent of Schools, was beaten by three votes by his lady opponent.

AT the election this fall a constitutional amendment providing for a return to the viva voce system of voting will be submitted to a vote. This is causing considerable discussion as to whether or not a return to the old system of voting is a backward step, and there are arguments on both sides of the question.

ACCORDING to a report made by a St. Louis grand jury last week, a recent Democratic primary election held in that city is very much like some of the primaries held in Kentucky. The grand jury said: "Some of the most prominent men in St. Louis were slugged and beaten by "Indians" in the presence of police, who did nothing to protect them; that these citizens were subjected to this brutal treatment when they made an effort to peacefully assert the right to vote."

THE Elizabethtown News submits the following suggestion:

"We are firmly convinced that if the Democratic party would grow in Kentucky its committees must be elected by the people and the power of removing committeemen must be taken from the State Central Committee. The next State Convention should provide for the election of precinct committeemen in every precinct, cities included, then let these precinct committeemen elect the county chairman, let the county chairman in each Congressional district elect a member of the State Central Committee, then let the members of the State Committee meet and elect its chairman and let the State Executive Committee, which is entirely unnecessary, be abolished. Let the State Convention provide that no Federal, State, District, County or Municipal officer shall be eligible to serve on any committee, and that if he becomes an officer while he is a member of a committee that said place on the committee shall be declared vacant from the time he announced himself as a candidate for said office."

The late Legislature passed a law, making it compulsory on the citizens of cities of the fourth class to send their children to school—at least all those between the ages of 7 and 14 years—unless they are physically disabled from attending, or have already acquired the common school branches of education required by law. It is made the duty of the Board of Education, the first week in every July to appoint a Truant Officer, who shall hunt up all cases of truancy; and after notification to the parents, if they still fail to send their children, they may be arrested and fined not less than $5 nor more than $20 for the first offense, nor less than $10 nor more than $50 for the second and every subsequent offense, and cost of suit. The pay shall be not less than $1 nor more than $2.50 per day. It is probable the place will be much sought after.

The Kentucky Congressman John S. Rhea, referring to the kind of man Kentucky wants for President says:

"We must have a clean, honest and loyal man, one who has no alliance with greed, trusts, monopoly or tax robbers. A man who has and can command the respect and confidence of the people because he is of them and with them and for them, one who will represent the great agricultural, laboring and business people of the United States, and not to be or become the tool of Wall Street and the 'money devils.' Such is my ideal and choice. As to just who that ideal man is I am not now prepared to say. Let time, consultation and an earnest, conscientious effort solve our differences if there be any. Name the man, then let every Democrat support him and let's wage the fight hot and fast, pushing every bolter over to the enemy, the common enemy of the Democratic party and the people alike the Republican party. Of course I am opposed to the nomination of either Cleveland or Bryan, as neither could command the support of a united Democracy."

To describe the kind of man the Democrats should nominate for the presidency is "as easy as falling off of a log," but nominating that kind of man is a very different proposition.

Spring wheat sowing has commenced in South Dakota. The ground has been clear of snow for some time and it has thawed deep enough so that wheat can be put in. Farmers are now generally sowing. The acreage is likely to be large, as wheat bears a good price, and there is a pronounced shortage of the winter kind.

Sowing oats has become general now in the trans-Missouri region and the late rains have put the soil in the best condition for working. We have been asked what was the correct amount of oats to seed to the acre. When they are drilled, two bushels will be sufficient; when broadcast, use from two and a half to three bushels. On very rich land, where there is danger of oats lodging, some have used four bushels with good results, as when they come up so thick they will not grow so rank and will, in a measure, support one another.

The rains of the past week have materially improved the winter wheat prospects in Kansas and southern Nebraska, also in Missouri. But even with this improvement there is not a promise of an average crop, although we are aware that wheat will stool now and give surprising yields where little was expected in the early days of the season.

The backward spring has called for an unusual amount of fodder and cattle can hardly get a living on grass under six weeks. Meanwhile they must be mostly fed hay. This will maen great inroads in the surplus of hay and it will doubtless improve in price. There was an unusually heavy crop of hay put in the stack last season, but the winter has been what you might call snug and so has made large demands on the hay pile.—Ex.

THE first claim from Beckham county sent to the State Auditor's office was turned down Monday and will be held up until the constitutionality of the act creating the county has been passed on by the Court of Appeals.

Russian officials are successfully guarding their plans of operation against the Japanese. It is believed that Kuropakin has his scheme well worked out and is playing a waiting game until the disposition of the army can be completed.

Nice weather this.

Between 12,000 and 15,000 head of cattle will be fed by the distilleries in Kentucky this year, according to the calculations of C. T. Garvin, of Bowling Green, who is a dealer in cattle, sheep and hogs. While there are not as many distilleries running as was the case last year, but those which are in operation are feeding cattle on mash to a greater extent than before. The cattle in the distillery pens are in good shape, and the result of the season's feeding will be entirely satisfactory to the cattle raisers. Mashfed cattle are very popular as beef in the European markets, and the epicures of the old countries consider cattle fattened on that material a much rarer delicacy than they are regarded in America. For that reason the exporters deal largely in the cattle from the yards of the Kentucky distilleries, and a neat profit is usually realized on the cattle which are fattened in that manner.

Simon Weil has the following to say in the Kentucky Farmer and Breeder about fattening cattle: It is necessary for a feeder to provide himself with a good, substantial barn, for it is the best that cattle should be sheltered from the different changes in weather. Also by this means the cattle receive pure food and get the benefit of all the feed placed before them. By feeding on the outside there is a waste of feed and manure, but this method obviates these wastes and greatly reduces the feed bills. The stock should be left loose in the barn so that they can leave it at any time for getting water. It is peremptory that stock drink pure water. It is best that they obtain this water from a running stream near the barn. The best feed is corn and clover hay. It is also best for hogs that run after cattle. Roughness, cattle must have, and all kinds of hay and straw. Farmers ought to protect and house all roughness in summer and fall. When corn is ground it will finish cattle quicker than when fed on ears, but hogs will not get as much benefit from it. My advice would be for feeding ear corn and plenty of roughness to cattle and the result will prove to be best advantage to feeders especially, where stock goes on grass in spring; but when feeders intend to market cattle out of the barn, then ground corn and five lbs. of cotton seed meal daily to each animal and clover hay will do the work, and finish a beef in from 100 to 120 days. The old style of feeding is nearly abolished and ought to be a thing of the past, and any farmer feeding on the old styles will see ruinous results before him. The main object in feeding in a barn is the manure, the greatest fertilizer that can be found and which is required on any farm, same as stock require feed. A farmer ought to feel as proud of a large quantity of manure to haul on his place as to a lot of fat stock off of it.

Japan is ordering for shipment from Kansas City, Omaha Chicago, 2,500,000 pounds of corned beef. She has already contracted in Cincinnati for 12,000 cases of mess beef. The same country is taking from a Chicago firm in 60,000 pound monthly shipments, 800,000 pounds of mess beef. By February 15, Japan will have taken from this country as food for her war forces about seven million ponnds of mess and corned beef. Russian shipments of mess beef up to February 15, from Chicago, Kansas City and Omaha, will have amounted to an aggregate of about six million pounds, inclusive of three million pounds now loade don board ships.

The price of butter and eggs is pretty good evidence that it pays to follow methods that will enable the farmer to have them to sell.

Don't go to Smitheree's auction and buy a lot of truck you can't make use of. Be wise and sell your own old rubbish and take the money and buy some new implements you need.

Pie-crust resolutions are worse than none. When you make up your mind to improve in any direction be in earnest, and success will crown honest efforts.

A hive or two of bees should be on every farm. The bees help fertilize the fruit blooms and honey is good on buckwheat cakes and the bees delight to work among the buckwheat bloom—a good combination.

Some of the readers of this paper say it was too hasty in its statement of week before last that certain parties in Burlington had smallpox, and then they proceed to argue the disease was not smallpox, because so few took it and nobody died of it. Such talk as that might carry some weight with it if the history of smallpox in Burlington in the past 40 years did not contradict it emphatically. Since 1867 there have been in Burlington five cases of smallpox—cases which were not disputed. Of these five cases only one was contracted here in Burlington, and not one of the five proved fatal. In each of the cases above referred to one or more persons were exposed, and in the case of Col. Milton Hamilton, who broke out in the county clerk's office, a great many were exposed, and his sister with whom he lived was the only person who took it from him. These facts show that because one person in a town like Burlington has smallpox it does not follow that half of the population, nor even a large percent thereof is sure to have, and that several deaths are sure to result therefrom. In the last four weeks there have been more cases of smallpox in Burlington than have been in the whole history of the town previous to that time, and yet because the cases here this time have not been more numerous, and there have not been two or three deaths from the disease there are those who declare it is not smallpox.

The quarantine has been raised as to all the patients except Mrs. James Strouse, who broke out with the disease last Saturday.

The State Board of health says:

Every child shall be vaccinated before it becomes one year old, and this Board recommends that all persons be revaccinated as often as once in five years.

All incorporated corporations or companies within the jurisdiction of this Board shall cause each new employe to be vaccinated on entrance, unless proof is furnished of recent successful vaccination.

No person shall become a member of any public school within the jurisdiction of this Board, as teacher or scholar, without furnishing a certificate from some reputable physician that he or she has been successfully vaccinated.

The State Board of health says: "The fact should be emphasized, over and over again, too, that adults almost never have chickenpox."

It says, also, that "it should be constantly borne in mind, also, that there are no such diseases as "elephant itch," "African itch," "army itch," "cedar itch" or "Cuban itch," but that these are "nigger names for smallpox."

Most religious observances can be tracked back to some common sense natural law of hygiene, and Lenten abstinence, to put it on a strictly material footing, is an example of this. Any physician will tell you that more people die annually from the results of overeating than succumb to excess in drinking. No one, of course, scruples to confess to a slight indigestion, yet nobody will own to feeling a little mixed after too much champagne. Fasting is an invaluable custom, for it enables our overworked digestion to recuperate. It is common sense natural law applied to the noblest spiritual uses, for the true religious function of fasting is to detach the soul from mere bodily gratification. —London Outlook.

It is said there have been organized thirty farmers' unions in Daviess and McLean counties, within the past month. Each organization has a committee of three men to organize unions and put them in working shape. The object is to protect themselves and get better prices for tobacco and other commodities. The tobacco growers of these counties say they will not raise half as much tobacco this year as they did in 1903. Another object of the union is to hold their present crop for better prices.

It is not the man who makes a business of farming who does the growling; its the man who comes to town every day and whittles up the groceryman's chair who says "there's nothing in farming," and there isn't—the way the whittler farms.—New Era.

Many things are cured by being endured.

Happiness is simply a stray hunk of heaven.

Doubt should be but the vestibule to decision.

The best preparation for death is the perfecting of life.

He who has an eye to the fleece has no heart for the flock.

No man is ready for his work until he has learned to wait.

A Thoghtful Man.

M. M. Austin of Winchester, Indiana, knew what to do in the hour of need. His wife had such an unusual case of stomach and liver trouble, physicians could not help her. He thought of and tried Dr. King's New Life Pills and she got relief at once and was finally cured. Only 25c, at all Drug Stores.

Our old batchelor friend, Charles Westbay, who doeth his own cooking, built a fire in the stove last Thursday morning and went to feed his horses, and when he returned he found his kitchen on fire in the vicinity of the flue. He summoned the Darktown Fire Brigade, and a conflagration was soon nipped in its incipiency. Damage to building 30 cents.

A few days since O. S. Crisler presented the RECORDER with an invitation to a ball at Union, this county, it reads: "You are respectfully invited to attend a ball to be given by N. A. Baker, Union, Boone County, Ky., Friday evening, February, 22, 1856." The above invitation was printed by Munger & Croninger, Covington, Ky., and was no doubt at that day, considered a very fine piece of work, but it would not pass muster now.

The whereabouts of A. C. Porter remains as much of a mystery as it was the day that it was discovered that he was missing. His disappearance could not have been more sudden had the ground swallowed him. Some believe he has foully dealt with, but that is not at all probable.

"Last year a gentleman purchased forty acres of land in Bourbon county, paying $6,000 therefor. On this land he raised twenty-five acres of tobacco and sold the same for $4,500. He also sold off of the land $500 worth of timber, thus making a grand total of $5,000 on an investment of $6,000. Yet there are those who say that farming does not pay. —Blue Grass Clipper.

J. M. Riddell died of kidney trouble at his home in Williams town, on Wednesday night, of last week. He was in his 81st year, was a man of extensive acquaintance, was honored and esteemed by all who knew him. His remains were brought to Burlington, last Friday, and placed in the vault, from which they will be interred by the Masons, of which order he has been an honored and prominent member for many years. Due notice will be given the lodges.

Among the good laws passed by the last legislature is one in regard to writing deeds for real estate. It requires the draftsman of the deed to state therein from whom the grantors got the property and give the number of the deed book and the page therein on which the deed is recorded, in the county clerk's office. If a county clerk records a deed that does not contain this information he is subject to a fine of $50. This information can always be found on the deed held by the grantor. Deputy county clerks, notary publics and others who prepare deeds will have to be careful in the preparation of deeds.

Taking Desperate Chances.

It is true that many contract colds and recover from them without taking any precaution or treatment, and a knowledge of this fact leads others to take their chances instead of giving their colds the needed attention. It should be borne in mind that every cold weakens the lungs, lowers the vitality, makes the system less able to withstand each succeeding cold and paves the way for more serious diseases. Can you afford to take such desperate chances when Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, famous for its cures of colds, can be had for a trifle? For Sale by all Druggists.

The big stockmen and timber men of the west who have only forty or fifty thousand acres of land and who are ambitious to increase it to one hundred thousand acres, will have to move lively and rustle some dummies and substitutes to make 160 or 320 acre entries under the timber and stone act or the desert land act or the commuter's clause of the homestead act, or they will not fulfill their desires. The country and Congress is beginning to wake up to the importance of saving this western public domain, our greatest resource to-day; with national irrigation an established government policy, and converting it into homes for settlers and home makers. It looks as though the days of the speculator and land grabber were numbered.

A shadow of gloom was cast over the entire community when it became known, Wednesday morning, that Wilber Scoft had died.

He was thrown from his horse last Sunday afternoon and received serious injuries (a broken limb) but stood it well and seemed to be getting along nicely until Tuesday evening when he suddenly grew worse and never revived.

He was 22 years, one month, and a few days of age, and his entire life has been one of usefulness and kindness, and the many excellent traits of character with which he was endowed, endeared him to his friends. The loss of his personal appearance in his home, the community and the I. O. O. F., and Rebekah Lodges, of which he was a member, seems irreparable; but we surely know that our loss is his infinite gain and this must be the consolation of his many friends.

He was so kind, generous, glad when others were happy, that we counted it among our pleasures to see his face and hear his cheerful voice, and few could be missed and lamented more than this pure-minded, useful boy.

He is survived by all the members of the family to mourn their loss, and to whom we extend our deepest sympathy, for in the separation of one so dear to them.

Short funeral services were conducted at his uncle's Mr. J. J. Lillard's, where he died, by Rev. E. B. Atwood, after which the Rebekahs held a service, and the large number of sorrowing relatives and friends, who came to pay him the last tributes of respect, spoke more for him than can here be expressed.

There's nothing like doing a thing thoroughly. Of all the Salves you ever heard of, Bucklen's Arnica Salve is the best. It sweeps away and cures Burns, Sores, Bruises, Cuts, Boils, Ulcers, Skin Eruptions and Piles. It's only 25c, and guaranteed to give satisfaction by All Druggists.

This community was shocked by the death of Wilbur Scott, son of John and Lurena Scott. He was 22 years, 1 month and 26 days old. After brief religious service at the house by Rev. Atwood, followed by the Odd-Fellows assisted by the Rebekahs, on the 1st inst., the remains were taken to the new cemetery at Bellevue and placed in the vault. The very large crowd that attended the funeral was a strong testimonial of the esteem in which the young man was held by those among whom he was raised. Death, under any circumstances, is sad, but especially is it sad when it comes to a young man who is apparently entering upon a life of usefulness and is the pride of his family. Of a bright and sunny temperament, his presence always shed a luster of happiness over those with whom he was associated. His example was one it was always well to follow. In the midst of their grief the family perceive the hand of God and recognize the beauty of the passage, "I love thee, pass under the rod." How true it is death loves a shining mark. C. H. A.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

We desire the people, readers of the Recorder, to know that the Baptists of Beaver Lick, and their former pastor, are ready to defend the position taken as to the Sacrament controversy. When the Methodists made the challenge for the debate they were informed at that time, that, owing to my being at the Theological school this month, that I could not consider the matter till at the close of our term of school. We are ready to meet them, and always have been. As to the representative man, we have not announced the name because we feel that in all "fairness" it rests with Bro. Mills to first announce his man, as he is the one that asked for the debate, and claims that his man is "ready," but refuses to announce his name. If we had forced the issue we should at the same time have announced our man, but as we are not the aggressors in this matter we feel it the duty of our brethren, "the Methodists," to announce their man first, then we will announce our man. However if they have no man ready so that they can use his name, we will announce our man by the first day of May. We will give them all the "fair play" they may wish.

As to Bro. Mills preaching on the matter, we have no wish to keep him from doing so, and do not feel in the least uneasy as to the strength of his argument. C. A. EARL.

by local application, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucus lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

THE MINERS GAVE IN.

Those in Illinois Acceded to the Operator's Ultimatum.

National President John Mitchell Was Present and Defended Miners' Position, But to No Purpose, as Operators Were Firm.

Springfield, Ill., April 1.—When matters looked darkest for a settlement of the differences between the coal operators and miners of Illinois, and a strike seemed imminent, the miners gave way and acceded to the ultimatum of the operators.

When the joint session convened Thursday afternoon the miners stated that they had counter proposals to make to the operators, namely, that the miners would waive all concessions made them regarding free oil to day men and free powder if the operators would rescind their demand for a reduction of three cents from last year's scale in the First district. This the operators refused, and after considerable discussion, in which National President John Mitchell defended the miners' position, adjournment was taken until evening.

On reconvening Thursday night the miners stated they were willing to withdraw their demand for last year's scale in the Northern district, and the joint scale committee will meet again to reconsider minor matters. Thus all danger of a strike has been averted by all reason of conservative action by the miners' organization. National President Mitchell and Herman C. Perry, the new president of the state miners' organization, were in conference with the operators for some time Thursday night.

Louisville, Ky., April 1.—After having been in conference several days, the Kentucky coal miners and operators adjourned Thursday without having reached an agreement concerning the wage scale. The disagreement, however, was not final despite the fact that the present scale expired Thursday. It was decided to defer definite action until Wednesday, April 6, the present scale to continue in effect until that time. President John Mitchell has been asked to come to Louisville and aid in a last effort to secure an amicable settlement. Secretary J. D. Wood, of the Miners' union, said Thursday afternoon: "After this we will demand and get the Indianapolis rate or we will strike." The ultimate result of the conference will affect 4,000 miners.

Salem, O., April 1.—The joint conference of the miners and operators of the Fourth Ohio sub-district adjourned Thursday afternoon without an agreement, the operators refusing to grant the miners' demands for a run of mine basis for the scale, claiming that it would mean the closing of some mines. The miners held a secret session Thursday night and it is intimated there may be a suspension of work.

TRAIN HELD UP.

Express Messenger Killed and Contents of Express Box Carried Off.

Redding, Cal., April 1.—Three masked men held up the Oregon express on the Southern Pacific railway at Copley, ten miles north of here, at 11 o'clock Thursday night, killed Express Messenger O'Neil and carried off the contents of the express box. The train is known as No. 15, and stopped at Copley, a small station, for water. The robbers blew up the car and killed the messenger before getting the treasure box. The highwaymen forced the train crew to uncouple the front engine and compelled its engineer to draw them to Kerwick, five miles south, where they disembarked and disappeared. The engine has orders now to run to this city to carry up the sheriff and a posse of armed men.

East St. Louis, Ill., April 1.—After contesting his wife's will, which cut him off with $50 and left $50,000 to European relatives, and winning the suit two weeks ago for $25,000, John Thornberg rejoiced to such an extent that he broke his leg and Thursday died of blood poisoning. There being no children, the $50,000 estate will go to relatives here and in Europe.

ST. LOUIS STRAY DOGS.

They Will Be Killed and Fed to Tribes of Filipinos at the Fair.

St. Louis, April 1.—Beginning on April fool's day, all stray dogs in St. Louis will be served daily to members of the Igorrote and other tribes of Filipinos at the World's fair. Arrangements to this effect were completed with the officers of the dog pound on Thursday.

The Igorrotes, who at home are head hunters, are very fond of dog meat and Thursday threatened to strike unless served with their favorite flesh. Accordingly, stray dogs, instead of suffering death by asphyxiation, will be slaughtered, dressed and roasted, fried, boiled, grilled or fricassed to suit the peculiar taste of the Igorrotes.

On their arrival at St. Louis recently the 300 Filipinos suffered from pneumonia. After a native council had been held it was decided by the Filipinos that the absence from their daily diet of dog meat was the cause of their suffering from pneumonia.

One of those suffering with pneumonia, by the aid of friends, managed to secure a prime piece of broiled dog steak. He also recovered. This coincidence the Igorrotes called an example of cause and effect.

THE RUSSIAN TROOPS.

The Total Number in Manchuria and Port Arthur Number 245,000.

Paris, April 1.—A St. Petersburg correspondent of the Echo de Paris says that the wife of one of Gen. Kuropatkin's orderly officers has received a telegram from her husband, saying that the general staff does not believe that there will be any great battle before September.

Russian troops in Manchuria, including Port Arthur and Vladivostok, now number 245,000, and the total may be 300,000 by the end of April and 500,000 by September, when, if the Japanese have not crossed the Yalu, Gen. Kuropatkin will advance to drive them out of Korea.

The only fear in high quarters, according to the writer, is the inability of China to restrain the mass of her troops or to prevent troops landing in a Chinese port in event of Japanese successes, however, ephemeral.

Gen. Kuropatkin has telegraphed to Gen. Misatchenko to avoid any engagements in which the security of the Russian side would be uncertain.

THE CRUISER DENVER.

She Failed to Reach Her Contract Speed on Second Trial.

Boston, April 1.—The protected cruiser Denver was given a second government speed trial test over the Cape Ann course Thursday and again failed to reach her contract requirements of 17 knots an hour, her average speed being 16.70 knots. Tidal correction may add slightly to the speed taken on the ship, but will not be sufficient to reach the contract requirements.

According to her contract the Denver was required to make 17 knots an hour in order to receive the contract price of $1,080,000. However, it was stipulated that the cruiser was to be accepted if she made a speed of 16.56 knots, but the price to be paid, should the ship not make the required 17 knots would be $1,030,000, consequently she will probably be accepted, at least at the lesser price.

A NAVAL TROPHY.

It Will Be Competed For Each Year By the Vessels.

Washington, April 1.—A trophy which will be competed for each year by the vessels of the navy has been received by Secretary Moody. It is in raised gold and shows two battleships in action. In one corner is the inscription "Trophy for Excellence in Naval Gunnery, Presented by Direction of the President of the United States, to the Vessel Making the Highest Score in Her Class at the Annual Target Practice." The trophy is a foot high and about two feet long.

SMUGGLING OF CHINESE.

An Organized Gang Is Believed to Have Been Disrupted.

Chicago, April 1.—An organized gang for the systematic smuggling of Chinese into the United States by way of the Canadian border is believed to have been disrupted by the arrest on Thursday of three Chinese, who, it is said, were active agents of the organization. The arrest of an American, the ringleader of the gang, is all that is lacking to make the breaking up of the gang complete, according to agents of the department of commerce and labor at Washington, who have been working secretly in Chicago for several weeks.

THE JAPS ADVANCING.

They Occupied Seng Chang, Korea, Without Resistance.

The Russians Are Ready to Give Them a Warm Reception Should They Again Attempt to Block Channel at Port Arthur.

Tokio, April 4.—The advance guard of the Japanese army in Northwestern Korea occupied the town of Seng Chang Saturday afternoon without opposition. Seng Chang is on the Pekin road, 18 miles west of Cheng Ju and about 40 miles south of Wiju.

When the Japanese drove the Russians out of Cheng Ju last Monday the Russians withdrew in two columns, one going over the Koak San road, and the other over the Pekin road. The Japanese advance from Cheng Ju was made very rapidly. It was anticipated that the Russians would resist this advance, but they failed to do so, and now it is not probable that there will be any further opposition south of the Yalu river.

Cheng Ju, because of its superior natural surroundings, is the strongest place between Ping Yang and Wiju. Besides these natural advantages there is an old Korean fort there, which, had it been defended with spirit, would have been hard to take. The Japanese are gratified at the comparative ease with which they drove the Russians from this port.

Russian patrols are reported to be in the country east of the Pekin road, but it is not probable that there is any considerable force of Russians in that section. The patrols are withdrawing gradually to the northward, toward the Yalu.

It is reported that the ice on the Yalu is well broken up and in the future the river must be crossed either in junks or over pontoon bridges.

Seoul, Korea, April 4.—Five Japanese transports, carrying light artillery, cavalry and infantry, have arrived at Chemulpo. The men are entraining for Seoul. Gen. Haraguchi, the newly appointed commander of the Japanese forces here, has arrived.

Port Arthur, April 4.—Preparations have been made to give the Japanese a warm reception in case they again attempt to block the harbor.

Vice Adm. Togo was right in surmising that Vice Adm. Makaroff is responsible for the change in Russian naval tactics and for the inspiration of Russian seamen.

A signal man named Andronsenko, who, during the bombardment of Vladivostok remained at a small signal station on Askold island near the enemy's ships and wired information of their movements to the fortress, has been decorated with the cross of St. George.

PORT ARTHUR WEAKENED.

The Early Capture of the Place Is Expected.

London, April 4.—Reports of further skirmishing between the Russians and Japanese in the Yalu river region are reaching London, but no reliable details are given.

The Daily Telegraph's Seoul correspondent believes that the defenses of Port Arthur have been so weakened that the early capture of the port is to be expected. There is little doubt, the correspondent says, that only a narrow passage is left and that at the first favorable opportunity the Japanese will block the channel. The Russians have taken many 12-inch guns out of their ships to arm the old and new defenses of Port Arthur.

TO FLY ABOVE WARSHIPS.

Apparatus Consists of a Car Suspended to Several Kites.

Paris, April 2.—Lieut. Schrober passed through Paris Friday bound for Port Arthur with an apparatus consisting of a car suspended from several kites, which, he says, will enable him to fly above a warship to the mast of which he will be attached by a light cable containing a telegraph wire. By means of this apparatus he thinks he will be enabled to take observations at a great distance and to convey the resultant information to the ship.

Lindsay, commissioner of education, who was also a passenger, will try to raise a fund to send 600 Porto Rican school teachers to take summer courses at various universities.

Will Not Bombard Yin Kow.

St. Petersburg, April 4.—A correspondent at Yin Kow says the opinion prevails there that the Japanese will not bombard that place because 99 per cent. of the population is made up of Chinese, who are not at war with Japan.

Discredits China's Intentions.

St. Petersburg, April 4.—The Russky Viedomosti's correspondent at the front says that the Russians living in Manchuria discredit the Pekin's government's observance of the declaration of neutrality.

FIFTY-EIGHTH CONGRESS.

Regular Session.

Washington, March 31.—Senate—The senate Wednesday begun consideration of the post office appropriation bill and it was the signal for a revival of the democratic demand for an investigation into the charges of corruption in the post office department. The debate was initiated by Mr. Gorman, who spoke for almost two hours in criticism of the course of the republican party in the senate in refusing an inquiry, at the same time charging the post office committee with undue haste in reporting the bill, as he did the republican party with a desire to adjourn congress at an exceptionally early date in order to meet the wishes of the president. Mr. Clay contended that there should be a congressional inquiry, saying that the charges against Mr. Heath, ex-first assistant postmaster general, were such as to demand investigation. Mr. Penrose and Mr. Lodge spoke for the republican side of the chamber, defending the committee on post offices against the charge of haste.

House—Substantial progress was made by the house in the consideration of the sundry civil bill, 51 pages being disposed of, leaving only 21 to be read. No amendments of general importance were made. Mr. Bartlett (Ga.) briefly replied to the statements of Mr. Gillett (Mass.) made last Monday on the Negro question. He said that the Massachusetts member had lectured the south for disregard of violations of the law, whereas in the city of Marion, Mass., persons who had tarred and feathered a man and woman had been acquitted and were paraded through the streets as heroes. He believed that the people of the south are entitled to work out the Negro problem "As God shall will it." Mr. Crumpacker (Ind.) declared that 3,000 persons have been mobbed and put to death in the last 25 years in the United States.

Washington, April 1.—Senate—The attention of the senate was divided Thursday between the bill for the repeal of the desert land, the timber and stone and the homestead commutation laws and the post office appropriation bill. The repeal bill was taken up only for the purpose of discussion, and Mr. Clark (Wyo.) was the principal speaker. He contested the position taken by Mr. Gibson that there have been great frauds in the administration of the land laws in the west. The general debate on the post office bill was confined largely to a speech by Mr. McCreary (Ind.) interrupted by republican senators. Mr. McCreary charged in the main that the policy of an early adjournment of congress had been adopted in order to avoid legislation not desired by the republican leaders.

House—Consideration of the sundry civil appropriation bill was concluded in the house and the bill was about to be passed when Mr. Sulzer forced a roll call on a motion to commit the bill with instructions to strike out the paragraph appropriating $135,000 for rents of the New York customs house. The vote showed a quorum was not present and adjournment was taken until Friday. The right of boards of directors of state homes for disabled volunteer soldiers to retain certain portions of pension money received by the inmates was discussed at length. Mr. Bell (Cal.) assailed his own state for permitting a canteen to be established in the California state home and charged that the old soldiers were allowed to draw their pension money from the home in most instances only through canteen checks. After extended debate an amendment by Mr. Bell to correct the evils complained of was adopted.

Washington, April 2.—Senate—Good Friday was devoted by the senate to almost a continuous discussion of political questions. The time until 2 o'clock was devoted to consideration of the Carmack resolution proposing an inquiry into the legality of the recent executive old age pension order. Mr. Mallory was the principal speaker, but he was frequently interrupted by republican senators. He contended that Secretary Hitchcock had transcended the limits of executive authority in issuing the order. The latter half of the day was devoted to the post office appropriation bill, but no appreciable progress was made with that measure, the speeches on it being in the main political, and of general character. There was a spirited debate between Mr. Simmons and Mr. Beveridge on the question of the propriety of a congressional investigation into the affairs of the post office department.

House—The house passed the sundry civil appropriation bill, after voting down a proposition by Mr. Sulzer to recommit it with instructions to strike out the appropriation of $136,600 for rent of the New York custom house. The remainder of the day was devoted to discussion of the conference report on the army appropriation bill. With the exception of one amendment, providing certain increases in the signal corps, the house disagreed to all other important senate amendments and the bill was sent back to conference. The proposition to consolidate the office of the adjutant general during which the prospective presidential nominees of the two political parties in the next campaign were freely discussed.

Colombia Loses Suit.

Paris, April 1.—The first civil tribunal of the Seine Thursday decided the case of the republic of Colombia against the Panama Canal Co. in favor of the defendants. The decision holds that the complaint of Colombia is not receivable, and condemns the plaintiffs to pay the costs of the action. This decision has the effect of removing legal obstacles in the way of the transfer of the canal concession from the company to the United States.

To Investigate Post Office Department.

Washington, April 2.—Senator Culberson Friday proposed an amendment to the post office appropriation bill providing for an investigation of the post office department by a joint committee of three senators and five members of the house.

The Impeachment of Judge Swayne.

Washington, April 2.—An agreement has been reached whereby a resolution to impeach Judge Charles Swayné, of the Northern district of Florida, will be called up for consideration in the house next Thursday.

NOT SUPERLATIVELY POOR.

Land That a Poverty-Stricken Man Was Not Bad Enough Off to Want.

Bourke Cockran was condemning a certain popular novel, relates the New York Tribune.

"This novel," he said, "is as poor and barren as Elmo county land."

"Is Elmo county land very poor and barren?" asked one of Mr. Cockran's interlocutors.

"Is it?" said he. "Well, I should say it is. Once two strangers rode on horseback through Elmo county, and the barrenness of the land amazed them. Nothing but weeds and rocks everywhere. As they passed a farmhouse they saw an old man sitting in the garden, and they said:

"'Poor chap! Poor, poverty stricken old fellow!'

"'Gents, I hain't so poor an' poverty stricken as ye think. I don't own none o' this land.'"

In the Spring.

Lowndes, Mo., April 4th.—Mrs. H. C. Harty, of this place, says:

"For years I was in very bad health. Every spring I would get so low that I was unable to do my own work. It seemed to be worse in the spring than any other time of the year. I was very weak and miserable and had much pain in my back and head. I saw Dodd's Kidney Pills advertised last spring and began treatment of them and they have certainly done me more good than anything I have ever used.

"I was all right last spring and felt better than I have for over ten years. I am fifty years of age and am stronger to-day than I have been for many years and I give Dodd's Kidney Pills credit for the wonderful improvement."

The statement of Mrs. Harty is one one of a great many where Dodd's Kidney Pills have proven themselves to be the very best spring medicine. They are unsurpassed as a tonic and are the only medicine used in thousands of families.

Not Wasteful.

"No, indeed," replied the inveterate individual. "I never smoke more than one cigar at a time."—Cincinnati Times-Star.

REACH THE SPOT.

To cure an aching back,
The pains of rheumatism,
The tired-out feelings,
You must reach the spot—get at the cause.

In most cases 'tis the kidneys.

Doan's Kidney Pills are for the kidneys.

Charles Bierbach, stone contractor, living at 2035 Chestnut St., Erie, Pa., says: "For two years I had kidney trouble and there was such a severe pain through my loins and limbs that I could not stoop or straighten up without great pain, had difficulty in getting about and was unable to rest at night, arising in the morning tired and worn out. The kidney secretions were irregular and deposited a heavy sediment. Doctors treated me for rheumatism but failed to help me. I lost all confidence in medicine and began to feel as if life were not worth living. Doan's Kidney Pills, however, relieved me so quickly and so thoroughly that I gladly made a statement to that effect for publication. This was in 1898, and during the six years which have elapsed I have never known Doan's Kidney Pills to fail. They cured my wife of a severe case of backache in the same thorough manner."

A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine which cured Mr. Bierbach will be mailed on application to any part of the United States. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. For sale by all druggists, price 50 cents per box.

OHIO TOWNS FLOODED.

Nearly Half of Findlay Covered With Water.

There Was Fear That the Banks of the Grand Reservoir Will Break—The Situation at Ottawa Is Very Serious.

Findlay, O., April 2.—The most destructive flood in the history of Hancock county is sweeping down the Blanchard river and overrunning its banks for a mile. The high water mark was reached at 2 o'clock Friday afternoon and the water is still rising. Main street, for nearly a mile, is a running stream. Nearly half the city is covered with water and hundreds of families are homeless. The courthouse is partly surrounded, the water covering the sidewalks. The rural regions are suffering a great loss. A large amount of cattle is being swept away and the farmers are compelled to leave their homes. Thousands of dollars worth of merchandise in the flooded basements on Main and adjoining streets has been destroyed.

Ottawa, O., April 2.—The flood situation here is serious, the Blanchard river being out of its banks. The people in the lower sections of the town have left their homes. H. C. McAdow, a livery man, of Ottawa, and Frank Warnecke, of Ottoville, were drowned at Kalia, nine miles south of here, Friday evening, while trying to drive across a fill to a bridge. The bodies have not been recovered.

Canton, O., April 2.—Train service into Canton has been suspended nearly all day. There has been no mail service since early Friday morning. There were washouts on all sides. Ralph Edelman, 13 years old, was drowned in East creek Friday afternoon.

Delaware, O., April 2.—High waters are raging and the loss to property will be great. About noon Friday the Olentangy broke its banks, and the water rushed over the resident quarter. The first story of many houses were inundated, and the occupants were removed from their homes in boats by the police. The Delaware Gas Co. was compelled to close its retorts and the electric light company is unable to furnish street lighting.

Bucyrus, O., April 2.—All records for 30 years were broken here Friday by the high water in the Sandusky river. The northern part of Bucyrus was cut off and buildings along the bottoms were swept away.

A break in the gas main left houses dark and fireless. The water was receding Friday night.

Bellefontaine, O., April 4.—The levees of the Lewiston reservoir, although weak and insecure in many places, did not give way during Saturday night, notwithstanding a wall of water three feet in height was whipped over the embankments by a strong north wind, which blew throughout the entire night. The slight break in the waste weir Saturday caused by one of the heavier timber sections of the weir dropping from its position had no result in any of the other sections dropping out of position and the weir remained practically intact. The timbers of the weir have been in position 11 years and are rotten. Sunday the wind had abated and the pressure of the water on the levees has been so greatly reduced that providing there is no more rain or wind during the next 48 hours the danger of a break will be at an end.

Until daybreak Sunday morning the farmers toiled incessantly along the bank supporting it in weakest places with grain bags filled with sand and to their industry and watchfulness can be attributed the averting of a break. At daybreak the water began to recede and all day there has been a gradual fall.

Celina, O., April 4.—All fear has been passed that Lake Mercer will break its banks unless there is a heavy rain in the near future. A large force of men are working on the east bank of the Grand reservoir all day, cutting trees down, putting brush and logs in the reservoir to break the waves, and sacks of sand and rocks against the bank, keeping it from washing away. A very slight wind has been blowing, but it has shifted to the southeast. Many oil derricks on the lake have been blown down. Water is still pouring over the waste way.

The C., H. & D. and Cincinnati Northern tracks are under water in Beaver bottoms. Thousands of spectators crowded both banks viewing the big lake and damage caused by the flood. Estimated damages over $100,000.

Defiance, O., April 4.—The crest of the worst flood ever experienced in Defiance was reached at 6 o'clock Sunday morning, but as yet the water has only fallen two inches. The mammoth ice house, with 12,000 tons of ice, was wrecked by the flood. The water undermined the foundations and the brick wall crumbled and fell in the stream, taking roof and contents.

The opera house and amusement halls at Island park are submerged. Many bridges throughout the county are ruined and the damage will reach $40,000.

Gen. Payne's Condition.

JUMPED TO HIS DEATH.

Sidney Johnston Hayden Leaped From a New York Skyscraper.

New York, April 2.—Sidney Johnston Hayden, of the Hotel Holley, Friday jumped to the street from the 21st floor of a building at Broadway and New street. Nearly every bone in his body was broken and he was dead when pedestrians reached him.

Hayden went into one of the unoccupied offices on the top floor of the New street side, raised a window, laid an umbrella he carried on the ledge, crawled out and jumped. His body came down, making one full turn backward, and struck the pavement.

Hayden was 55 years old. Nothing has been discovered by the police about the suicide's family or his business. In his pocket was a letter from General Auditor Young, of the Union Pacific railroad, indicating that Hayden had recently applied to him for a position.

Louisville, Ky., April 2.—Sidney Johnston Hayden, who committed suicide in New York by jumping from the top floor of a skyscraper, was prominent as a railroad man and was related to many prominent Kentuckians. During his residence in Louisville some years ago he was one of the chief clerks in the auditor's office of the L. & N. railroad. After leaving Louisville he became auditor of the Choctaw, Oklahoma & Gulf railroad. Later he opened an office as expert accountant in New York.

He was a bachelor. His mother, Mrs. Anna G. Hayden, of Louisville, is the only surviving member of his immediate family. A cousin, James J. Buckner, jr., is president of the Louisville board of trade.

BEET SUGAR INDUSTRY.

President Sent a Report on Its Progress to the Congress.

Washington, April 2.—The president sent to congress a long report on the progress of the beet sugar industry of the United States during the year 1903. The report was prepared by Charles F. Saylor, special agent of the department of agriculture, and includes the results of personal observations and investigations in the 56 factories in the United States. Mr. Saylor says the industry can be no longer treated as an experiment; that successful beet raising and sugar producing is an assured fact. Four factories have been placed in operation since the last report.

FAIR FOR CHARITY.

To Be Held in Washington to Aid the Red Cross Society.

It Will Be Attended Practically By the Entire Cabinet, Members of Diplomatic Corps, Supreme Court and Congress.

Washington, April 4.—To relieve the wounded of friend and foe alike left on the battlefields of the war." In these few words the Countess Marguerite Cassini, the daughter of the Russian ambassador, told a correspondent at the embassy the object of the fair which, under her direction, will be held in Washington April 27 in aid of the Russian Red Cross society. A week ago Sunday the countess determined to do something for the aid of the Russian Red Cross, and at once started the cables to Paris and St. Petersburg working, the articles for the fair were ordered and hundreds of invitations for assistance were sent to all parts of the United States. In making her appeal to the American people, the countess emphasizes the fact that the undertaking was not partisan in its object. "The Red Cross society is an international humanitarian organization wholly divorced from politics. It is in the aid of that society that my fair is to be held," said the countess, in outlining the plan to her friends.

The past week has brought to the countess over $4,000 in cash subscriptions to the Red Cross funds and articles valued at hundreds of dollars for sale at the fair.

In the mail Sunday came a letter from a jeweler in New York city. Enclosed was a pair of diamond earrings which his little daughter, removing them from her ears, had asked her father to sell "to help the little children whose fathers are killed in this war." The mother of the child gave her watch, a valuable one, and the father added to the collection a diamond scarfpin. These will be auctioned off at the fair.

Heading the list of patronesses is Mrs. John Hay, the wife of the secretary of state. The list includes Mrs. E. A. Hitchcock, wife of the secretary of the interior; Mrs. Henry Cabot Lodge, wife of the senator from Massachusetts; Mrs. William S. Cowles, wife of Commodore Cowles, of the navy and sister of the president; Baroness Speck von Sternburg, the German ambassadress; Mme. Jusserand, the French ambassadress; Lady Durand, the British ambassadress; Baroness Moncheur, the wife of the Belgian minister; Senora Caldcron, the wife of the Peruvian minister; Countess Collere, the wife of the Italian charge d'affaires; Mrs. Ogden Mills, of New York; Mrs. Potter Palmer, of Chicago, and many others.

The affair will be attended by practically the entire cabinet, the members of the diplomatic corps, the supreme court and members of congress. The countess, however, is desirous that its guests shall not be confined to the official set, but that all who desire to aid the Red Cross shall be present at the fair or contribute.

Mme. Jessurand, the French ambassadress, will preside at the Russian booth, and Mrs. Wadsworth at the French. The fair will be held in the largest garden available from 4 p. m. to midnight. A special troupe is coming from New York to give a vaudeville performance in the evening.

Sunday the countess sent telegrams to Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan and Mr. Andrew Carnegie advising them of the entertainment and its objects. The proceeds of the fair, together with the cash subscriptions, will be forwarded promptly to St. Petersburg.

EXPLOSION IN BANK BUILDING.

Three Men Were Killed and Several Others Injured.

Marshalltown, Ia., April 4.—An explosion in the Citizens' national bank building at Alba Sunday morning caused three deaths and injured several. The dead are: R. Ramsey, Edward Dougherty, Richard Grimes.

The cause of the explosion is unknown, but it is supposed it originated in the heating plant. Besides the bank building, a clothing store and two grocery stores were destroyed by fire. The loss is $75,000.

Oldest Traveling Man Reported Dying.

Racine, Wis., April 4.—Delos S. Mills, the oldest traveling man in the United States, is dying at his home here. He was on the road for 57 years and is 86 years old. A short time ago he and his wife celebrated their 61st wedding anniversary. He is suffering from internal injuries and fractured ribs, the result of a fall.

Barney Oldfield Arrested.

New Orleans, April 4.—Barney Oldfield, the world's champion automobile driver, came all the way to New Orleans to be arrested, for the first time in his life, for scorching on a public street. He paid a fine and left for Florida, where he is to lower Vanderbilt's record for a mile.

Had An Extra One.

St. Paul, Minn., April 4.—Frank Ghelin was operated upon for appendicitis at the Swedish hospital, Minneapolis, and the physicians found to their amazement that he possessed two appendices. This condition is unheard of in medical history.

Gives Birth to Quintet.

Denison, Tex., April 4.—Mrs. May Bradley, wife of a ranchman, living near Kiowa, I. T., has become the mother of five children, each weighing seven pounds. The children are healthy and strong.

THE AIRSHIP CONTESTS.

The World's Fair Management Announces Changes in the Rules.

St. Louis, April 4.—The World's fair has announced the following changes in the rules governing the airship contest: The minimum speed required in the race for the grand prize of $100,000 is 18¾ miles an hour instead of 20 miles. Formal entries will be received until June 1 instead of closing May 1. The prize for the highest altitude attained is withdrawn because of the great danger in such contests. There will be only eight races for spherical balloons, instead of ten, and they will begin the first Monday in June. There will be no races in May. Prizes of cups, medals and other trophies are offered for amateur balloon races to be held the second and fourth Monday in September. The exposition company will furnish free hydrogen gas for all contestants. Foreign contestants may ship their apparatus direct to St. Louis, thus escaping the customs inspection at the coast. Arrangements have been made with the government to permit the balloons to leave the fair grounds in races, but they must be returned unless wrecked, because the grounds are a government bonded warehouse.

Up to date 34 entries have been filed. Only six contestants have thus far entered, including M. Santos-Dumont and M. Lebaudy.

CHOIR BOYS POISONED.

Twenty-Seven Taken Sick During Morning Easter Services.

Minneapolis, Minn., April 4.—Twenty-seven members of the boys' choir of Gethsemane Episcopal church of this city were taken sick during the morning Easter service, and at an early hour Sunday night it was feared that several of them might die. The boys sang at the early service at 6:30 o'clock, and were then served with breakfast by the Ladies' Guild in the Guild hall of the church. When the time came for the 10:30 service several of the boys complained of feeling ill, and before the service ended 14 had been forced to retire because of nausea.

The breakfast was a simple one, including pork tenderloin, potatoes stewed in milk, doughnuts and coffee. At first it was thought that the poisoning was due to trichnae, but this theory was questioned later, the pork having been analyzed and found to be absolutely pure. Theories of ptomaine poisoning were advanced, but the physicians were unable to suggest a plausible reason for the boys' illness.

GAVE HIMSELF UP.

Says He, With Another Man, Stole a Valuable Express Package.

New York, April 4.—A man who gave the name of Walter W. Wilson walked into police headquarters Sunday and announced that on August 1, 1903, he and a partner, who were drivers for the United States Express Co., in Pittsburg, stole a package containing $1,180 from that company. The partner, he said, is serving a six-year sentence. Wilson was held for examination.

Pittsburg, April 4.—Wilson was the driver of a United States express wagon and was entrusted with a package of money to be delivered to a bank. At the time Wilson said he placed the package under the wagon seat but upon reaching the bank the money was missing. Wilson's helper had also disappeared. The helper was arrested later in the day and most of the money recovered. The helper was sentenced to six years imprisonment while Wilson was merely discharged from the company's employ for carelessness.

SWAYNE'S CASE.

An Oversight Is Likely to Delay Impeachment Proceedings.

Washington, April 4.—The proceedings in the impeachment of Judge Swayne, of Florida, are liable to be delayed until the next session of congress. In reporting in favor of impeachment the majority of the house judiciary committee failed to give all the testimony on which the report was based. The older members regard this as a serious oversight.

There is no purpose to make the discussion of the reports partisan, and the democrats and republicans agree that it would be advisable to recommit the reports to the committee, with instructions to give the house all the evidence taken at the hearings.

Troops Ordered From Telluride, Col.

Denver, Col., April 4.—According to special dispatches from Telluride, all of the troops sent there when martial law was re-established ten days ago, with the exception of Meeker cavalry and the home troops, left the camp Sunday under orders to proceed to their home stations. This leaves less than 100 militiamen at Camp Telluride. The returning soldiers traveled in two special trains and with them were five military prisoners and seven others, deported by orders of the military. They were taken as far as Gunnison.

Cape Haytien, April 4.—A dispatch received here from Monte Cristi, Santo Domingo, reports that Gens. Epifanio Rodriguez and Clena Navarro attacked that place and that Gen. Jiminez, being without ammunition, abandoned the town and left the country.

State News Happenings

A BIG COAL DEAL.

One Involving 40,000 Acres in Eastern Kentucky Has Been Closed.

Sergent, Ky., March 31.—Fred J. Andrews, of Condersport, Pa., representing a wealthy Pennsylvania syndicate, had just closed a deal on 40,000 acres of fine coal and timber lands in Letcher, Knott and Perry counties, making the largest deal of the kind consummated here in years. The price paid was $15 per acre. This deal will mean much for the development of the Eastern Kentucky coal fields, and within the next few years great developments will take place. Mr. Andrews said Wednesday that at least two distinct lines of railroads would be built to develop their property within the next two years. "One of them," said he, "is the extension of the Lexington and Eastern from Jackson." In all probability the other extension will be the Cumberland Valley branch of the Louisville & Nashville from Harlan Courthouse. There is greater activity in Kentucky coal land than was ever evidenced before. In many localities coal lands are selling for $20 and even $40 per acre.

FIVE MILES WIDE.

The Ohio River in Some Places Near Paducah, Ky.

Paducah, Ky., April 2.—Friday night there was over 43 feet on the gauge, and local rivermen are predicting that the Ohio will go to 45 or 50 feet because of the fresh rises and heavy rains up the river. In places the Ohio is five miles wide. Wheat crops have been submerged and thousands of acres will be ruined. Fifty feet would put water over most of the city. The marine ways have already shut down. The high water is preventing sand being taken from the bars and building is generally suspended here.

WEDDING POSTPONED.

The Groom Was So Tall His Head Struck the Door Frame.

Owensboro, Ky., March 31.—L. D. Hasher, a well-known young man of this county, whose stature is six feet four inches, is the victim of a peculiar accident. He was to have been married Wednesday, and in the excitement of the occasion forgot to duck when he passed rapidly through a door. The door frame struck him just at the edge of the scalp for three inches. He was unconscious for some time, and the attention of a surgeon was required. The wedding has been postponed.

Father and Son Killed.

Burnside, Ky., March 31.—A fast north-bound mail and express, train No. 2, Q. & C., rounding a curve between Burnside and Tateville, struck a cow on the track, knocking the animal against Norton Morgan, an aged man, and his 14-year-old son, Oscar Morgan. Father and son were taken aboard the train to be treated at Somerset hospital, but both died before reaching Somerset.

Tried to Get Even With a Railway.

Newport, Ky., April 2.—Louisa Kage, who lives alone in a little cottage near the Chesapeake & Ohio railway tracks, in Johu street, was fined $10 for dumping garbage on the tracks. The woman said she was only trying to get even because, she says, the railway drainage runs into her cistern. She was unable to pay her fine and went to jail.

Two New Banks Are In Sight.

Mt. Sterling, Ky., April 1.—Efforts are being made to establish two new banks in the mountains, one at Inez, Martin county, and the other at Salyersville, Magoffin county. It is said that John C. C. Mayo is behind both. The capital of the new banks, if established, will be $15,000.

Will Make a Test Case.

Louisville, Ky., April 2.—An agreement has been reached between Frank A. Lucas, state revenue agent from Paducah, who has sued the state banks for more than $1,000,000 back taxes, and Judge Alex P. Humphrey, of counsel for the bankers, to make a test case of the suit filed against the Bank of Commerce.

Two Good Wells.

Mt. Sterling, Ky., April 1.—Frank J. Craig, of this city, has drilled two wells for the Estill County Oil Co. this week, both of which are ten-barrel producers. The oil is of an excellent grade, and Mr. Craig says will be good for at least 40 barrels when shot.

New Coal Field.

Morehead, Ky., April 1.—An eight-foot vein of cannel coal has been found on Brushy Fork, near here, on the farm of John E. Johnson, a local merchant. The new field is on the direct route of the Cincinnati, Flemingsburg & Ashland railroad.

Tobacco Factory Destroyed.

Greenville, Ky., April 1.—The tobacco factory of E. Rice was destroyed by fire early Thursday morning. About 450,000 pounds of tobacco were burned, together with the machinery, bringing the loss up to about $20,000, with only $3,000 insurance.

Sues For $10,000 Damages.

Henderson, Ky., April 2.—S. W. Gibson sued the National Life and Accident Assurance Co., of Nashville, Tenn., and N. N. Nicholson, local manager, for $10,000 damages for alleged malicious prosecution.

ENGLISH LAD.

He Worked Three-Quarters of a Mile in 1:18 3-4.

Louisville, Ky., April 1.—English Lad, the Kentucky Derby favorite, with a good-sized boy on his back, was sent three quarters of a mile Thursday and he negotiated the distance in 1:18¾, finishing strong.

Dell Leath, another Kentucky Derby colt, was called on for three-quarters and he worked the distance in 1:19½.

Lingnist, the good handicap horse, belonging to Joe Pugh, the Covington politician, was breezed a half and gave every evidence that he will stand training and prove an important factor in the big eastern races the next season.

A SMALL RIOT.

Five Non-Union Butchers Were Badly Used Up By Strikers.

Louisville, Ky., April 2.—A small riot occurred Friday night near Johnson and Main streets between striking butchers and non-union men who have taken their places in the plant of the Louisville Packing Co., and four non-union men were badly beaten and one man shot by a gang of strikers who waylaid them as they left the plant. Only two of the strikers who are said to have engaged in the riot are under arrest. They are J. T. Wolverton and Dud Smith. All of the injured men will recover.

SALES WERE LARGE.

Bitters Said to Contain Whisky Was Sold in Kentucky.

Lexington, Ky., April 2.—The grand jury of Morgan county, sitting in West Liberty, returned indictments Friday against every merchant in the town who has been selling a certain brand of bitters. The basis of the indictments lies in the allegation that these bitters contain a large proportion of alcohol and are really intoxicating.

In lieu of the original article the people of this community have been using the bitters as a beverage, it is said, and large quantities have been sold.

Heavy Rainfall at Owensboro.

Owensboro, Ky., April 1.—Another heavy rain is falling at Owensboro and throughout Daviess and surrounding counties. Small streams in the low lands, which are already flooded, will be sent on a rampage again. The Ohio is falling very slowly at this point, but Green river tributaries are rising rapidly. Much valuable wheat land is under water.

No Trace of a Missing Man.

Petersburg, Ky., April 2.—A. C. Porter, the wealthy young farmer who went to Cincinnati last Saturday, and was last seen on Vine street Sunday morning, is still missing. It is believed that he was robbed, then murdered and his body disposed of, as he always carried a large amount of money with him. He was related to ex-Gov. Porter, of Indiana.

Kentucky Corporations.

Frankfort, Ky., April 2.—The following companies filed incorporation articles with the secretary of state: Winona Coal and Coke Co., of Bell county, with $50,000 capital stock. The Four Mile Coal and Coke Co., of Bell county, increased its stock from $2,000 to $25,000.

Poolmen Indicted.

Louisville, Ky., March 31.—The grand jury has returned indictments against the proprietors of the pool rooms now being operated in Jefferson county, just south of the city limits. The indictments charge them with unlawfully maintaining and operating a common nuisance.

Killed Her Son.

Mt. Vernon, Ky., April 2.—The news reached here that Mrs. Tom Bullin, of near Wildie, this county, had gone insane and killed her 18-year-old son, who was a cripple, by splitting his head with an ax. She escaped to the woods and citizens of that section are scouring the country for her.

Lon Herr Wedded.

Lexington, Ky., March 31.—Lon Herr, of this city, and Miss Anna B. Nash, of Syracuse, N. Y., were married Thursday in Cincinnati. The groom is a nephew of the late Charley Herr, the noted Kentucky horseman, and the bride is a niece of Bishop Shipman.

Bound Over to the Grand Jury.

West Liberty, Ky., April 1.—Raney Burton, of Caney, this county, charged with robbing the post office at Caney, had his examining trial before United States Commissioner Cisco, and was held to answer in the United States circuit court in the sum of $500.

Held For Horse Stealing.

Newport, Ky., April 2.—O. C. Mathews, alias T. M. Davis, alias William Johnston, was arraigned in police court Friday on a charge of horse stealing. Mathews denied stealing the horse, but refused to take the stand in his own defense.

A New Trial Granted.

Hopkinsville, Ky., April 2.—Charles Finch, one of the four Negroes condemned to death for the murder of the unknown man at Pembroke, has been granted a new trial, and the case was continued until the June term.

It is now generally agreed that man is expected to work out his own life problem, the age of miracles and special dispensations being long past. Therefore when the boy, from the highest social grade to the lowest, is found to be the moral inferior of the girl of his own age and station even the least thoughtful will understand that there must be grave fault in training to bring about such a result. That the case may not seem to be overstated, let representative facts be cited. For example, educators in the public schools are at the moment demanding the return of corporal punishment as a disciplinary measure for boys. Asked, "If the law were passed would it not have to apply also to girls?" It was answered that although it would the question was of no moment, as when a similar law was operative a few years ago not a girl had made herself eligible for rod punishment. The agitation is wholly in behalf of boys. Take another example: In Harvard university this term the dean of the Lawrence Scientific school, Professor Shaler, appeared before the 600 students in the geology class and delivered a scathing address on their conduct toward a substitute professor. This had consisted in hurling copper cents, chalk, books and old shoes. At a later lecture the missiles included two eggs. The justly indignant dean stated that during most of the thirty years he had been instructor his audiences had been made up of gentlemen, but that for the last few years classes of loafers had been coming into the university.

Now, to one who disbelieves, as all intelligent persons must, in inherent moral superiority of girls and women there must be some reason for this universal barbarism of the boy, for that is what ails him. The reason is not far to seek, and it is all epitomized in that much quoted and much esteemed maxim, "Boys will be boys." From the time, in his baby days, when he is given a drum or a trumpet or some other ear splitting, noise producing article and encouragement to disregard the rights of others in the matter of reasonable quiet until he passes from parental control he is allowed a license and tolerated in lines of conduct which breed in him a profound contempt for the rights of any whom he may bully or override. At the bottom of all boyish wrongdoing is that indifference to the rights of others. The remedy lies wholly with parents and educators.

Let us hope the time is not far distant when the ideal for boys will be changed from "boys will be boys" (with all the licenses therein implied) to high chivalry in all things. —Vogue.

Farmers can, far more often than they do, use the local paper as a mean of communicating with the general public. When a farmer wishes to buy some certain thing in the line of stock or grain, or needs help on the farm or in the farm home, or has for sale such things as do not naturally seek the common market, a local advertisement in his home paper will nine times out of ten find him some man with the things he wants or a buyer for the thing which he desires to sell. This thing is worth trying. The cost is small and the results are almost always satisfactory.

It is certainly a most wonderful liniment." For sale by all Druggists.

Resolutions of Respect.

Resolutions of respect adopted by Alline Lodge I. O. O. F., on the death of brother Wilbur Scott.

We have lost a kind and loving friend and brother. God, in His allwise Providence knows best, and we humbly submit to His will, for He doeth all things well.

Truly we live in a world where solemn shadows are continually falling upon our path—shadows that teach us the uncertainty of all temporal blessings, and warn us that here there is no abiding stay. We have, however, the blessed satisfaction of knowing that death cannot enter that place to which the departed are removed.

Let Hope and Faith, dear friends, parents, brothers and sisters mingle with your natural sorrow. Look to that future where the sundered ties of earth are reunited. Therefore, be it

Resolved, That this lodge extends to the grief-stricken family its heart-felt sympathy, and that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, and also be made a part of the lodge record.

Whereas, Death has visited our Lodge and claimed a brother in the death of Brother Wilbur Scott, we have lost a kind and loving friend and brother. The recollecton of him who has so lately departed is so full of painful regret that we will not dwell on this dark side of the picture, but rather look to the brighter aspect, in the hope that he has gone to a happier sphere, and that what is lost to you is to him unspeakable gain—We add no more, loving parents, brothers and sisters, but our fervent prayer is that you may be divinely comforted in your sore trials and be roused from your grief by claims of duty to those whose welfare demands your care and attention.

Resolved, That this Lodge extends to the grief-stricken family its heartfelt sympathy in their sore bereavement, and that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, and also be made a part of the Lodge record.

A few days after the proposal was made and accepted Mr. Ryle took the hen over. Mr. Walton looked her over critically, and said, "Mr. Ryle, it is a gobbler." Mr. Ryle said, "no;" Jack said "yes by gummie its a gobbler." Man like, Ryle placed the blame on his wife, and said, "I told the old woman it was a gobbler." They laughed heartily over the joke, Mr. Ryle besought Jack to keep the joke a secret, which he agreed to do, and to all of Mrs. Walton's questions as to why the heu was taken back, Jack was as mum as an oyster, and Ryle was deaf to all his wife's questions. A CENSUS BULLETIN.

Present Population of the United States 79,900,389.

Country as a Whole and Most of the States Are Growing With a Steadily Decreasing Percentage of Increase.

Washington, April 8.—The census bureau Thursday, basing its figures on the census of 1900, estimates the present population of the United States, exclusive of Alaska and in the insular possessions, as 79,900,389, an increase of 3,905,814 over 1900.

The bureau of the census has decided to make annual estimates of population based upon what is known as the arithmetical method. This rests upon the assumption that the annual increase for each year since the last census will be one-tenth of the decennial increase between the last two census. The country as a whole and most of the states and cities are growing with a steadily decreasing per cent. of increase. As this condition has obtained in the United States for the last 20 years, it is likely to hold good in the immediate future. Under such conditions the arithmetical method has been proved more accurate than any alternative method. Estimates by this method based on the census population of 1880 and 1890 were made for the 78 cities, each of which had over 50,000 inhabitants in 1900 and the results compared with the census count.

The estimates give these cities a total annual increase between 1890 and 1900 of 407,028. The count showed an actual average increase in 414,793, or closer than estimated based on votes cast or number of names in a directory or a local census of school children. Of course, in a number of individual cases the estimates which have been made will ultimately be proved to be wide of the truth, but even in such cases the bureau of the census believes that they will be of value for the only purpose for which they have actually been prepared; namely, to establish a basis for the computation of death and birth rates, etc. After correspondence with all the cities reported, very careful computations have been made of changes in municipal areas, and yet in many cases the population of cities may not be estimated to be as large as local conditions really warrant. These estimates have the advantage of being prepared in a conservative and unbiased way.

Referring to the inclusion of suburbs in cities, the bulletin says that of the 438 cities with 10,000 or more population, 162 annexed territory between June 1, 1890, and June 1, 1903. There are no cities credited with 25,000 population in Mississippi, Oklahoma, South Dakota, Wyoming, Vermont and North Carolina. The following are the estimates of the population in 1903 of all cities given 25,000 and upward in the following states:

Illinois—Aurora, 25,485; Chicago, 1,873,880; East St. Louis, 34,007; Joliet, 30,769; Peoria, 52,094; Quincy, 37,650; Rockford, 33,361; Springfield, 36,211.

Iowa—Cedar Rapids, 27,948; Council Bluffs, 29,171; Davenport, 37,768; Des Moines, 65,754; Dubuque, 38,094; Sioux City, 31,701.

Ohio—Akron, 47,833; Canton, 32,011; Cincinnati, 332,934; Cleveland, 414,950; Columbus, 135,487; Dayton, 92,566; Hamilton, 25,819; Lima, 65,445; Springfield, 40,161; Toledo, 141,001; Youngstown, 48,386.

Pennsylvania — Allegheny, 138,018; Allentown, 38,573; Altoona, 41,565; Chester, 35,995; Easton, 26,775; Erie, 56,364; Harrisburg, 52,951; Johnstown, 39,059; Lancaster, 44,294; McKeesport, 38,274; New Castle, 32,593; Philadelphia, 1,367,716; Pittsburg, 345,043; Reading, 85,051; Scranton, 107,026; Wilkesbarre, 55,921; Williamsport, 29,245; York, 36,438.

According to these estimates New York city has 3,716,139 inhabitants, St. Louis has just passed and Boston has almost reached the 600,000 mark, Baltimore has 531,313 inhabitants.

ANTHRACITE COAL ROADS.

Are They in a Conspiracy in Restraint of Interstate Trade?

Washington, April 8.—Representative Hearst, of New York, Thursday introduced a resolution calling upon the attorney general to furnish congress certain evidence offered by a "citizen of New York in October, 1902, showing a conspiracy in restraint of interstate trade among the anthracite coal railroads."

The report of the United States attorney for the southern district of New York on the evidence is to be included. If this information is not received in seven days the resolution provides that a committee of seven members of the house shall proceed to compile the evidence requested. The preamble of the resolution recites that the monopoly complained of has resulted in increasing the price of coal 40 per cent, and that this aggregates a tax of $50,000,000 a year on the consumers of coal.

INVESTMENT BANKERS.

Luxurious Suits of Offices Raided By Chicago Police.

Chicago, April 8.—The police Thursday raided a luxurious suite of offices occupied by the Pacific Underwriting and Trust Co., K. P. Searber & Co., investment bankers, and the Imperial Trustee Co., of New Jersey.

E. C. Talmadge and John N. Lucas were taken into custody, the former on a charge of obtaining money by means of a confidence game and the latter for conspiracy with intent to defraud. A charge of the same kind was also lodged against Talmadge, whose name appeared on the door as agent of the Pacific Underwriting and Trust Co., and western agent of the Imperial Trustee Co., of New Jersey. The police declare the Talmadge-Lucas offices are the "clearing house" of numerous operations from New Jersey to Dakota.

COLOMBIA EMBARRASSED.

Has Not Yet Filed An Appeal Against the French Court's Decision.

Paris, April 8.—The republic of Colombia has not yet filed its appeal against the French court's decision in favor of the sale of the concession of the Panama Canal Co. to the United States and it is understood that one of the chief causes of the delay is the requirement of the French law that all the costs of the recent suit shall be paid before an appeal is receivable. These costs amount to a large sum, which include the court fees and all the legal expenses of the lawyers and the fees incurred by the Panama Canal Co. since the beginning of the litigation. It is said in a well-informed quarter that the Colombian authorities are somewhat embarrassed over the payments of the costs, which have the effect of postponing an early determination to appeal.

One local union receiving the call for the mass meeting has adopted resolutions rejecting the plan and suggesting if the ministers are not being paid enough wages that they form a union and make application for membership in the regular way.

Belleville, Ill., April 8.—A jury in the trial of a slander case Thursday reported to the court, "We have reched a verdict, but we refuse to return it until we have received our fees."

"Constable, take the jury to jail and keep them there until they give up their verdict," ordered Justice Wangelin. When the constable started to carry out the order the jurymen weakened and returned a verdict of "guilty" against the defendant.

DUNCAN'S REVENGE.

Stabbed Burglar Jim Anderson in the Penitentiary.

He Inflicted Six Wounds With a Shoemaker's Knife Which He Had Managed to Secrete Before He Was Overpowered.

Columbus, O., April 11.—In revenge for an alleged betrayal, George Duncan, a prisoner, Sunday stabbed and probably fatally wounded "Burglar Jim" Anderson, another prisoner at the Ohio penitentiary. Anderson was seated at a table in the larger dining hall when Duncan suddenly sprang upon him from behind and inflicted six wounds with a shoemaker's knife which he had managed to secrete before he could be overpowered. The blade of the knife penetrated Anderson's lung, making a dangerous wound. Anderson and Duncan escaped together from the penitentiary some time ago and were recently captured after a desperate fight at Chillicothe, O. On being returned to the penitentiary Anderson accused a former guard of having aided in their escape. Since that time Duncan has expressed extreme animosity toward Anderson.

It is said by the prison officials that Anderson's complaint about Duncan and the subsequent goading by other prisoners who wanted Duncan to revenge himself upon Anderson for "peaching" spurred him to attack his former "crony."

That Anderson's death was ordered by his fellow-convicts there can be but little doubt. Ever since he returned from Chillicothe, ragged, unshaved and gaunt, he has been the victim of a silent though terrible boycott for his treachery toward Sub-Guard Cole. While he was telling Warden Hershey the story of his escape he was sealing his doom. From that hour the society of the lost souls had cast him out as an unclean thing.

EX-QUEEN ISABELLA DEAD.

The Former Ruler of Spain Passed Away In Paris.

Paris, April 11.—Former Queen Isabella of Spain, grandmother of King Alfonso, died here at 9:45 o'clock Saturday morning of influenza with complications. The American embassy, which is opposite the Palatte Castile, in the Avenue Kleber, the late Queen's residence, was early informed of the queen's death, and Ambassador Porter was among the first to call and sign the palace register. The Infantas Isabella, Eulalie and Marie, daughters of the late queen, were at the bedside when she died.

Madrid, April 11.—The Official Gazette, which appeared Sunday with black borders, merely announces the death of former Queen Isabella and makes no statement regarding the funeral arrangements. King Alfonso desires that every honor shall be paid to the dead, but the remains will not be met at the frontier by the members of the cabinet and Minister of Justice Toca alone will go to El Escorial, which is 26 miles northwest of Madrid, for the interment. Requiem masses will be said simultaneously at Madrid and Barcelona April 12. The Spanish court will go into mourning for one year.

TWO WOMEN FOUGHT.

One Is Dead and the Other In Jail Charged With Murder.

Wheeling, W. Va., April 11.—Mrs. Ella Graham and Victoria Robinson disagreed and quarreled over the attentions Mr. Robinson was alleged to have lavished upon Mrs. Graham, and in consequence Mrs. Robinson is dead and Mrs. Graham is in jail charged with murder. The two women met near their home in Pocahontas and started in to fight viciously, tearing at one another's hair. Mrs. Robinson was proving too much for her antagonist when Mrs. Graham pulled a revolver and fired five bullets into Mrs. Robinson's body, killing her instantly. The shots were fired at such close range that the clothing of the dead woman took fire and her dress was partly consumed before the flames were extinguished.

M'QUEEN, THE ANARCHIST.

New York, April 11.—William McQueen, the anarchist, who is under a five-year sentence in New Jersey, for inciting the silk trade riots in Paterson in June, 1902, arrived Sunday on the St. Paul from Southampton, traveling under an assumed name. Tuesday he will surrender himself to the sheriff of Passaic county in order to serve his sentence from which he has appealed in vain. McQueen left America while under $10,000 bail and in so doing is said to have caused his bondsmen not a little trouble, but this matter seems to have been satisfactorily adjusted.

Washington, April 9.—The conference report of the Indian appropriation bill was submitted in the senate Friday. The bill as passed by the senate carried an increase of $2,877,503 over the bill as passed by the house. Of this increase the house conferees agreed to $1,605,738 and the senate receded from $1,272,277. The bill as reported from conference carries $9,247,930.

Among the senate amendments agreed to are the following: Ratification of the treaties with the Turtle Mountain Chippewas; providing for an Indian exhibit at the St. Louis exposition; authorizing the sale of coal and asphalt lands in Indian territory; providing for probate courts in Indian territory; provisions with reference to various claims, including those of J. Hale Sypher and the late William L. Springer.

Several amendments stricken out of the house bill regarding the payment of claims were restored in conference. The house amendment extending the time for opening lands on the Uintah reservation, Utah, is restored and fixed for March 10, 1905.

PROSPECTIVE DOG FEAST.

There Is Great Joy in the Igorrote Reservation, St. Louis.

St. Louis, April 11.—There is great joy in the Igorrote reservation at the World's fair. The Igorrotes are going to have a dog feast and all the arrangements have been made. Six delicious dogs were mysteriously tethered to stakes in the reservation Sunday and carefully guarded by the savage Igorrotes from the Philippines. It could not be ascertained where the dogs came from, but there they were and each dog was being given a full meal every time he looked hungry, to fatten him up quickly. By common consent only four dogs will be served at the feast, the beauty of two saving their lives. They are a water spaniel and skye terrier. The other four are plain dogs. Gov. Hunt, who has charge of the Igorrotes, stated Sunday night that the humane society can not interfere with the proposed feast as the reservation is 300 yards outside the city limits. He further stated that arrangements had been made satisfactory to the officials of St. Louis county within the confines of which the dog feast would be held and the Igorrotes will have a grand feast on baked dog and sweet potatoes. The date of the feast will depend on the rapidity which the four dogs fatten.

IN FAVOR OF THE RAILROAD.

The Inter-State Commerce Commission Renders a Decision.

Washington, April 9.—The inter-state commerce commission Friday announced its decision in favor of the railroad in the case of the railroad commission of Kentucky against the Louisville & Nashville railroad. The commission holds that the railroad in carrying out an exclusive contract with the Bourbon Stock Yards Co. is not violating the inter-state commerce law, and that that law does not authorize the commission to make an order affirmatively requiring a railroad carrier to deliver carloads of interstate freight to a connecting carrier. The commission says it is not unlawful discrimination between commodities for the defendant to deliver carloads of dead freight to the Southern railroad for consignees in Louisville and to refuse to deliver live stock to the Southern railroad at Louisville when consigned to the Central stock yards. The commission points out that its jurisdiction does not extend to enforcing provisions in the constitution of the state of Kentucky.

LOOKS WERE AGAINST HIM.

The Order Was Given in Words That Admitted of a Wrong Interpretation.

The train on which the distinguished citizen was traveling for the purpose of fulfilling a lecture engagement was late, and he arrived at his destination only an hour or two before the time appointed for the meeting.

He went straight to a hotel and was shown up to his room, relates the Chicago Tribune.

He was tired and dusty.

"Boy," he said, "bring me a whisk."

The boy went to execute the mission, and a few moments later a committee from the local society under whose auspices he was to appear called upon him in his room.

He was conferring with the committee when the boy returned, bearing a tray containing a glass of water and a small glass with a red liquid in it.

"What's this?" he demanded.

"It's the whisky you ordered, sir."

"I didn't order any whisky!" he gasped. "I ordered a whisk broom!"

But every member of the committee representing the Turkeyville Total Abstinence society will believe to his dying day that the distinguished lecturer got exactly what he had ordered on that occasion.

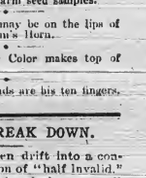
WOMEN BREAK DOWN.

Sometimes women drift into a condition of "half invalid." Continual languor—all tired out, run down, backache, nerves shattered, headache, terrible pain, no appetite, poor digestion. In nine cases out of ten it's because the kidneys fail to do their work of filtering the poisonous system waste from the blood. The kidneys are weak and need the strengthening help of Doan's Kidney Pills. Read how these pills repair a weakened physical condition when this condition is caused by sick kidneys:



Mrs. Sadie Mettler of 234 W. 4th Ave., Columbus, Ohio, says: "Prior to the year 1898 I suffered considerably from backache, pain in the head, languor and depression and weakness of the action of the kidneys. The pain was always worse in the morning and I felt miserable. I was induced to procure a box of Doan's Kidney Pills and I began their use. They proved prompt and effective. They cured me and there has been no return of the trouble since taking them. I owe all the credit to Doan's Kidney Pills."

A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine which cured Mrs. Mettler will be mailed on application to any part of the United States. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. For sale by all druggists, price 50 cents per box.

EVACUATED KOREA.

All Dispatches Agree That the Russians Have Left.

Why Gen. Kuropatkin's Plan of Campaign Does Not Contemplate Heavy Resistance to Japs Advance at the Yalu River.

Chicago, April 8.—A special cable to the Daily News from Tokio says: Reliable reports were received here Thursday from Seoul to the effect that part of the Japanese fighting line had crossed the Yalu and established itself in strong positions there at several important points.

Paris, April 8.—A St. Petersburg correspondent of the Petit Parisian cables: A colonel of the general staff has informed me that a general mobilization is in course of preparation. In view of complications which may ensue, the police have been instructed to prepare lists of all university graduates under 40 years old capable of serving as reserve officers. A portion of the reserves will be told off to guard the trans-Siberian railroad. The decree, ordering the mobilization, will be published shortly.

Port Arthur, April 9.—A correspondent of the Times at Wei Hai Wei, cabling under Friday's date, says:

"The result of a week's cruise leads me to believe that the Japanese fleet is engaged in covering arrangements for a new landing of troops recently mobilized. A close blockade of Port Arthur is not maintained, presumably because of information regarding the state of the channel. Certainly up to the present no Japanese transports have entered the Gulf of Pe Chi Li."

St. Petersburg, April 9.—The Vostoeny Vestik's Harbin correspondent says everything shows that on account of unpreparedness it has been decided to operate on the defensive. It is believed that the Japanese will never pass Mukden.

Troops travel 30 miles an hour going to Liao Yang, says a correspondent.

London, April 11.—No confirmation has reached London of the various rumors, most of which come by way of Paris, of land fighting, landings by Japanese on the Liao Tung peninsula, the capture of Japanese transports by Russians, etc.

Dispatches from various points agree that the Russians have completely evacuated Korea, but beyond this there is little reliable news.

A Che Foo dispatch which reaches London by way of Rome, asserts that the Japanese squadron with 20 steamers was seen making for Port Arthur.

The squadron of Adm. Wirenius left Cherbourg Sunday for the Baltic.

St. Petersburg, April 11.—The generally anticipated attack on Port Arthur did not occur Saturday night, although a telegram received from Grand Duke Cyril reports that the enemy's ships were sighted on the horizon. It is presumed that the Japanese were warned of the extra precautions which had been taken to guard against a surprise. Vice Adm. Makaroff's torpedo flotilla patrolled the open sea, while the warships with full steam up remained outside Port Arthur. Elsewhere throughout the theater of war all is reported quiet.

A high military authority in conversation with a press representative explained why Gen. Kuropatkin's plan of campaign does not contemplate a heavy resistance to the Japanese advance at the Yalu, saying: "Either defeat or victory in a battle there would be disadvantageous to us. If we lost we would have to fall back through a difficult country. If we won—and I say to you that Russian strategy is based on the idea of victory and not on that of defeat—success would be fruitless. We could not follow it up without exposing the army to too great risks. On account of the Japanese control of the sea, if we pursued the enemy into the peninsula of Korea, we would open both flanks to a possible attack from the rear. No, the Japanese must come to a point in the interior which, with this end in view, has been selected where we can follow up a crushing defeat to the bitter end with blow after blow and seal the fate of the campaign.

"Our plan on sea and land will converge at a time next summer when Vice Adm. Makaroff's fleet will be relieved by the arrival of reinforcements. Then, if successful on land, we can clear the sea of the enemy, cut his communications and the Japanese in Korea and Manchuria will then be at our mercy. The world must not be impatient. The prelude to this war is not yet finished."

It is understood here that as the result of Gen. Kuropatkin's visit to New Chwang, reinforcements of 100,000 men will be sent forward from Liao Yang.

COMMANDER HIROSE.

Body of the Japanese Officer Given a Military Funeral By Russians.

Tokio, April 11.—The body of the Japanese officer found and buried at Port Arthur is unquestionably that of Commander Takaso Hirose, who lost his life in the engagement on March 27 when Vice Adm. Togo made his second attempt to bottle up the port. The description of the uniform tallies with that worn by officers of Hirose's rank. The fact that the body had been missing is further confirmatory of this. The government deeply appreciates the action of the Russians in giving the remains a military funeral and officers of the naval staff have requested a press representative to express their appreciation of the Russian courtesy.

BOTH MAY DIE.

Prominent Attorney and a Constable Fight a Duel.

Waverly, W. Va., April 11.—Thomas Engle, a prominent attorney of Middlebrone and a recent candidate for prosecuting attorney of Tyler county, and Constable William Yost, of this city, are both thought to have been fatally injured in a duel late Sunday night. Engle suffered from mental trouble and was taken some weeks ago to a sanitarium at Marietta, O. Friday night he escaped and after a fierce fight with Toll Collector Harness he crossed the Ohio river on the Marietta bridge. Saturday night he appeared at the railroad station here with a knife which he flourished and threatened to cut every person who came within his reach. He closed and locked the door and Constable Yost broke it down. Engle stabbed him in the side and started to run, but was brought down with a bullet from Yost's revolver, which entered his head. He was taken to a hospital in Parkersburg. Both will probably die.

THE END OF CONGRESS.

It is Thought Adjournment Will Be Had April 28.

The Appropriation Bills Are in Such Shape That They Can All Be Disposed of By That Time.

Washington, April 11.—April 28 has been discussed in committee rooms and among senators and representatives as not at all an improbable date for the termination of the present session of the congress.

The pension appropriation bill has been received from the house and reported from the senate committee with an amendment. Discussion of service pension legislation, it is believed, will be exhausted before the bill is placed on its passage and this measure therefore is not considered a barrier to early adjournment. The army appropriation is agreed on except as to four amendments, which are in conference, and it is thought these amendments will not result in much further discussion in either body of congress. The conference report of the agricultural bill has been agreed to in the senate but no action has been taken by the house. A second conference has been ordered on the fortification bill on the senate amendments for the purpose of a submarine boat for instruction in coast defense and making an appropriation for the completion for a certain type of disappearing gun carriages. Both the naval and the District appropriation bills are in conference. The conference report on the Indian appropriation bill has been made and is likely to cause debate for one or two days. Four days additional discussion is looked for on the post office appropriation bill. The amendments that have been adopted are not of a character that will tie the bill up in conference for more than two or three days. It is expected that the sundry civil bill will be reported from the senate committee on appropriations on Tuesday and the military academy bill will be ready by the time the sundry civil bill is passed. It is expected that the general deficiency bill will be reported to the house not later than Tuesday. No call has yet been issued, but republican leaders of the senate anticipate holding a meeting of the steering committee early next week to agree on a general program for the remaining days of the session.

FIFTY-EIGHTH CONGRESS.

Regular Session.

Washington, April 7.—Senate—After waiting with much patience for many days, Mr. Hepburn Wednesday found opportunity to speak to the senate on the subject of pure food. Technically the speech was in support of a resolution calling on the secretary of agriculture to send to the senate the results of the investigations made by his department into adulterated foods, but in reality it was in support of the pure food bill.

House—In a five hour session, the house passed 17 bills relating to the District of Columbia, including one incorporating the Carnegie institute. It also passed the Bowman omnibus claims bill, carrying approximately $228,000 for the payment of small claims, agreed to the conference report on the fortifications bill and instead on its disagreement to an amendment on that bill providing for the purchase of a submarine boat, The Alaska delegate bill was taken up, and Mr. Cushman (Wash.) made a long explanation of the measure, setting out necessities of the territory in the way of representation in congress.

Washington, April 8.—Senate—The senate Thursday listened to eulogies of the late Senator Hanna. The galleries were well filled and the speakers were given close attention. Those who spoke were: Messrs. Foraker, Scott, Cockrell, Platt (Ct.), Cullom, Blackburn, Elkins, Fairbanks, Daniel, Perkins, Depew, Beveridge, Dolliver, Kearns and Dick.

House—The Swayne impeachment proceeding which has been looked upon as the only possible block to an early adjournment of congress was disposed of in five minutes by the house Thursday by the adoption of a resolution making the case a special order for December 13 next. In the meantime the judiciary committee is to take additional testimony in the case. In disposing of a conference report on the army appropriation bill the house took up the bill extending the coastwise laws to the Philippines and by a vote of 122 to 100 adopted a special rule to vote on this bill after a debate of two hours. This debate was exhausted save five minutes when the house adjourned.

Washington, April 9.—Senate—The contracts for cancelling machines used by the post office department was debated at length in the senate Friday in connection with the post office appropriation bill. Mr. Culberson introduced an amendment reducing the rental of the machines, and the democratic senators charged that the rental now paid was the same as paid under the contracts made by George W. Beavers when he was chief of the salary and allowance division of the post office department and that they were excessive. Mr. Lodge denied the charge saying that there was no proof of its truth. The first hours of the session were devoted to a discussion by Mr. Patterson of the Chinese question in which he maintained that the exclusion laws would be ineffective after December 7 unless there was additional legislation.

House—The house passed a large number of bills, including the Philippine shipping bill and the bill for appropriating $475,000 in aid of the Lewis and Clark centennial exposition to be held in Portland, Ore., in 1905. The only amendment made to the Philippine shipping bill was one extending until July 1, 1906, the time when the law shall become operative. The bill provides that no merchandise or passengers, except supplies for the army or navy, shall be transported by sea, under penalty of forfeiture, between ports of the United States and the Philippine archipelago, directly or via a foreign port, or for any part of the voyage in any except vessels of the United States. It does not prohibit, however, the sailing of any foreign vessel between the United States and the Philippines, nor between ports or places in the Philippines. The Philippine commission is authorized to issue licenses to engage in lighterage or other exclusively harbor business to vessels or other craft actually engaged in such business at the date stated and to vessels or other craft built in the Philippines or in the United States and owned by citizens of the United States or inhabitants of the Philippines. The law does not impair or affect any privilege guaranteed to Spanish ships and merchandise by the Paris treaty of peace.

LEWIS AND CLARK EXPOSITION.

Portland, Ore., April 9.—The passage of the bill appropriating almost $500,000 for the Lewis and Clark exposition by the house of representatives at Washington makes a reality of the plans of the citizens of Oregon to have a celebration of international proportions commensurate with the events intended to commemorate. Director General H. W. Goode, in an interview, said:

"The allowance of the federal government makes the Lewis and Clark exposition international in character and makes certain the recognition and acceptance of foreign governments. Every citizen in the Pacific northwest congratulates himself on the termination of the efforts of President Harvey Scott and others for the recognition at the hands of the government. The preliminary work on the grounds is already practically completed and work on the main structures will also be at once pushed along with all possible vigor."

STATE NEWS ITEMS

SHOOTING DURING A BALL GAME.

Coley Hayden Wounded By Lee Anderson, State College Student.

Lexington, Ky., April 9.—Coley Hayden, a 19-year-old town boy, was shot at the State college baseball park Friday afternoon by Lee Anderson, a State college student, who was acting as guard at the park. The bullet entered Hayden's left shoulder and inflicted a serious wound.

Police Capt. Brown and Detective Savage went to the park to arrest Anderson. Knowing the reputation of the student body of the State college they intended to make the arrest as unostentatious as possible and, save those who wore citizens' clothes, went into the park alone. As soon as Anderson learned his mission he pulled his revolver and declared that he would not submit to arrest. A crowd of 200 State college students backed him up in his refusal. Capt. Brown rushed in before he could shoot, however, and after a tussle disarmed him. He was placed under arrest and the students made no further attempt to capture him from the police. He was later released on bond. The Central university and State college were engaged in a game and Hayden was looking on through a crack in the fence. Anderson ordered him away and he cursed Anderson. The student guard thereupon shot him without further words.

Anderson attempted to shoot a fellow student by the name of Bradford at a football game two years ago with even less provocation. Bradford had edged his way too far to the front and Anderson, acting as guard, cursed him and he retorted with a sharp remark. Anderson knocked him senseless with a club and started to shoot him. A student by the name of Menifee grabbed the pistol and the hammer went through Menifee's thumb. The pistol was at the time pointing directly to the stomach of Dr. Pryor, professor at the college. Anderson is a powerful man, 25 years old and came from Nicholas county. The game Friday resulted 6 to 2 in favor of State college.

Bennett H. Young, of Louisville, his commander during the war, deliver the address at the funeral. Both requests were complied with. Rev. Keene Ryan, of Chicago, who was educated for the ministry by the deceased, preached the funeral sermon. He said: "Alex Tompkins was the Dave Harum of Owensboro." The burial was at Elmwood cemetery.

A Church Will Be Moved to Accommodate the Congregation.

Rockport, Ky., April 8.—The Methodist Episcopal church in Yelvington will be placed on rollers and hauled to the town of Powers, 10 miles distant. The change is to be made because the majority of the congregation live in the vicinity of the latter place and have requested that the church be located there. The work of moving the building will begin at once, and it is estimated that it will cost $1,000 to complete the job. FOR CONGRESS.

HON. CLIFFORD E. NADAUD, of Kenton county, is a candidate for Congress from the Sixth Kentucky District, subject to the action of the Democratic party.

HON. E. C. SMITH, of Carrollton, is a candidate for Congress from the 6th Congressional District, subject to the action of the Democratic party.

THE price of tobacco has gone skyward, but the farmer has none to sell.

HEARST literature is being sent out by the ton. His several printing offices are being run on full time to keep his presidential boom booming.

THE criminal docket was concluded yesterday. Two or three small fines were assessed. Attorney Green's portion of which will about pay his expenses.

CONGRESS may adjourn about the 28th inst. Several of the members have on their hands campaigns for reelection that need their individual attention.

SINCE Hodge and his rump committee have got into action over in Campbell county, Col. George Washington has plunged into the race for Congress, and may complicate matters some.

THE Congressional campaign now on is the quietest in the history of the district, unless it was when there was but a single candidate. There is a saying that still water runs deep.

IN the Grant county primary election in the race for County Superintendent, Claud Adams defeated his lady opponent by three votes. Claud was to gallant to make the majority larger.

JOSEPH L. RHINOCK, candidate for Congress, was here yesterday in the interest of his candidacy. He is a good mixer and knows how to get close to the boys, and moves about with an "I'm-going-to-get-there air."

THE Grant county Democrats had an old time love-feast last Monday, and some who it was thought had drifted away from the party returned to the ranks, declaring their allegiance in public speeches.

Col. Settle, of Owenton, attended church at Erlanger, last Sunday night, and when the congregation wns dismissed, the minister approached the Colonel and remarked, "you are a stranger here, are you not?" "I am," said the Colonel. "I hope you are a christian," exclaimed the minister. "No sir," said the Colonel, "I am only an ordinary Owen county lawyer."

IT is generally believed the Continental Tobacco Company has determined to put out of business all the independent concerns by putting up the price of tobacco until the small fry can not buy, hence the boom that struck the market last week. It is estimated that the Continental Co, has bought about ninety per cent of the 1903 crop of Burley tobacco, which leaves a small margin for all others who require that tobacco in their business.

JUDGE HODGE and some of his followers over in Newport and Campbell county are trying to create trouble for the Democratic party over there. Mr. Hodge wants to be nominated and elected Circuit Judge, and with that end in view he is endeavoring to get control of the county committee, that he may manipulate it in his own interest when the time comes. To do this he has repudiated the county committee under the administration of which he made his last canvass, and at which time it had not occurred to him that the committee was not a legally constituted body. In the last week he has called together a crowd which claims to be the legal committee and is proposing to take charge of party affairs. The muss that Hodge has precipitated is his first move in his campaign against Colonel A. S. Berry in the race for Circuit Judge. What will be the outcome of this band of insurgents, can not be surmised at this time, but it has resulted in making Col. Gooch, who has been laying low, an aggressive candidate for Congress.

JAMES M. RIDDELL

Was born on Ashby's Fork of Woolper creek, this county, on the 10th day of September, 1823, and died at his home in Williamstown, Grant county, on the 31st day of March, 1904, full of years and loved by all who knew him. He died of a complication of diseases which confined him toa bed of pain only a few days. When he left this world of sorrow and disappointments, there were at his bedside his two sons, Charles and Horatio, and his daughter, Mrs. Hattie Arnold, and her daughter, Nancy. Mrs. T. W. Finch and daughter, of Muscatine, Iowa, were not present on the sorrowful occasion.

James M. Riddell was a son of Neal and Percivall Riddell, and was the last survivor of that marriage. At an early age he began preparing for a useful life, and at the age of 14 he was apprentised as a saddler to John H. Perkins in Burlington, with whom he labored faithfully for many years, and whom, with Horatio Baker as his partner, he bought out in 1849, and continued in the saddlery and harness business in Burlington from that time until he moved to Williamstown in 1877, where he continued at the bench until within a few days of his death, an honest, faithful toiler.

On the 16th day of December, 1847, he and Elizabeth White, a daughter of the late Joel White, of this county, were married. To them were born two daughters, Mrs. T. W. Finch and Mrs. Hattie Arnold, and three sons, Chas. W., Horatio B. and Neal. The last named died when quite young. The faithful wife departed this life about eleven months ago.

He was Captain of Company A in the 55th Kentucky Mounted Infantry, Federal Army.

He joined the Christian church early in life, and was a faithful and useful member of that denomination until death. Soon after he moved to Williamstown he was elected Deacon of the Christion Church and Superintendent of the Sunday-school, which positions he held at the time of his death. He was a beloved member of the Masonic Order, and by the tender and loving hands of his brethren of the mystic tie his remains will be consigned to their last resting place on the 24th inst.

James M. Riddell was a quiet, unassuming man, but firm in his convictions. He was eventempered, and always took the most charitable view of his fellowman's short-comings, and thus gained the respect and esteem of all. The life he lived was one worthy of emulation, and a noble heritage for his descendents.

In speaking of his death the Williamstown Courier said: "In his death we have lost one of our very best citizens, honest, upright, industrious and clever as any man who ever lived amongst us, remarkable for extraordinary gentleness and sweetness of his spirit and disposition. It is not believed that any person living ever heard him utter a harsh or bitter word."

NOTICE TO BIDDERS.

The Citizens' Telephone Co., of Hebron, Ky., will, on the 16th day of April, 1904, at 7:30 o'clock p. m., receive bids for setting telephone poles, braces and anchors for guy-wires along the roads leading from Constance to Burlington by way of Hebron and Limaburg, and, also, along the North Bend road from Hebron to a point near the residence of Chas. Scothorn. Said poles are to be set at about the rate of thirty to the mile, and braces and guys used where necessary. HUBERT CONNER, Secty.

SMITH CRISLER.

Born in Madison county, Virginia, December 21, 1818, died at his home in Boone county on April 7, 1904.

Mr. Crisler was a pioneer citizen of Boone county, having lived on the farm where he died, since 1849. He was a son of Gabriel and Julia Smith Crisler, of this county, who were married in Virginia at an early day. His wife, who preceded him to the grave several years, was Amanda Clore, daughter of Ephriam Clore, and a sister of the late Yancy Clore. To them were born two daughters—Mrs. Willis Grant and Miss Lucy Crisler, and three sons—John, Ben and R. S. Crisler, all of whom survive their parents.

Mr. Crisler was a member of no church, but believed in the doctrine of the Presbyterian Baptists, and at his request Rev. Martin L. Aylor, conducted a brief funeral service at the house last Friday afternoon, after which the remains were interred in the family burying ground on his farm and overlooking the forks of Gunpowder. Mr. Crisler was a gentleman of the old school, and a man whose word was as good as his bond, and the five children he reared, bear the impress of the correct teaching and honorable walk of their father.

In the death of Mr. Crisler this county has lost another of her pioneer citizens, one who experienced many of the hardships that overtook those to whose lot it fell to prepare this part of the country for the happy homes that dot the hills and valleys of Boone county.

Notwithstanding the unfavorable weather of last week the "Opening" of Harris Fitch proved a "drawing card," large crowds being present every day, and many purchases of valuable machinery being made by our leading farmers. Prizes were given away as advertised as follows:

Wednesday—Harry Sims, Lawrenceburg, 949, set single track harness; Job Miller, Sr., Homestead, 183, carriage heater; Henry Ellinghausen, Bellair, 950 Milford suction carpet sweeper.

Thursday—J. Moellerbrook, Aurora, 939 Flying Dutchman plow; Amos Jackson, Cleves, 747 music stand; G. Hillie, Lawrenceburg, 207 carpet sweeper.

Friday—F. L. Peck, Crozier, 750, Empire grain drill; Henry Buckhorst, Lawrenceburg, 327 carriage heater; Richard Smith, Aurora, 262, adjustable music stand. After the prizes advertised had been given away it was announced that it was April Fool's Day and another number would be drawn, and if the party were present he would receive something, that to be determined after it was seen who he was. Henry Asherman's number was drawn and he was present and was asked to get up and stand on the wagon seat where he was handed a razor box. The crowd laughed and asked him to open it and see if there was anything in it, and lo and behold! he pulled out a fine $2.00 razor, and yelled, "Hurrah for Fitch!"

Saturday—Henry Miller No. III, of Homestead, 1310, driving wagon; John Helfrich, Lawrenceburg, 450, carpet sweeper; A. J. Woods, Bright 209, Cyclone grain-seed sower. After all the prizes of Saturday were distributed Mr. Fitch announced that as Kentucky had received no prize during the week there would be a special prize of a shot gun to the first gentlemen whose name came out, or a carpet sweeper to the first lady. The drawing was continued for fifteen minutes before a Kentucky number came out, It was held by Robt. W. Terrill, Petersburg, 179, and he was presented a breech loading shot gun.

Mr. Fitch had a fine line of all kinds of farm tools and vehicles on exhibition, and was well prepared to explain their merits to the people, having with him during the week representatives of the following firms: Guar, Scott & Co., threshing machinery, Richmond Ind.; Mast Foos & Co., Springfield, Ohio.; pumps and windmills; Empire Drill Co., Globe Fertilizer, Co., Louisville, Ky.; Ironton Disc Plow, Co., Ironton, Ohio; Champion Machines; Keystone M'fg. Co., Sterling Ill., hay loaders; also A. G. Gough of Indianapolis and Geo. W. Fitch, representing buggy and wagon companies. Others were to have been there but were delayed on account of floods in various parts of Indiana and Ohio. It is safe to say that Mr. Fitch is the most widely advertised man in Southern Indiana.

T. B. MATHEWS, Chmn. Ex. Com.

Saturday was all sorts of a day.

No smallpox in Burlington now.

The big twelve is with us this week.

Sunday weather was of the dolly varden kind.

Clean up that garden and have it ready to plant.

The wind started the river running up stream last Friday.

From accounts the fiscal court had a real interesting session, last week.

There have been about enough April showers to produce a supply of May flowers.

The Boone County Telephone Co. will construct two new lines so soon as the weather settles.

Uncle Alfred Cason's exhibit of corn was shipped to the St. Louis Exposition, last week.

The really industrious man is seldom heard to complain that he can find nothing to do.

JOHN GOODRIDGE, Richwood.

J. E. Smith and Noah Clore sold a lot of nice young hogs to Mr. Picklehеimer, of Taylorsport, last week.

Since Christmas Burlington has had an epidemic of measles, an epidemic of chickenpox, and an epidemic of smallpox.

Riley & Hogan have prized and shipped considerable tobacco from Burlington. Conner has also done considerable along that line.

Have you tested that seed corn? Sometimes an ear that looks like it is perfectly sound and all right is not perfectly matured and will not sprout.

Jack Walton, of Commissary, received a large consignment of wire last week, with which he will construct about 1,000 rods of fence this spring and summer.

They do say that Surveyor Vest sometimes forgets to deliver the butter and eggs his wife sends to Limaburg, and carries them on to Covington in his buggy.

The boom in the price of tobacco came, of course, after the farmers had disposed of their crops, but in time to stimulate them to putting in an increase acreage this year.

The base ball club that will have its head quarters at Burlington, this year, will, probably, be called the "Kentucky Scalp Raisers." It is to be the strongest aggregation the town ever presented.

William Houston and family moved to Covington, last week, where he will engage in the huckster and grocery business. McMullen has charge of the toll gate heretofore kept by Mr. Houston.

Tony Rue, who cultivates the Scott Rice creek bottoms, near Bellevue, was in town last Friday. He says a heavy deposit was left on the creek bottoms by the recent overflows, and that they will produce a fine crop this year if there are not too many leaves in the newly made soil.

A Thoghtful Man.

M. M. Austin of Winchester, Indiana, knew what to do in the hour of need. His wife had such an unusual case of stomach and liver trouble, physicians could not help her. He thought of and tried Dr. King's New Life Pills and she got relief at once and was finally cured. Only 25c, at all Drug Stores.

An envelope containing several notes he held as guardian of his daughter, Mrs. Mamie L. Sullivan, was received from A. C. Porter on Wednesday of last week. The envelope was postmarked "Indianapolis, Ind., March 28, 1904," and was marked miss sent, it having been to Kansas. He wrote not a word. This settles the question whether he had been murdered. He left his home and friends because he is financially embarrassed.

Taking Desperate Chances.

It is true that many contract colds and recover from them without taking any precaution or treatment, and a knowledge of this fact leads others to take their chances instead of giving their colds the needed attention. It should be borne in mind that every cold weakens the lungs, lowers the vitality, makes the system less able to withstand each succeeding cold and paves the way for more serious diseases. Can you afford to take such desperate chances when Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, famous for its cures of colds, can be had for a trifle? For Sale by all Druggists.

The boom in the price of tobacco has made at least two local buyers in this county nice money—Hubert Brady, of Bellevue, and O. P. Conner, of Burlington. The former sold his purchase of about 75,000 pounds to Wingate & Thompson, of Petersburg, at 10 cents around, and will clean up nearly $3,500 clear. Wingate & Thompson also bought of O. P. Conner his purchase of 80,000 pounds or more at 12 cents around, and he will make the nice sum of about $5,500 on his purchase. It is said that Judge Lessing is a full partner of both Brady and Conner, in which event he has inflated his bank account to the extent of nearly $5,000.

Hoosier Denmark is a fine stallion that has taken horse men by storm at Walton. They claim that he is the finest harness and saddle stallion that has ever made a season in Northern Kentucky. This fine horse will be found this season at Allphin & Humes' livery stable.

CIRCUIT COURT.

The April term of the Boone Circuit court began business promptly at 9:30 o'clock Monday morning, Judge Lassing presiding, and Sheriff Allphin and Deputy Hume being on hand to obey the commands of the court, while Clerk J. A. Duncan had his father, and J. H. Settle, of Owenton, Owen county, to assist him keep the record. Commonwealth's Attorney Frank Green was also present and ready to assist the grand jury in its work.

The following persons constitute the grand jury:

R. C. Gaines,	W. S. Walton,
W. H. Clayton,	O. P. Phipps,
W. R. Miller,	C. Blankenbeker,

R. C. Cowen,	Robt. Clements

N. S. Walton was appointed foreman.

The petit jurors were organized as follows:

Jury No. 1.

W. B. Craven,	Sam Taylor,
W. J. Carpenter,	O. Blankenbeker,

Jury No. 2.

Claud Carpenter,	L. P. Aylor,
L. H. Crisler,	R. H. Stephens,
Geo. Stevenson,	M. T. Graves,
John Goodridge,	J. E. Smith,
Ab Gaines,	B. C. Franks,
Elisha Hudson,	G. W. Anderson.

Lewis Walker and John Moffett, both colored, were tried for housebreaking yesterday, and were given 2 and 3 years, respectively, in the penitentiary.

Judge Cason was making a settlement with an overseer of roads, a few days since, when he left his office, telling the overseer that he would be back in a few minutes. The overseer waited patiently for some time, but the Judge did not return, and he began an investigation, and was not long in discovering that all the avenues of escape from the temple of justice were closed and locked for the day. He finally discovered a window through which he made his exit. In about an hour—just before dark—he met the Judge on the street, when it occurred to the official how he had left him sitting in his office to await his return and that he had forgotten to show up.

"We have used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera, and Diarrhoea Remedy in our family for years," says Mrs. J. B. Cooke, of Nederlands, Texas. "We have given it to all of our children. We have used other medicines for the same purpose, but never found anything to equal Chamberlain's. If you will use it as directed it will always cure." For sale by All Druggists.

This office printed the following stock bills last week:

For Osceola, the fine harness stallion and the too Jacks, Dewey and John, owned by Joe Readnour, of Key West.

Chas. Myers and J. P. Tanner, of Florence, had their fine stallions on exhibition here Monday. Along with his stallion, Richard Hanks, Mr. Myers showed three or four of his colts, which were beauties. For two of them he has been offered $500. These stallions have been money makers for their owners.

The boom in the price of tobacco struck J. C. Hughes, of Beaver, with about 300,000 pounds of the weed on hand, and that means he will make a little fortune on tobacco this year. Wingate & Thompson, and Berkshire & McWethy, of Petersburg, and Riley & Hogan, of Burlington and Bullittsville, were also caught with nice purchases on hand. The Petersburg firms have, in the last few days, bought several purchases on which they will make considerable sums.

by local application, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucus lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

DUTIES TOO HIGH.

GROWING TRUSTS SHOW THE FALLACY OF PROTECTION.

Congressman Williams, of Illinois, Arraigns Republican Policies and Practices and Hits at the President.

In the house on Tuesday, March 29, Representative James R. Williams, of Illinois, spoke in an electrifying manner on the leading questions of political import upon which the two great parties are now at issue.

Industries Demand Lower Duties.

Mr. Williams' handling of the tariff question was masterly and broad, and was listened to with profound attention by the house. He pointed out that only great industries like steel and iron, which are charging home consumers more for their products than they are charging foreign consumers, are clamoring for a retention of the Dingley schedules; that the great mass of independent manufacturers throughout the country, who have been striving to create markets abroad for their surplus products, want and must have tariff concessions or reciprocity. These interests, Mr. Williams said, can no longer be bound to the republican party. If it continues to uphold its stand-pat policy.

"Some of our republican friends are becoming very anxious for fear the democrats will have no issues for the next campaign," said Mr. Williams. "These gentlemen need not worry on that score. There will be plenty of issues to keep the republican party busy in its own defense.

"The revision of the tariff has been frequently suggested as a probable issue in the next campaign, and why should it not be? Upon that question the democrats won a most decisive victory in 1892, and what has occurred since then to weaken that issue?"

Shuts Foreign Markets.

Mr. Williams alluded briefly to the Wilson tariff bill and the cause which led to the emasculation of the original measure as passed by the house of representatives, incidentally he compared the financial panics which occurred during the Harrison and Cleveland administrations, and said the one was no more due to the McKinley bill than the other was to the Wilson bill.

"Since that time," continued Mr. Williams, "some very obnoxious features of high protection have developed or made a much stronger impression on the people. It was not so generally understood then that our consumers were paying higher prices for American products than foreign consumers, nor had the retaliatory measures with which other countries have been meeting out prohibitory duties been so keenly felt by our people. They are beginning to learn that our high tariff policy is affecting our markets abroad as well as at home. We have certainly lived long enough under the restrictions for republicans as well as democrats to learn that protection high enough to keep out imports will keep in exports; that no country is going to continue to buy where it can never sell.

Must Sell Abroad.

"For years I listened to republicans on the floor contending that if we would shut out a certain class of foreign goods and manufacture them in this country we would give that much more to American labor and keep our money at home, just as though we were paying cash for all our imports, but even these zealous advocates of protection have at last recognized the fact that we buy foreign products with American produce and when you shut out foreign products you shut in American products, and if you permit the exchange it will never take place except when profitable to both parties. While it has always been insisted by the protectionists that a high tariff would build up home markets, it has never been contended that these markets so created would in any way improve our foreign markets.

"American products have so far outgrown American markets that both our manufacturers and farmers are appealing to congress for freer commerce with other countries, in order that their surplus products may find a market there. Our power of production has become so much greater than our consumption that we are compelled to compete in the open market of the world, whether we desire to or not.

Compete with Foreigners.

"What better evidence of our ability to compete with other countries would you have than the fact that we are doing so now? Our farmers have always had to sell their surplus in foreign markets in competition with the cheapest labor of the world and our manufacturers have been doing so for several years. And I am vain enough, I am American enough, to believe that with all our natural resources, with the inventive genius of our people, with the superior skill and efficiency of our labor and its ready adaptability to new machinery will enable us to compete successfully in all those articles for which our people and our country are best adapted in any market of the world.

"Now, if the American manufacturer can ship his goods to foreign markets and after paying freight and other charges sell them in competition with foreign manufactured goods without protection, why should he not be able to sell the same articles in our home markets with less protection than 40, 50 and 100 per cent.?

Would Cut Duties.

"I believe our manufacturers and farmers must depend very largely on foreign markets for the growth and success of their business in the future, and if they are forced to sell such a large per cent. of their products in competition with the rest of the world why should we not adopt a national policy that will enable them to place their products in foreign markets as as little cost as possible? That is the way to capture the world's trade, for customers as a rule are going to buy where they can get the best bargains.

"In order to do this we must give our manufacturers cheaper raw material, our farmers cheaper machinery and our people cheaper necessaries of life. Such a policy will not only be beneficial to our manufacturers and farmers, but for the best interests of all laboring classes. The cheaper you make farm machinery, the cheaper you make clothing and other manufactured products, the more of those products will be sold both at home and abroad, and the more sold the greater will be the demand for labor in their production.

Fallacy of Protection.

"One of the most plausible arguments ever advanced for protection was that it would build up home industries which, by competing with each other, would bring down prices to consumers. Now, when our people who have been taxed so long to protect those home industries see them combining with each other to prevent home competition they think they are no longer entitled to protection against foreign competition, and they are beginning to learn that the duty should be reduced on all those articles controlled by the trusts, not as a complete remedy, but a sound one so far as it extends.

"While the democratic party has no war to make on honest wealth or property accumulated through honest and legitimate methods, and while it recognizes that an aggregation of capital and a consolidation of enterprises may cheapen the cost of production in the interest of consumers, yet it insists that all those vicious combinations formed for the purpose of destroying competition, monopolizing commodities and forcing from the people unjust and unreasonable profits should be suppressed by proper legislation and a strict enforcement of law.

Trusts Find Roosevelt Harmless.

"If the republican party desires to take the trust question out of politics let it go on with its prosecution in good faith. The courts are with them, and if the law is not with them let congress amend the law before it adjourns; every democrat in congress is ready to vote necessary amendments.

"It is true Mr. Roosevelt a short time before he became president made some pretty severe declarations against the trusts, but just as soon as he was in a position to do something his indictments against trusts were mere apologies for their existence, and the greatest joke ever attempted on the American people was the report that President Roosevelt was to be the anti-trust candidate for president. Whatever might have been their fear in the beginning, the trusts have long since learned what a harmless agitator he is.

Republicans Hide Postal Frauds.

"Again, Mr. Chairman, it seems to me the republicans in congress by refusing an investigation of the post office department have made the public scandals of this administration a very pertinent issue in the next campaign. No one can read the report of the bribery and larceny that have been going on in the post office department, and the reckless and notorious methods with which they have been allowed to continue for years without taking some responsibility for those official crimes on the head of that department.

"With the most serious charges of corruption pending against the post office department, the general land office and the Indian bureau, the republican party is on guard at every door leading to these chambers of public plunder, refusing admittance to the people's representatives to make a full and fair investigation into the rottenness of those great departments and report to the country how its business has been conducted.

"The refusal of the republicans to allow a nonpartisan investigation of the criminal conduct that has been going on in the post office department can bear but one construction, and that is they are afraid an honest investigation would uncover new crimes that would cast further reflections on this administration.

Roosevelt Unsafe President.

"It might be well for you gentlemen, to remember that in '92, a democratic president was elected on the issue 'turn the rascals out.'

"It is no longer a secret that the business interests of the country, including many supporters of President McKinley, do not regard Mr. Roosevelt as a safe man for the position he is now attempting to fill. By many his administration is considered a continuous experiment too theatrical for the business interests of the country, without sufficient time between acts to allow the people a good breathing spell.

"There are some recent incidents in his administration to justify the apprehension that on some slenderous occasion he is liable to go off on sudden and inconsiderately and greatly embarrass the country in some of the graver affairs of government. So, all conditions considered, there is much to encourage democracy in the approaching campaign.

Democrats United.

"I desire to call the attention of the country to the fact that the republicans are doing everything in its power to make the country believe that the democrats will not be united in the next election. It is to the interest of the republican party that such an impression should be created. It hopes to retain in its own ranks those republicans dissatisfied with this administration. And as a part of their program the republicans are doing everything possible to induce democrats to line up with some radical candidate and disorganize themselves into a hopeless division before the national convention meets. But I don't believe the great body of democrats will be influenced by suggestions from any such source."

Wedded to Their Idols.

Only two years and a half have elapsed since William McKinley, in his last public speech at Buffalo, proclaimed the necessity of amending the tariff law, and declared that "the period of exclusiveness is past." The name McKinley is worshiped as if a shrine had been erected to his memory, by the party which he led, but the man McKinley and the things for which he stood in his Buffalo speech are held in abhorrence by the republican leaders of to-day. Blind leaders of the blind, they term the mildest and most necessary suggestions to correct the worst abuses of the tariff, the most rudimentary plans for justice, to the consumer as against the predatory, tariff-sheltered trusts, "free trade," and we'll none of it. When the blind lead the blind, Holy Writ tells us that both shall land in the ditch.—Albany Argus.

——President Roosevelt severely taxed the letter "I" in his instructions to the Panama canal commissioners. He used the personal pronoun 27 times. One might think one was reading a communication from King Edward to parliament.—St. Louis Republic.

Federal Opossums.

In Washington last week a fat opossum was caught while crawling around a second-story ledge in the state department building, just below the window of Secretary Hay's office. This gave rise to inquiries and the discovery that a whole colony of opossums resides in the building. They are all fat, and the conclusion must be that they find the picking good. And they are not the only possums in the federal service. Over in the post office department Mr. Payne has any number of them.—St. Louis Republic.

Newton's Law.

Newton's law of gravitation, which states that two bodies attract each other with a force inversely proportional to the square of the distance between them, has been made the subject of an exhaustive investigation by Prof. Brown, of Haverford college, says the Iron Age. He announces that his calculations show Newton's law to represent the action of our moon to within the one-millionth part of one per cent., and states that no other physical law has ever been expressed with anything like the precision of the simple statement of this one.

SHOULD GET TOGETHER.

Ohio Republicans Are Manifesting Too Much Interest in Political Plunder.

Peace, we are told, has come, or is on the way, to the Ohio republican factions. It has been decided not to permit the distribution of a little post office patronage to wreck the party in the Buckeye state. 'Tis well, says the Washington Star. The public expects lively contests over good places, but never sympathizes with men who carry such contests to the extreme of injuring party organization.

We have been treated to some strange talk on the subject of the Ohio situation. Last year's election, as we all know, was carried by a united republican party, assisted by a considerable number of democrats. The republicans worked with all the greater fervor because of the fact that Mr. Hanna's seat in the senate was in the balance, while those democrats who slyly helped had in mind the snowing under of Tom Johnson. A majority of over 100,000 testified to the interest that was awakened.

Probably nobody worked harder than Mr. Foraker. He canvassed the state for his colleague, and contributed in every way to the success achieved. He conceded, as everybody else did, that it was Mr. Hanna's year. The junior senator, having impressed himself so strongly upon the country, was clearly entitled to reelection, and it was the duty of everybody to exert himself to that end. For the campaign there must be only Hanna men. And yet it was sought after the election to turn the power thus put into Mr. Hanna's hands for a specific purpose to Mr. Foraker's injury. It was stated for a time that he would not be allowed to go as a delegate to Chicago, and there are still intimations, notwithstanding these reports of peace, that when his present term in the senate expires he may have to fight vigorously for his life.

Mr. Foraker, it is needless to say, is a man of great force in the senate. He is one of his party's readiest, most brilliant and most effective debaters, sharing with Mr. Spooner the honor of being put forward in all emergencies when the greater questions are under discussion. The mere threat, therefore, of the loss of such a man to the public service as the result of a petty squabble over patronage should be sufficient to sober up both sides in Ohio and produce harmony a foot thick.

BADNESS OF REPUBLICANS.

An Admirable Time to Recche the Democratic Cry of 1896—"Turn the Rascals Out."

The republican leaders are gradually being caught in the net set for grafters. Over one hundred republicans were included in the Bristow report, a majority of whom will hardly succeed in attaining a coat of whitewash. When the Bristow report was under discussion, the democrats made a motion for an investigation of the whole post office department, which was defeated by the republicans, who claimed there was was nothing wrong except in the first assistant postmaster general's department. It now appears from evidence produced there is even greater rottenness in the department under the second assistant postmaster general. This was brought out in a speech by Hon. Robert Baker, of Brooklyn, which will be found in the Congressional Record of March 18, on pages 2692-4, in which he quotes from the Milwaukee Free Press charges against Hon. J. W. Babcock, of Wisconsin, of collusion to defraud the government by padding the amount of the official weighing of the mails. The charges are supported by affidavits of those government employes who carried the mails and makes a very clear case against Mr. Babcock.

This is a very serious criminal charge, and the more so as the newspaper printing it is republican, and Congressman Babcock cannot afford to allow it to pass without demanding an investigation. If he does not take that step the republican members of the house of representatives will have to inaugurate it and expel him, or themselves be classed with the grafters.

Congressman Babcock being the chairman of the republican congressional committee stands forth as a shining light of the republican party, and as the acts charged against him were committed when in command of the party interests, the whole republican party is involved if it does not clear its skirts of him.

It would seem to be an admirable time to recche the democratic cry of 1896—"Turn the rascals out."

Well, this might as well have been frankly admitted, for everybody knows it's so.—Binghamton (N. Y.) Leader.

THE FARMERS AND TRUSTS.

High Tariff Prices for Necessaries and Little Protection on Farm Products.

Some republicans in Minnesota and other states bordering on Canada are very anxious for reciprocity with Canada, but the American Economist denounces this reciprocity as "a means of adding to the profits of the millers, the jobbers and the railroads," and a selfish, senseless scheme of cheapening the domestic market for farm products. The Economist also claims "it would break down the price of wheat at Minneapolis, and for precisely that effect and for that reason the Minneapolis milling corporations and the Twin City daily newspapers are urging reciprocity with all their might and main." As every farmer knows, this rude reasoning is based on the supposition that the price of wheat is fixed in Minneapolis according to the amount of wheat received there. But the facts are that the price of wheat is controlled by the combined crops of the world and the demand for the surplus, after our own and other home markets are supplied. Those countries like England which do not raise enough wheat to supply their own people buy what they need from the United States, India, Argentine, Russia, or any other country that has a surplus to sell. The demand for that surplus fixes the price of wheat all over the world, and the Canadian wheat has but a slight influence to raise or lower it. If the Canadian wheat does not come through Minneapolis, where most of it would be ground into flour in American mills, it would be shipped to eastern Canada, and either made into flour there or shipped direct to England. In any event, the most of it reaches England and competes in regulating the price that is paid the world over.

The American farmer has been badly treated by the protectionists. He has to pay high tariff prices for all he buys and has but little protection on what he raises. The Economist knows this and must blaster up its protection fallacies by its pretended anxiety for the American farmer. The Protective Tariff League, which supplies the money to publish the Economist, is composed of eastern manufacturers, most of whom are now organized into trusts and combines which are bleeding the farmer at every pore, and their anxiety expressed through their organ, the Economist, for the protection of the farmer is like the love of the lion for the lamb—to make a good meal of.

This contention amongst the republican protectionists on the virtue of reciprocity, which, by the way, was favored by Blaine and urged by McKinley, and was part of the political creed of President Roosevelt until the "stand patters" forced him to yield to their "do nothing policy," is favored by many republicans, who see that protection cannot long exist unless some of its barriers to trade are lowered. The democrats may accept reciprocity as a means to break down protection, but it is not the democratic way of curing the evil of monopoly. When the farmers are relieved from trust exactions by the tariff being reformed so that the trusts can no longer charge them much higher prices here than the same trust productions are sold for abroad, the whole problem will be settled at the same time. All the farmer wants is to be allowed to buy in the cheapest market and sell in the best market the world affords. The farmer, with the trusts removed from his back, which are now riding him to his undoing, will then have equal rights with the monopolists who are now enjoying special privileges at his expense.

Foreign Trade and Tariff.

We think, however, that no matter how the election goes, the tide will shortly after that event set strong against the present tariff. It is being felt as an obstacle and clog on American industry in many ways. The high cost of our raw material prevents our export trade from expanding as it otherwise would. Our restrictions on imports make it difficult for other nations to trade with us. The demand for new and greater markets is becoming insistent. So we hear much talk of reciprocity, of removing the duties on raw material and of a general lowering of our tariff wall. That new outlets for our abounding energy are needed is proved by our attitude toward the far eastern question. We have insisted on the open door, and on free access for our wares into China. It is, of course, known that many of the Dingley duties were purposely made high in order that we may trade them down. Yet congress has stupidly refused to make any concession, except in the case of some of our island dependencies.—Indianapolis (Ind.) News.

——Such is the unifying force of Judge Parker's candidacy that it draws together and has already amalgamated, in a common cause, men who for years had not spoken; men whose antipathies were accounted beyond reconciliation. Judge Parker's nomination will be the beginning of the greatest democratic love-feast on record.—Albany Argus.

——The few democratic papers which have been attempting to belittle the Parker movement have never had much ground to stand on, and now even the little they had seems to have been taken away.—Houston (Tex.) Post.

——Mr. Rucker, of Missouri, has given the house of representatives a new expression in describing a man with much effrontery. He says that a man who can talk about the blessings of certain protection doctrines to the masses "must have cheek of such gigantic proportions that a whole buffalo robe wouldn't make sidewhiskers for him."—Chicago Chronicle.

Occasion for a Story.

A man had a story about a gun which he delivered himself of upon all occasions. At a dinner party one evening he writhed in his chair for over an hour waiting for a chance to introduce his story, but no opportunity presented itself. Finally he slipped a coin into the hand of a waiter and whispered: "When you leave the room again, slam the door."

The waiter slammed the door as directed, and the man sprang to his feet, with the exclamation: "What's that noise—a gun?"

"Oh, no," returned his host, "it was only the door."

"Ah, I see. Well, speaking of guns reminds me of a little story."—Tit-Bits.

He tried the treatment of several doctors, but did not get any better. At last he chanced to read an advertisement of Dodd's Kidney Pills, a remedy which has been making many wonderful cures, and he bought some at once and began to use them. He says of the result:

"Dodd's Kidney Pills do just what they are advertised to do. I can praise them for the good they have done for me. They cured me completely after the doctors had failed, and I wish that every poor sufferer could hear of them, for I know they will cure Kidney trouble."

There seems to be no case of Kidney Trouble, Rheumatism or Backache that Dodd's Kidney Pills will not cure perfectly and permanently.

TURNED ASIDE

THE DISOBEDIENT PROPHET AS AN EXAMPLE AND WARNING TO CHRISTIANS OF TO-DAY.

Sermon by the "Highway and Byway" Preacher.

(Copyright, 1904, by J. M. Edson.)

Chicago, Sunday, April 10, 1904.

Text:—"Ye were running well; who hindered you that ye should not obey the truth? This persuasion came not of Him that calleth you."—Gal. 5:7, 8.

OUR text is taken from Paul's letter to the Galatian Christians, and conveys commendation for well doing and then rebuke for having turned aside from obeying the truth. They had been progressing nicely in the Christian life, following faithfully the teaching and doctrine of the great apostle.

When certain conditions and influences and individuals had combined to draw them away from obedience to the truth. And Paul goes on to tell them plainly that they have not been persuaded of the Christ who had redeemed them and called them into His service. It was something counter to the will and purpose of God which was hindering them in the Christian race they were running. He is concerned for them, and longs to guide their erring feet back into the way marked out hy the Lord. The Galatian Christians to whom Paul sent this message have passed away, but Christians to-day manifest the same tendencies which troubled the inspired apostle, and the message which he wrote to the Christians of that early day is as much needed now as then. It is God's Word—convicting, convincing, authoritative—for Christians of all time. And how often God has to say to the Christian: "Ye were running well; who hindered you that ye should not obey the truth? This persuasion came not of Him that calleth you." It may not be that Judaisers are busy among us leading us into error as they were among the Galatians, but the Judaisers of the apostolic days have given place to a multitude of other conditions and influences which operate with exactly similar results in hindering the Christian in his obedience to the truth, and in turning him aside into sin and error. How many, many Christians there are who have run well and then been turned aside into the way of disobedience and disloyalty to the Christ. There is hardly a follower of Christ but has had such experience. Perhaps even now you, who have run well and faithfully, have turned aside and are not now treading the pathway of obedience and truth. "Who hindered you that ye should not obey the truth? This persuasion came not of Him that calleth you."

IN the thirteenth chapter of the first book of Kings we find a striking illustration of our text. Read it, for we shall use the story to illustrate our text. It tells of a prophet of God who did run well, but who was turned aside and met disaster and death. We do not know his name or the particulars of his life. We only know that, intrusted with a most important mission by God, he did splendidly for a time, but fell short of complete obedience and suffered a sad and bitter end. The facts in the story are these: Jeroboam, the son of Nehat, the first king over Israel after the disruption of the kingdom under Rehoboam, had with wicked cunning established two places of sacrifice and worship—one at Dan and the other at Bethel—so that the children of Israel would not continue to go up to Jerusalem to make their offerings. And, regardless of the sacredness of the office, and the fact that the sons of Levi were the Divinely-appointed priests, he formed a priesthood of his own and he himself became the high priest, as well as king. He established regular feast days, and upon one of these occasions, while he was officiating at the altar at Bethel and burning incense, God sent His prophet from Judah to utter the Divine judgment against the altar. And in passing we must note the fact that this is one of the most remarkable prophecies in the Scriptures, and, "in its clearness, circumstantial minuteness, and exact prediction of an event that took place 360 years after, it stands in striking contrast to the obscure and ambiguous oracles of the heathen."

HAVING spoken the word which God had commanded him, and having it confirmed by the rending of the altar by invisible hand, the man of God started obediently to return to Judah by a different way from that by which he had come. Jeroboam, who had felt the withering power of Divine judgment upon his arm, and had then been graciously restored in answer to the prayer of the prophet, sought to stay him, and invited him to the royal palace to dine. But the man of God had his explicit directions, and plainly told the king that, if he should offer him half of his kingdom, he could not tarry, for God had told him to neither eat nor drink until he had returned to his own home. And so, mounting his ass, he started. Thus far he had run well. He had obeyed. But he loitered upon the way. He allowed temptation to overtake him in the form of a man who came to him with sanctimonious face and reverential manner, and told him that he had had a revelation from God, which countermanded the first orders of God. In short, that the man of God was to return to his house, and eat and drink with him. And because he wanted to believe this false prophet—this wicked man who was probably one of the appointed priests of Jeroboam—he turned aside from the course God had marked out for him. And while eating in the forbidden place God's worst judgment against him came, and he went out to perish before the fierce attack of a creation. It is a sad story, but it has its lesson and its warning for you and for me. "Ye were running well; who hindered you that ye should not obey the truth? This persuasion came not of Him that calleth you." Let us not be harsh in our judgments upon the prophet of Judah who failed just when he was about to round out a splendid service with success and full obedience. Let us consider ourselves and see if we have not turned and are not most apt to turn aside from complete obedience to the will and commandments of God.

THIS man of God had exact and full instructions from God as to his journey, his testimony and his return. Man never turns aside from the pathway of obedience because God has failed to make the way plain. The Galatian Christians had not departed from the doctrine delivered unto them by Paul, because it had not been made simple and plain. And you and I do not turn aside from the right path because God has not lovingly and faithfully and carefully marked all the way over which our feet should go. Yet did run well, oh, man of God! Why did not you continue so to the end? Ye did run well, oh, ye Galatians! Why did not you so continue to the end? You and I do run well at times, we perform half a service for the Master faithfully. But what hinders us finishing as we began? Surely it is not because God has failed to make Himself understood. It is not because He has not hung sign posts at every turn in the road. He has made it so plain that "wayfaring men, yea fools, shall not err therein." The turning aside of the Christian cannot be charged to any neglect, or indifference on the part of God. He has provided chart and compass and guide book, and best of all He has given us a Pilot who has been over all the journey of life and served in every possible condition and circumstance, so that He is able to help and guide as need requires. Such being the case, we cannot claim that our vacillating course is chargeable to God. We cannot offer as excuse for having turned aside from the path of duty and obedience that God had not given us careful instructions, and plain commands, for He has, and we know it. God is not responsible for our failures.

FIRST of all, then, we may discover the secret of the failure of the man of God in delay and the seeking of ease in a forbidden place. "What hath hindered you?" Delay and self-sought ease! Perhaps more failures can be counted from this source than from any other. The man of God did not stop and rest under the tree by the roadside in order that he might commune with God. Back into Judah was the place where he must go to receive God's "Well done, good and faithful servant." Back in Judah was where God would talk with him further. He could not receive these on the roadside where duty had not been fully performed. And neither more can the child of God to-day. It was safe for the prophet to go to the very heart of the enemy's country, to openly denounce the idolatrous worship and the false altar and priests, because God had sent him, but it was not safe to tarry by the wayside, and seek his ease, for God had not told him thus to do. He had been told to go and get back in time for the next meal, and that meant haste. Perchance he was hungry when he left Bethel, and he stopped to think of what a feast he would have had at the king's house. And how many Christians there are like him. They linger in the regions of the forbidden things. They know they must not partake, but they tarry to think what a goodly land the forbidden land is, after all, and they hanker after the viands that have been denied them. And this almost invariably leads to failure. The Lord's business takes the Christian right into the enemy's country. He is in the world surrounded by all the attractive and alluring things of this life. But, as the prophet was not to partake of the bounties of Bethel, even so the Christian is told not to love the world nor the things of the world, nor to indulge in worldly things.

BUT the Christian, regardless of the Lord's commands, sits himself down under the shade of the world's tree, and reasons on this wise, much as I believe the man of God reasoned that busy, and eventful, and fatal day. He was conscious of having done good service, but instead of reporting back to headquarters at once, and letting God commend if commendation were due, he encouraged the self-satisfied feeling which filled his heart. His thought all centered in self, and what he had done. He, the servant of God, had obeyed God's voice, and departed early that morning for Bethel. He had spoken God's message, he had refused the king's meat, and had started back another way—surely, he had done well. He had obeyed God. Why should he not rest here under the oak nigh to Bethel? He was entitled, he thought, to a little quiet ease after his long journey, his splendid sermon, and his refusal of an invitation to dinner. His thought was all of self, and when one tarries by the way to think of self, and what self has wrought, he is in great peril. How very, very often the Christian falls into this snare. Faithful service back at Bethel is taken as warrant for self-indulgence on the outskirts of Bethel. Obedience, partially rendered, is deemed sufficient excuse for the seeking of one's own ease and pleasure. Have you never sought to ease your conscience for some questionable indulgence by recalling the attendance on church, the Sabbath-school class taught, the errand of mercy performed, the religious call made? I have, and it was only doing what this prophet of old did—sitting under the oak in ease and comfort when you should be well on your way back to Judah, there to meet your Lord, there to receive at His hands refreshing and blessing.

IF THE man of God had not loitered on the way, he never would have been overtaken by the wicked prophet of Bethel. All kinds of temptation come to one when thus delaying on the pathway of duty. The man of God was inviting disaster just the moment he lighted from his ass and stretched his weary body on the green sward under that enticing shade, and you and I invite similar danger and defeat when we delay in our Christian service. We run well for a time, and then failure comes. Why? so often we ask ourselves. We point to the service behind and think that it is strange that we could have so grievously fallen, when we were serving so loyally and faithfully. But the secret of our failure, the reason we have turned aside, is because we have stopped doing, and have allowed the false prophet of temptation to overtake us and lead us astray. Many a temptation would fail to overtake the Christian if he were faithfully going forward on the pathway of duty which led back to Judah, the place from whence you had started at God's command, and the place to which you must again come before eating and drinking and taking your ease. In the quiet communion of your closet you receive your commission for service. God speaks to you. He tells you of service to render, of a message to deliver, and you go forth to obey the command. But instead of returning to the closet after the task is done, you rest by the wayside and temptation comes and turns you aside. Mr. Moody, when holding meetings at St. Louis at one time, was approached after the service by one of his ushers who told him that there was a group of the most influential men and women of the city who wished to be introduced to him. This was very flattering attention, surely. Mr. Moody had just delivered one of his most powerful and effective sermons, and was busy here and there with the inquirers, while this company of distinguished people waited to meet the great evangelist. But when Mr. Moody had finished all the Lord had given him to do, he quietly, and unobserved, slipped out of the rear door and went to his room. And later, in explaining his apparent discourtesy, he said that he feared to tarry for the words of adulation and flattery; he must get back to his room and report first to his Lord Who had sent him forth. Oh, that we were all more obedient and faithful.

AND having tarried by the roadside, and given the wicked prophet time to overtake him, the man of God was ready to take the next step in the direction of positive disobedience to his Lord's commands. The prophet was not willing to disobey God. Oh, no! He knew what God's command was, and he repeated it to the Bethelite who had overtaken him, but he was ready to listen to a lying voice, and willing to believe that God had changed His mind and had sent him a message by some one else. This reveals to the Christian one of his greatest perils. Not willing to deliberately transgress the command of his Lord, and knowing what that command is, there come lying tongues within and without to make him believe that God had changed His mind in his particular case, and that he may return to Bethel and eat and drink and have a good social time. Analyze the reasoning which your subtle and wayward heart has used when you have turned aside from the path of duty, and you will find that you led yourself, or were led by some false prophet to believe that God did not mean what He said. The devil knows that there are many, many Christians whom he cannot get to do wrong unless he can make them believe that for some reason or other God has not meant what He said, and in the guise of an angel he brings a new message which is directly counter to God's command. The prophet believed this lying Bethelite, because he wanted to. He wanted to go back to Bethel. He wanted to partake of the good things which were to be had during that festival occasion. All the time he had been sitting under that oak he had been lusting for the forbidden food, and wondering why God had been so cruel as to deny him thus, when he had served Him so faithfully. And so when Mr. Lying Prophet came up he was glad to hear and receive his message and return with him. Turned aside! What a sad spectacle. Such splendid service, so well on the way back to the place where God could commend and bless. But loitering under the shade of self-ease, longing for the forbidden things, listening to a voice other than that of God, led to failure. And so it will you and me, dear Christian worker. How often we have turned aside, just as the prophet of old. "Ye were running well; who hindered you that ye should not obey the truth? This persuasion came not of Him that calleth you." Take heed! Learn the lesson of the prophet of old. Be constant. Be faithful.

Non-Smoking Employes Rewarded.

Six hundred and sixty men, women and boys employed in the woolen factory of Mr. T. F. Taylor, at Batley, received £1 each from Mr. Taylor as a reward for abstaining from tobacco for the last 12 months. One hundred and forty-one men and boys, and 519 women had kept the pledge which they were invited to take a year ago. As a result of the year's experience, 40 of the men have decided to give up tobacco altogether.—London Mail.

HIS FOUNTAIN PEN LEAKED.

And Annabel Googan's Face Bore Evidence Convincing and Condemning.

"Annabel!" called a Manchester mother over the banisters, as she heard the front door close.

"Yes, mamma," replied a sweet, girlish voice, and Annabel Googan slowly framed herself in the darkness of the staircase, relates London Tit-Bits.

"Was that Mr. Tinberry, Annabel?"

"It was, mamma."

"Do you know it is 20 minutes past 11?" came in cold tones from the wrapped figure in the upper hall.

"Mamma, we hadn't the slightest idea it was so late," said the young girl, earnestly. "You see," she continued, "Mr. Tinberry has been telling me about China and Japan. He said everybody ought to know about them, and it was so interesting, we never thought how late it was getting. Do you know, mamma," added the sweet girl, as she reached the landing, "that in China they—"

"Did Mr. Tinberry draw a map of China on your face, Annabel?" asked Mrs. Googan, sternly.

"Why, mamma?" asked the girl in startled tones.

The young girl rushed to a mirror and saw with horror-stricken glance that the left side of her face was streaked and stained with ink.

"Heaven and earth!" she screamed; "his fountain pen must have leaked into his waistcoat pocket!" and with a shriek of horror the beautiful girl fell fainting to the floor.

SKIN PURIFICATION.

Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Pills Cleanse the Skin and Blood of Torturing Humors—Complete Treatment $1.00.

The agonizing itching and burning of the skin, as in eczema; the frightful scaling, as in psoriasis; the loss of hair and crusting of scalp, as in scalled head; the facial disfigurement, as in pimples and ringworm; the awful suffering of infants, and anxiety of worn-out parents, as in milk crust, tetter and salt rheum—all demand a remedy of almost superhuman virtues to successfully cope with them. That Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Pills are such stands proven by the testimony of the civilized world.

The genius of hospitality is not so much in making people meet, but in helping them to part—on good terms. Remember that!—John Oliver Hobbes.

"PE-RU-NA TONES UP THE SYSTEM IF TAKEN IN THE SPRING."

SAYS THIS BEAUTIFUL YOUNG GIRL.

MISS MARJORY HAMPTON, OF NEW YORK.

Miss Marjory Hampton, 2616 Third Avenue, New York City, writes:

"Peruna is a fine medicine to take any season of the year. Taken in the spring it tones up the system and acts as a tonic, strengthening me more than a vacation. In the fall and winter I have found that it cures colds and catarrh and also find that it is invaluable to keep the bowels regular, acting as a gentle stimulant on the system. In fact, I consider it a whole medicine chest."—Miss Marjory Hampton.

PURE BLOOD.

Blood Impurities of Springtime—Cause, Prevention and Cure.

Dr. Hartman's medical lectures are eagerly scanned by many thousand readers.

One of the most timely and interesting lectures he ever delivered was his recent lecture on the blood impurities of spring.

The doctor said in substance that every spring the blood is loaded with the effete accumulations of winter, deranging the digestion, producing sluggishness of the liver, overtaxing the kidneys, interfering with the action of the bowels and the proper circulation of the blood.

This condition of things produces what is popularly known as spring fever, spring malaria, nervous exhaustion, that tired feeling, blood thickening and many other names.

Sometimes the victim is bilious, dyspeptic and constipated; sometimes he is weak, nervous and depressed; and again he may have eruptions, swellings and other blood humors. Whichever it is, the cause is the same—effete accumulations in the blood.

Nothing is more certain within the whole range of medical science than that a course of Peruna in early springtime will perfectly and effectually prevent or cure this almost universal affection.

Every body feels it in some degree.

A great majority are disturbed considerably, while a large per cent. of the human family are made very miserable by this condition every spring.

Peruna will prevent it if taken in time.

Peruna will cure it if taken as directed.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Frankfort, Ky., April 7.—The condition of growing crops in Kentucky and the prospects for April are shown in the following report just issued by Agricultural Commissioner Vreeland on reports from correspondents in about one hundred counties:

The few warm days the latter part of March improved the wheat crop and many fields show a very material outcome, but the prospect for anything like a full crop is far from flattering. Many fields will be plowed up and sown to oats or planted in corn. The long, cold winter is being followed by a very wet spring, and while the warm rains have caused the wheat, meadows and pasture crops to put out green and have improved these crops, the wet weather has delayed farm work generally until the farmers are very much behind with their spring work.

From nearly every county the report comes that scarcely a furrow has been run. Consequently but little oats has been sown and few potatoes have been planted. There is no corn in the ground and nearly all the garden plots remain unbroken. The indications are that a large crop of corn will be planted in all parts of the State.

The farmers in the western part of the State are still discouraged over the low prices of export tobacco. The reports from this section of the State show that the acreage of this particular type of tobacco will be materially curtailed. Live stock of all kinds seems to have stood the winter well, and will go on the spring pastures in good condition. Feed is scarce and high in many localities. The work stock of many of the farmers of the poorer class must of necessity suffer for the want of a sufficient amount of good and wholesome food on which to do the excess of spring and summer work, made necessary by the long winter and wet spring.

Although the reports for this month were mailed to this office after the cold snap of a few days ago, other reports coming into this office indicate that the fruit trees just ready to bloom, were little if any damaged. There is a fair prospect for a good apple and peach crop. The above deductions are based upon foot notes added by correspondents as well as their actual estimates in figures.

The Postoffice authorities at Washington have fixed a penalty of $200 on persons for taking mail out of the office other than their own. All postmasters are liable to make mistakes and get the mail into the wrong boxes, and the law is that people must look at their mail before leaving the office and if they have other mail than their own it must be returned at once. This includes newspapers as well as letters.

Mrs. Prudy Koons, wife of Jacob Koons, of Patriot, Ind., is spending two or three weeks visiting her daughter, Mrs. Noah West and Louis Merrick and wife.

Barber Clark, of Burlington showed us a clock last Saturday that he was repairing that is 100 years old. It is all hand made and was made by L. C. Ives, Bristol, Conn.

William and Richard Lacy sold their tobacco for 8 cents straight, instead of 3 as the editor made us say. We understand Williamum threateus with a suit for damage, as the mistake has given him a back seat in the estimation of the ladies.

We were jollied the other day about our enormous appetite, but kept on putting away all the same undisturbed by the taunts. Finally we said in defense: "Well, you see, I take after both my father and mother. One ate a long while and the other ate a great deal."

J. J. Walton's tenants have delivered their tobacco. Fleek had 4,420 lbs. and sold at 7½ straight, instead of 7¾, as reported last week. Amount of sale $331 50. Total amount grown on the farm of J. J. Walton 11,450 lbs. Total amount of sales $782 10. These errors and those of purchase of horses were unintentional on the part of our informant.

The old plank fence running south from the Commissary on the farm of T. J. Walton, was built in the spring of 1874. There is a difference of opinion as to time when it was built. J. J. Lillard went to Missouri in the fall or winter of 1878 and the following spring a man by the name of Trester, of Indiana, and son built a fence for Mr. Lillard; and then built the above mentioned fence the same spring, which has been replaced with an up-to-date wire fence within the last week.

Robbed the Grave.

A startling incident, is narrated by John Oliver of Philadelphia, as follows: "I was in an awful condition. My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, pain continually in back and sides, no appetite, growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Then I was advised to use Electric Bitters; to my great joy, the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks, and am now a well man. I know they robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them. Only 50c, guaranteed, at all Drug Stores.

BEAVER LICK.

On our last meeting that Bro. Earle was with us Mr. Mills challenged him for a public debate on some of the practices of John Wesley in regard to the sacrament which he (Bro, Earle) had quoted from the pulpit previously. Thereupon Bro Earle told him under no condition could he afford to have a debate until after the close of his school, which would be the last of May. Thereupon Mr. Mills urged that it take place sooner. Bro. Earle wes very plain and positive, telling him that he was under expense at school, and would not have the debate under any consideration until after the close of school. Then in a short time there appeared an article in the Boone County Recorder, written by T. J. Hughes, in which he stated there would be a debate between the Baptists and the Methodists as soon as Bro. Earle could find a representative man, who would argue the question. Later, a second article appeared in the Recorder, stating that Mr. Mills intended to preach a sermon along these lines on April 10, but not wanting to do Bro. Earle an injustice, they would give him more time to find a representative man, when the time agreed upon had not then or even yet expired. Possibly T. J. Hughes was mistaken as to the time Bro. Earle agreed to attend to the matter, but, as Mr. Mills read each of these communications before they went to the press it is evident he wanted a false representation to go before the people, whereas Bro. Earle stated facts in regard to time agreed upon. Mr. Mills then tries to clear himself by expressing his sorrow that Bro. Earle's memory serves him so badly in regard to stating facts, while, on the other hand, we think that if Mr. Mills' memory serves him so badly in regard to the time agreed upon, we doubt if his memory serves him any better on other points. The following named are witnesses to the arrangement for the proposed debate:

Joe W. Cleek,
W. H. Griffith.

Therefore, in view of the above stated facts and he seemingly wrong spirit of Mr. Mills, we have decided that there can be no possible good derived from a debate, and for these causes, we members of Beaver Lick Baptist Church, have resolved 1st. That we, the church, will prohibit the debate, and request Bro. Earle to withdraw from the matter.

2d. There will be no more communications answered by the Church.

By order of the Church, April 17th, 1904.

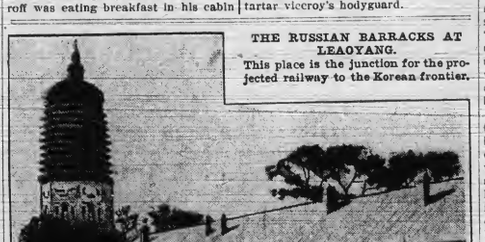
RUSSIA AND CHINA.



Rumored That Trouble Between Them is Imminent.

A Russian Naval Authority Insists That the Petropavlovsk and Pobieda Were Not Blown Up By a Japanese Mine.

St. Petersburg, April 14.—Official news has been received of the destruction of the big battleship Petropavlovsk at Port Arthur Wednesday. The vessel ran into a mine laid by the Russians, Vice Adm. Makaroff and nearly all the crew of nearly 700 were drowned. Grand Duke Cyril, son of Grand Duke of Vladimir, and a brother of the Queen of Greece, was badly wounded and may die. Six officers of the Petropavlovsk were saved.

St. Petersburg, April 15.—A press representative obtained Thursday night what is practically the official version of the sinking of the battleship Petropavlovsk at Port Arthur and it clears up to a great extent the mysterious features of that vessel's destruction. The version is as follows:

Retiring before the advance of a superior fleet, which was not fighting its progress, the Russian squadron approached the entrance to the harbor. It was shortly after 9 o'clock in the morning and most of the officers and members of the crew were at breakfast on the flagship. Vice Adm. Makaroff was eating breakfast in his cabin and the ward room was crowded with officers surrounding the tables. On the bridge Grand Duke Cyril, his friend, Lieut. von Kobe, Capt. Jakovleff, commanding the vessel, and two other officers were on watch examining the narrow entrance preparatory to entering it.

At about 8:30 o'clock there was a terrific explosion of the boilers, followed a few minutes later by a detonation from the well stored magazines.

Huge gaps were torn in the hull of the ship and the water rushed in. The center of gravity having gone, the ship rolled on her side and sank.

The remainder of the squadron immediately stopped and lowered small boats and the torpedo boats steamed as quickly as possible to the rescue of the survivors.

Grand Duke Cyril's injuries were severe. Besides receiving a blow on the neck, his legs were burned and he suffered a serious shock. He was taken immediately to a hospital at Port Arthur, where his injuries were attended to. He will remain there for three days and will then be brought to St. Petersburg.

The exact number of Vice Adm. Makaroff's staff on board the Petropavlovsk when she sank is unknown, but it is thought by the admiralty to be probably 15 or 16. The exact number of the crew lost is also unknown. The Petropavlovsk had a complement of about 650, of which 52 were saved at last accounts.

St. Petersburg, April 16.—A telegram from Adm. Alexieff from Port Arthur to the czar says that from 9:15 o'clock Friday morning to midday the Japanese fleet, in two divisions, bombarded the fortress and the town alternately from the Lalo Tishan promontory, firing 185 projectiles. The Russian squadron, including the battleship Pobieda, replied from the anchorage by a plunging fire. The batteries also participated. The loss on land were seven Chinese killed and five soldiers and three Chinese wounded. The Russian warships sustained no damage and there was no loss of life on them.

St. Petersburg, April 16.—Information which has slowly reached St. Petersburg has modified the opinion at first prevailing concerning the original cause of the destruction of the battleship Petropavlovsk. There is gradually developing a disposition to admit the possibility that after all Japanese torpedo boats may have dropped mines at the entrance to Port Arthur harbor.

London, April 16.—A St. Petersburg correspondent of the Standard sends a rumor to the effect that Vice Adm. Togo's fleet escorted a Japanese landing of troops to the westward of the Yalu river. When 12,000 men had been landed the Russian troops, which were lying concealed, suddenly attacked them, driving them back to the ships with heavy losses in men and guns.

London, April 18.—Rumors emanate from various quarters that trouble is imminent between Russia and China, but there is no authentic news to this effect. Some St. Petersburg correspondents consider the sudden departure of the Chinese from Moscow to be significant.

The Daily Telegraph's Shanghai correspondent cables a report to the effect that the Russians are disarming all the Chinese troops in Manchuria east of the Liao river, including the tartar viceroy's hodyguard.

Port Arthur, April 18.—Since the bombardment of Friday all has been quiet here. Viceroy Alexieff has hoisted his flag on the battleship Sevastopol. The Easter gifts received from the grand duchesses have been distributed to the soldiers and sailors.

London, April 18.—All the preparations prove that the Japanese are in readiness to sustain a campaign. A correspondent describes the irresistible courage shown by the Japanese in the fighting at Chong Ju, charging recklessly uphill in the face of superior numbers. He relates an incident showing the individual initiative of the Japanese soldiers. A private got isolated and saw the main body of the Russians making for the south gate of the town. He hid himself until the Russians approached and then deliberately shot the Russian commander, throwing the force into confusion.

St. Petersburg, April 18.—"Notwithstanding Vice Adm. Togo's claim that mines laid by his vessels were responsible for the disaster to the Petropavlovsk," said a high naval authority who is in a position to have access to all government reports, to a press representative, "I am more than ever convinced that the Petropsvlovsk and the Pobieda did not strike Japanese mines. Each ship was struck under the hull amidships, while a mine would have exploded on first contact near the bows. The fact that in both cases the ships were struck amidships might warrant the acceptance of theory regarding submarine vessels, although personally I do not hold that idea. The Pobieda probably escaped the fate of the Petropavlovsk because she carried coal in her hunkers between the bottom and the boilers, which, moreover, are of the Belleville type, where as the boilers of the Petropavlovsk were of Scotch make and were not protected by her hunkers."

One of the shrewdest naval attaches at St. Petersburg, however, told a press representative that he believed the Japanese laid the mines which were responsible for the disaster pointing out that this was one of the oldest systems of blockading when ships did not dare to run the risk of entering under an enemy's guns. The attache said he thought they would do this when he noticed that the Japanese fleet always made a wide detour of the entrance.

To Succeed Adm. Makaroff.

St. Petersburg, April 15.—It has been definitely decided that Vice Adm. Skrydloff, commander of the Black Sea fleet, will succeed the late Vice Adm. Makaroff as commander-in-chief of the Russian naval forces in the far east.

SENATOR DIETRICH.

Senate Declares Him Not Guilty of Wrongdoing.

They Found That He Had Not Violated the Statutes of the United States Nor Any Corrupt or Unworthy Conduct.

Washington, April 15. — Senator Dietrich, of Nebraska, has been declared by a special committee of congress to be not guilty of any violation of the statutes of the United States or of any corrupt or unworthy conduct relating either to the appointment of Jacob Fisher as postmaster at Hastings, Neb., or the leasing of the building in that city to the United States for a post office. The committee which investigated the charges against Senator Dietrich was composed of Senators Hoar, Platt, of Connecticut, Spooner, Cockrell and Pettus. Three members of the committee are republicans and two democrats. The report is unanimous.

The report reviews the testimony at length and the conclusion is reached that the charges can not be sustained. The committee, with reference to the lease of the building at Hastings, finds that it was effected while Mr. Dietrich was governor and before he became senator, that it extended for ten years and that the law governing in such matters was not violated. The report says the committee admitted not only such evidence against Senator Dietrich "as would have been competent in a court of justice, but also a great deal of hearsay testimony, being all which was brought to the attention of the committee as a possible clue to further information."

This course, it says, was taken with the consent of Senator Dietrich and it is stated that the committee "Did not determine how far this proceeding would have been justified for any reason, without such consent, even if they had carefully refrained from attaching any weight to it in their final decision. But it, in fact, did not in the least tend to shake or affect the conclusion they have reached."

THE WESTERN MINERS.

It Is Believed Their Strike Will Be Called Off Next Month.

Telluride, Col., April 15.—Adjt. Gen. Bell, who is enforcing martial law in San Miguel county, expressed the opinion Thursday that the convention of the Western Federation of Miners which is to be held at Butte, Mont., next month will call off the strike here or give the miners authority to do so.

"I am reliably informed," said the general, "that at the next convention the power vested in the executive board by the last convention to call strikes, will be annulled, and that in the future no strikes can be ordered except by referendum vote of the members."

LARGE GAS MAIN BURST.

The Lives of Thousands Were Endangered By the Accident.

Mt. Vernon, N. Y., April 18.—The bursting of a large gas main Sunday night has placed this city and Pelham in a situation of great peril. The accident befell the West Chester Lighting Co., which furnishes gas to these places, as a result of which the gas went out for a time and then started up again, pouring out its poisonous fumes in homes when nine-tenths of the residents were asleep. Police and firemen were hurriedly summoned and they made a rapid house to house canvass, notifying the householders of their danger. Bells were rung and whistles shrieked to spread the alarm. Telephones were called into requisition but the greatest danger is to those who live in outlying districts where it has been impossible to reach.

It Will Be Investigated By the Executive Committee of the A. F. of L.

Denver, Col., April 18.—The quarterly meeting of the executive committee of the American Federation of Labor will begin Monday in this city and continue throughout the coming week. One of the most important matters to be considered is the coal miners' strike in Colorado.

FIFTY-EIGHTH CONGRESS.

Regular Session.

Washington, April 13.—Senate—A sharp colloquy occurred in the senate Tuesday between Senator Teller and Hopkins, growing out of the reading by Mr. Teller of a letter written by the late Gen. H. H. Thomas, of Chicago, attacking the civil service administration of the treasury department. Mr. Hopkins took exceptions to the quoting of the letter and declared that the Colorado senator would be willing to "accept" authority from the "slums" whereupon Mr. Teller declined to yield further, declaring Mr. Hopkins' reference to the slums to be insulting. The incident occurred in connection with the discussion of the post office appropriation bill. That measure was under discussion during the first half of the session and was passed, all amendments offered by the democrats being voted down. The bill providing a form of government for the Panama canal zone was taken up but debate on it had not begun when the senate adjourned.

House—The race question again was injected into the proceedings of the house of representatives when Mr. Scott (Kan.) delivered a long address in which he referred to his previous statement that it was current in Kansas that ex-President Cleveland had dined C. H. J. Taylor, a Kansas Negro politician. He read several letters from Kansas citizens that it had been Taylor's boast that he had received such social attention from Mr. Cleveland. He also said that Mr. Cleveland, while governor of New York, had signed a bill providing for mixed schools. In a spirited reply, Mr. Williams (Miss.), the minority leader, defended the attitude of the south toward the Negro and said that discussion of the race question by the republicans was an old game by which when the republican party found itself confronted with issues that threatened its supremacy it began to wave the bloody shirt. At the instance of Mr. Bartlett (Ga.) a letter from ex-President Cleveland was read, denying that he had ever dined a Negro.

Washington, April 14.—Senate—The senate Wednesday began consideration of the bill providing for the government of the Panama canal zone. The greater part of the day was occupied by Mr. Morgan in support of amendments offered by himself. None of them was accepted and the reading of the bill was nearly half completed. Mr. Morgan attacked the new Panama company and contended that the United States should proceed to carry into effect the provisions of the treaty with Panama regardless of the demands of that company.

House—Under a special rule the house devoted itself to consideration of a bill amending the law relating to the Philippine islands. The provision in the bill in reference to the granting of railroad franchises and the guaranteeing of five per cent. on the cash capital actually invested in such railroads was opposed by Mr. Jones (Va.), who alleged that British and Belgian capitalists were ready to build the roads without such guarantee. Messrs. Cooper (Wis.) and Crumpacker (Ind.), in urging the passage of the bill, declared that it properly safeguarded the interests of the Filipinos.

Washington, April 15.—Senate—The senate devoted the entire day to consideration of the bill for the government of the Panama canal zone and Mr. Morgan again occupied the floor most of the day. The discussion related principally to details of governing the canal, but some consideration also was given to Mr. Hale's amendment requiring the use of American bottoms in the shipment of canal supplies to the zone. Consideration of the bill was not concluded.

House—The house of representatives passed the Philippine bill, following which there was an extended debate over a resolution to permit Col. Thomas W. Symons, of the engineer corps of the army, to serve on the advisory board of consulting engineers in connection with internal improvements in the state of New York. It was adopted by an overwhelming vote. The general deficiency bill was taken up and Mr. Hamilton (Mich.) discussed capital and labor.

Washington, April 16.—Senate—After a day devoted to quite routine proceedings, the senate was treated to a spirited speech by Mr. Bailey just before adjournment on the question of civil service. The subject came up in connection with a paragraph in the sundry civil appropriation bill. Mr. Bailey announced in plain terms that he had no sympathy with the "iridescent dream" of civil service. He declared that each party should control the patronage while in power and avowed himself a spoilsman. Mr. Hale was in accord with much that Mr. Bailey said, but cited that congress could not be induced to change the law even though convinced that it should be changed. The Panama canal bill occupied the major portion of the day and was passed without division. Mr. Spooner made a vigorous speech in support of the bill and was replied to by Mr. Morgan. The civil service appropriation bill was taken up and when the senate adjourned about half of it had been read.

House—Consideration of the general deficiency bill was resumed in the house Friday after a number of minor bills had been passed. The president's recent order regarding service pensions was attacked by Mr. Underwood (Ala.), who contended that there was no warrant in law for it. The president also was criticised by Mr. ray (Va.) because of certain suspensions of the civil service rules and regulations. General debate on the deficiency bill will close Saturday and the bill will be ready for amendment.

Sir Samuel Sims saw sweet Sara Sampson swimming. Suddenly she seemed sinking.—Sir Samuel stood stunned. Striding sexual, spurning shingle, Sir Samuel swiftly swam Sarawards. Sir Samuel skillfully supported swooning Sara. Swimming shorewards Sir Samuel successfully succored Sara. Seeming somewhat shaky, Sir Samuel sampled some spirits—special Scotch. Sara saw Sir Samuel's self-sacrificing spirit. Sir Samuel saw Sara's sweetness. Sir Samuel soon sought Sara. Striding slowly, Sara sighed softly. Sir Samuel seemed speechless.

"Say something, Sir Samuel," said Sara.

"Say Sam, Sara," said Sir Samuel.

Sara, smiling shyly, softly said "Sam."

"Sara—Sally!" stammered Sir Samuel. "Sweet Sara—sweetheart!"

Sara solemnly surrendered.

DANGEROUS NEGLECT.

It's the neglect of backache, sideache, pain in the hips or loins that finally prostrates the strongest body. The kidney warnings are serious—they tell you that they are unable to filter the body's waste and poison from the blood—the sewers are clogged and impurities are running wild to impregnate nerves, heart, brain and every organ of the body with disease elements. Doan's Kidney Pills are quick to soothe and strengthen sick kidneys, and help them free the system from poison. Read how valuable they are, even in cases of long-standing:

L. C. Lovell, of 415 North First St., Spokane, Wash., says: "I have had trouble from my kidneys for the past ten years. It was caused by a strain to which I paid little attention. But as I neglected the trouble, it became worse and worse until any strain or a slight cold was sure to be followed by severe pain across my back. Then the action of the kidney secretions became deranged and I was caused much annoyance besides loss of sleep. Doan's Kidney Pills were brought to my notice and after taking them a short time their good effect was apparent. All the pain was removed from my back and the kidney secretions became normal. Doan's Kidney Pills do all that is claimed for them."

A FREE TRIAL of this great remedy which cured Mr. Lovell will be mailed on application to any part of the United States. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. For sale by all druggists, price 50 cents per box.

A FUND FOR HEROES.

Andrew Carnegie Gives $5,000,000 Establish It.

This Scheme Was Conceived Immediately After the Harwick Mine Disaster, in Which Many Lives Were Sacrificed.

Pittsburg, Pa., April 16.—It was made known Friday that Andrew Carnegie had created a fund of $5,000,000 for the benefit of the "Dependencies of those losing their lives in heroic effort to save their fellow men, or for the heroes themselves if injured only." Provision is also made for medals to be given in commemoration of heroic acts.

The endowment is to be known as "The Hero Fund," and consists of $5,000,000 of first collateral five per cent. bonds of the United States steel corporation. The trust is placed in the hands of a commission of 20 men.

The commission held its first meeting Friday and made known the project. The scheme was conceived by Mr. Carnegie immediately after the Harwick mine disaster when he summoned to New York Charles L. Taylor, chairman, and F. M. Wilmot, manager of the Andrew Carnegie relief fund, to discuss with them plans for the relief of the sufferers from this catastrophe.

On March 12, just before his departure for Europe, Mr. Carnegie forwarded a letter to Mr. Taylor announcing the plan, and stating that the certificate of the bonds had been placed in his hands.

In Mr. Carnegie's own words the plan is "To place those employed in peaceful vocations who have been injured in heroic effort to save human life in somewhat better positions pecuniarly than before, until again able to work. In case of death the widow and children or other dependents to be provided for, the widow until she shall remarry and the children until they shall have reached a self-supporting age. For exceptional children, exceptional grants may be made for exceptional education. Grants of sums of money may also be made to heroes, or heroines, as the committee thinks advisable, each case to be judged on its merits."

A medal shall be given to the hero, or widow, or next of kin, which shall recite the heroic deed it commemorates.

The field embraced by the fund is the United States and Canada and the waters thereof.

THE RECENT PENSION ORDER.

Commissioner Ware Corrects a Wrong Impression.

Washington, April 16.—To make clear the actual effect of provisions of the recent age pension order of Commissioner Ware, about which a large number of inquiries are making, the following official statement was made Friday:

"There appears to be an impression among many of the old soldiers that allowances of pension under the age order of the commissioner of pensions are in addition to pensions allowed heretofore.

"This is an erroneous idea of the order. The law prohibits the payment of more than one pension to a person for the same period and the effect of the order on those having a pension already, only will be to increase such pension up to the age limit, if the pension already drawn is below that amount."

CAUSES SOME VEXATION.

The Non-Attendance of Republican Members of the House.

Washington, April 16.—The non-attendance of republican members of the house in what are thought to be the closing days of the session, is causing some vexation to the managers of that body. A circular was mailed Friday night to the republican membership signed by Representative Tawney, the "republican whip," and issued at the request of Speaker Cannon, calling attention in no uncertain language to the necessity of attending to business. The leaders Friday predicted that April 28 would be the day of adjournment and they are bending every effort to carry out this plan.

The Statehood Bill.

FAST AND ACCURATE WORK.

The Twelve-Inch Gun Crew of the Texas Holds the World's Record.

Pensacola, Fla., April 16.—The 12-inch gun crew of the battleship Texas now holds the world's record for fast and accurate work, snatching the laurels from the battleships Wisconsin and Alabama, between which ships there was a dispute as to the championship. The Texas concluded her practice in the gulf Friday and came into the harbor when it was made known that she had an average of about 89 per cent of hits, which is about two per cent better than that of the Wisconsin, which vessel has been heralded as possessing the prize gun crews of the navy. This record is also better than that made by the Alabama, which was thought to be the world's record, and far ahead of the flagship Kearsarge. With her 12-inch pieces the Texas made in one string of shots 11 hits in ten minutes, more than a hit per minute. This was with the forward 12-inch gun and with the 12-inch piece ten hits were made out of 11 shots in ten minutes. With her six inch pieces the Texas also carried off the honors from all that can be learned and her general average is said to be higher than was ever before made by a naval vessel.

AT THIS SESSION OF CONGRESS

Prospects For Passage of Act Governing the Philippines Not Flattering.

Washington, April 16.—The prospects are not regarded as flattering for the passage at this session of congress, in its present form, of the Lodge and Cooper hill for the smendment of the act governing the Philippines. Secretary Taft has been apprised of the situation and is making personal appeals to democratic members not to oppose its passage. A movement has been started looking to the abandonment of the section giving government aid to railroad building in the Philippines. If this is eliminated and several other amendments can be agreed on in advance it is possible the bill will be passed.

The fire began in the evening and lasted throughout the night. Only the ruins of the palace remain. The emperor and his suite succeeded in escaping to a nearby refuge. The report does not mention any loss of life, nor does it give the cause of the fire, but the recent political unrest in the Korean capital leads to fears that the destruction of the palace was the work of the rebellious element.

TWO EXCITING FIRES.

The Former Was Gutted With a Loss of $75,000—There Was One Life Lost in the Latter and Several Were Injured.

Indianapolis, Ind., April 18.—Fire, which for almost two hours threatened to destroy the principal retail district, was discovered at an early hour Sunday morning in the Occidental hotel. Every fire company in the city, as well as those from the outlying suburbs, was summoned. The house was filled with guests and a panic was narrowly averted. There were many narrow escapes from the flames and suffocation, the inmates being compelled to leave the building clad only in their night robes. The hotel, which front for half a block on Illinois street south of Washington, is valued at $100,000 and is gutted. The loss is estimated at $75,000. The following is the list of losses to business houses on the ground floor of the building: Ferger's pharmacy, $8,000; Floro's candy kitchen, $5,000; Rubens Clothing Co., $5,500; Raphael Millinery Co., $10,000; P. J. Ryan, hatter, $8,000; Henry Berghelm, jeweler, $1,000; Reinle A. Miller, $2,500; A. Schomberg, cigars, $1,000. In every case the loss is fully covered by insurance.

While the city fire department was being taxed to its utmost fighting the Occidental hotel fire Sunday morning an alarm was turned in from St. Vincent's hospital. When the first fire company arrived one life had been lost, and several were seriously injured in the panic that followed.

For a time it seemed that the flames, which started among a pile of rugs under the east stairway, would find their way to the upper floors, resulting in a frightful holocaust.

At every window, on the third and fourth floors, were crowded the panic-stricken men and women, screaming for help to those on the street below who were for more than 20 minutes prevented from entering the building because of the dense smoke.

The panic that raged on the third and fourth floors continued until long after the fire had been quenched. Patients who had just undergone surgical operations rushed from their beds to the windows and attempted to throw themselves to the ground. Harriet Leahy, an old employe of the hospital, leaped from a window on the fourth floor and when picked up was dead.

In the rear men and women were making ropes of bed clothing by which they escaped to the ground below. Katherine Beach, less forunate than the rest, lost her hold and fell from the third floor and is now in a critical condition from internal injuries sustained.

As an unusual number of surgical operations were performed in the hospital on Saturday many of the patients, carried from their beds by the rescuers, were in a critical condition and the physicians in charge fear that many factalities may ensue. The patients were carried to the male ward, which is on the first floor, and was not seriously affected by the panic which raged in the upper floors. Improvised cots and mattresses were brought into use and a general call for medical assistance sent throughout the city. Within a short time about a hundred physicians arrived and the patients were cared for.

Henry Nichols, who underwent an operation for appendicitis a few hours before the outbreak of the fire, jumped from his bed and ran down four flights of stairs into the street. His condition is critical.

James Dawson, an emaciated patient, worked heroically among the panic-stricken men and women on the third floor. One after another he pulled away from the windows, those who were preparing to jump to the street below and piloted them through the smoke to places of safety on the first floor. After saving 27 nurses and patients from possible injury, in this manner he lost consciousness and was carried into the male ward where medical attention was given him. For a time it was thought that he could not undergo the terrible strain to which he had been subjected.

Owing to the fire proof construction the actual loss to the building will not exceed $1,000.

THE CLOSING DAYS.

Appropriation Bills Will Be Kept to the Front in the Senate.

Washington, April 18.—There will be an effort to keep appropriation bills to the front all the time during the present week in the senate, and to this end the sundry civil bill will be taken up on convening Monday. When it is disposed of the pension appropriation bill will be presented and it hoped that the bill will in turn be immediately followed by the general deficiency bill. The senate leaders are apprehensive of the effect of consideration of various bills on the calendar and are exercising their ingenuity to keep them in the background.

There are some features of the sundry civil bill which will cause discussion and it is believed that it will hold attention during Monday and Tuesday. The pension bill usually goes through without debate, but it is probable there will be quite a little discussion on the pending bill.

If opportunity is offered Senator Hansebrough will endeavor to obtain consideration of the Indian agreement bills. Senator Fairbanks also stands ready to seize the first chance that offers to press his bill for a new executive building in Washington.

Statehood and ship subsidy will be the features of the house proceedings this week, with conference reports and minor bills to fill in the gaps. The committee on rules on Monday morning will decide on a program for the statehood bill. The rule on this matter, which will be brought in for adoption Monday, will call for consideration of the bill Tuesday, with debate limited probbaly to four hours. It is now the intention to dispose of this bill entirely on Tuesday. The rule making a special order for the Gardiner bill, providing for a joint commission of members of the house and senate to investigate the whole question of ship subsidy during the recess of congress, will be brought forward by Mr. Grosvenor on Wednesday. Debate on this measure will consume probably six hours. The Alaska delegate bill will remain the "continuing order" and receive consideration whenever there is nothing else before the house. The present plan of the leaders contemplates final adjournment April 28.

ENTRANCE TO WORLD'S FAIR.

Electrical Devices Will Be Installed Instead of Ticket Sellers.

St. Louis, April 18.—It has been decided by the World's fair to instal electrical devices instead of having ticket sellers and ordinary turnstiles during the exposition period. The Lindell entrance will be the main gate to the big exposition. There 32 turnstiles are being installed, and through this entrance alone it is estimated that at least 500 persons can pass every 60 seconds. To gain admission to the grounds a person must approach the turnstile and place a half dollar in a slot. This half dollar as it desends is still visible and releases a lever which unlocks the turnstile. The person then can pass through the gates and the minute that he is inside the turnstile is locked. Individual gates are being installed for children. At these turnstiles a quarter will operate the mechanism.

STATE ITEMS OF INTEREST.

NEW COUNTY OF BECKHAM.

Glaring Errors Have Been Discovered in the Creating of It.

Frankfort, Ky., April 15.—The case of Carter county vs. Brooks and Zimmerman, which involves the constitutionality of the act creating the new county of Beckham, was argued in the court of appeals Thursday. The point urged is that the new county does not contain 400 square miles of territory, as required by the constitution, and that the counties of Lewis and Carter will be left with fewer than 400 square miles of territory if the new county is created; that the new county line is less than ten miles from the county of Carter which is also contrary to the constitution. When this case was filed the alleged mistake in making the survey of the new county had not been discovered, but in the argument before the court of appeals Friday the glaring errors in the survey will be discussed and exhibited to the judges by plots and maps, which show that the lines as called for in the bill run over into the state of Ohio and include Vanceburg in the new county.

REGULAR

In Everything Saturday.

Were the Meetings of the Campbell County Democratic Committees.

[Daily Enquirer, April 12.]

Frantic attempts are being made by certain disgruntled politicians to show that the action of the Democratic Committee in ousting Charles Crupper and Squire Donelan from their usurped positions really amounted to nothing; that the men who took this summary action do not constitute the real committee, but are a body of so-called "fakers" without privilege or authority to act for the Democrats of this section.

Yesterday a list of the names of the men making up the committee which these same disgruntled ones look upon with approbation was obtained from one of the men who had his political head decapitated last Saturday. The list is herewith reproduced, those preceded by a * have been present in person or by proxy, duly sworn to at the meeting on Saturday, and those not indicated by a * being members by grace of appointment at the hands of parties utterly incapacitated and without authority to make such appointment. It should be borne in mind that this list is approved by those partice opposed to the candidacy of Hon. D. Linn Gooch, and yet all those whose names are indicated by a * were present at the regular and lawful meeting of the committee last Saturday, which took into its own hands the conduct of its own affairs by saying without equivocation and in no uncertain terms who should constitute the lawful head of the committee. Here is the list:

*Albert Habel, Dayton.
*Jos. W. Bohn, Dayton.
*Louis Tieman, Dayton.
*Chas. A. Bird, Dayton.
George W. Geiger, Bellevue.
H. J. Egbert, Bellevue.
Jos. A. Cassidy, Bellevue.
John Stahl, Bellevue.
*John Thornton, John's Hill.
*Frank Minnick, Coldspring.
Wm. Ryan, Highlands.
Chas. S. Crupper, Alexandria.
*R. W. Shaw, Persimmon Grove.
Phil Schroth, Claryville.
*P. Stockstetter, Gubser's Mill.
*Wirt Gosney, Grant's Lick.
Dr. J. Bonar, California.
*George Traver, Carthage.
*Chas. Goetze, Camp Spring.
George P. Huber, Clifton.
*George Kessen, Wilders.
*Joe Herringer, Brayville.
*George Carmack.

Four of the names—Egbert Schroth, Cassidy and Crupper—appearing in small type were duly elected. The others were illegally appointed without warrant or authority.

The party law of the Democracy of the State of Kentucky is most explicit on the point of the method of the creation of this committee. It says that the members thereof shall be elected by a vote of the members of the party. The Campbell County Country Committee was duly elected in conformity with this law in 1900 for a term of four years. The term of office of the various members has not expired, nor will it expire until the next general election this fall.

In defiance of this well-known and long established law of the party certain adventurous ones with personal ends to serve issued an edict that certain members of the committee were no longer desired, and announced the names of other parties who would take their places. It should be understood once and for all time that the action of these parties in no sense and at no time invalidated the men, who were duly elected by vote of the party, who have been and are now the only legal members of the committee. Nobody has the right to appoint the members of the committee.

Statements that are being issued from time to time that the action of the committe last Saturday was inspired by this party or that, or in the interest of one party or another, have no foundation in fact except that there is a determination in the mind of the Democracy to see that the party is not assaulted and outraged, and that fair play is had for the candidacy of Hon. D. Linn Gooch. Had not the Sparta Committee made such an attempt there would probably have been no occasion for the sweeping action of the committee on Saturday last. It is not unlikely that the committee will go even further and see that the members of the party are given their own will in the matter of selecting a candidate for Congress by the primary method, which was and still is undoubtedly the preference of the very large majority of the party.

The published statement that the action of the committee was a slap at the friends of the lamented Judge Newman has no foundation in fact. The whole uprising has been occasioned by the general sentiment of the entire people not to have a distasteful candidate for Congress forced upon them.

JOY REIGNED

Throughout the Entire Sixth Sixth District.

[Enquire, April 11th.]

The action of the Eighty-third and Eighty-fourth Legislative District Committees Saturday in deposing Charles Crupper and Squire Donelan met with general approval and approbation throughout the county yesterday when the news of that action reached members of the party through The Enquirer. The whole matter was planned so quietly and executed so effectively that only members of the committee were aware of what was going on. The announcement of the summary punishment administered to those who had taken from the representatives of the party the right to say how and when a candidate should be named for Congress was received with the greatest evidence of hearty approval.

There seems to be a very general opinion that the action of the committee yesterday breaks the backbone of that element which sought to usurp the right of the members of the party to make their own choice of a congressional candidate. From all parts of the district came the report that hundreds of Democrats who had determined not to be outraged by the action of a snap convention, and who for that reason resolved to remain away from delegate conventions, aroused by the news of the action of the committee, had determined to go out in their respective counties to bring about the same result that would have been reached had the Sparta Committee seen fit to heed the call of the people for a primary.

The legion of adherents of Hon. D. Linn Gooch fairly overwhelmed him yesterday with congratulations on the bright prospect of his certain renomination. He was kept busy throughout the day answering telegrams and telephone calls, and receiving his friends. His triumph in the committee set pulses to beating fast, and from every quarter came assurances of generous and wholehearted support.

In the other camp there was consternation. The blow was sudden and unexpected. Feeble attempts were made by some of the more hardy at indifference, but the fact that the bombardment of the committee had pierced the armor of the opposition was more than apparent. There were threats that retaliation would ensue, but the only apparent recourse left open is the State Central Committee, and that body long ago validated the committee which met yesterday. It was a complete triumph and a most clever coup.

Just on the eve of a convention or a primary election is not the proper time to reorganize the party machinery as is trying to be done in some of the counties in this Congressional district, and an effort in that direction can have none other than a demoralizing effect on the party. It is very probable that had the plan of nominating their candidate for Congress in this district been left to the Democratic voters they would have chosen a primary election, but they recognize that the convention was called by those who had the authority to call either a convention or a primary election as they saw proper, and they having called a convention a very large majority of the Democratic voters in the district will not endorse any revolutionary methods seeking to overthrow the Congressional convention the calling of which was legal and regular. If those who are conducting party affairs are not executing their trust in a manner satisfactory to the party they should be relieved, but let the removal be made at the proper time and place. The revolutionary proceedings in progress in the Democratic party in this Congressional district for the last two weeks will jeopardize the success of the party in November, it makes no difference who is nominated.

Now, as to that vile sheet with which this Congressional district was flooded last Saturday, attacking, anonymously, men who stand high both socially and politically. The issuing of that sheet was nothing short of political bushwhacking, and its publication was inspired by some person or persons who knew that acknowledging responsibility for it would result in the incurring of serious trouble. A candidate in whose interest such a publications is issued is sure to have the condemnation of public opinion visited upon him. Some people need to be taught some decency in politics, and that they cannot assail a person in the manner Judge Lassing, A. B. Rouse and others were assailed by that so called Commonwealth.

There has not been such a flow of political oratory in the old court house for many a day, as rang through her corridors on Monday last. Only think of it Jo Elliston, Rhinock, Bob Elliston, Gray, Dickerson and DeJarnette all together and all at one time, and all talking good Democracy and loyalty to party organization. It was good to hear it.—Williamstown Courier.

GOOCH'S PLAN OF CAMPAIGN,

Hopes to Hold a Rump Convention and Secure Rump Nomination.

WILL THEN APPEAL TO CENTRAL COMMITTEE.

Contested Delegations Will Be Sent to the Convention by the Congressman.

[Kentucky Post, April 14.]

Despairing of securing the Democratic nomination for their man, Congressman D. Linn Gooch the adherents of that aspirant for further honors are busy laying their plans for a rump delegate convention, which will present a rump nomination for Congress to Gooch, and give him a chance to appear before the Democratic State central committee of Kentucky.

The Gooch people began their present campaign of disruption when they held a meeting of ex-committeemen of Campbell County at Dietrich's saloon of Ft. Thomas who claimed to be the real committee, and went through the form of "ousting" M. F. Donelan from the Chairmanship of the city and county committee, and "electing" R. W. Nelson in his place. It is planned, wherever possible, to organize similar "committees" in other counties.

The rest of the program is apparent. In counties like Campbell, where the Gooch men have rump committees they will not recognize the call of the real committee at all, but will hold separate mass conventions of their own, and will select delegates of their own to the district convention. At the mass conventions, in counties where there are no rump committees, the Gooch people will claim to have the larger crowds. If the Chairman of the mass convention agrees with them, well and good. If, however, he declares the opposition controls, the Gooch people will withdraw, hold mass conventions of their own and send contesting delegations to the delegate convention.

In this way they expect to have three kinds of delegates appear at the delegate convention—delegates who were actually elected and on whom no contest is made by the opposition, delegates selected by rump conventions, called by rump committees, and delegates elected at bolting mass conventions.

If the anti-Gooch forces control the committee on credentials, and declare the rump delegates and contesting delegates illegal, then the plan is for the three different kinds of Gooch "delegates" to leave the convention, organize a district convention of their own and nominate Gooch.

The regular convention will, it is conceded, nominate either E. C. Smith, of Carrollton, or Joseph L. Rhinock, of Covington. The nominees of the regular convention will be entitled to the credentials and the emblem, but the Gooch people expect to ask for it for their man, and will endeavor to have the matter taken up to the State central committee.

They will say to that committee: "Here is a mess in the Sixth District. Here are two candidates, each claiming to have been nominated for Congress by mass conventions representing the people. Unless you settle this thing there will be a disrupted party."

The Gooch people are then in hopes that the central committee will declare all nominations off, and order a primary in this district.

The very small number of indictments the recent grand jury returned in this county, speeks well for the conduct of Boone county people for the last four months.

A neat little envelope, postmarked Covington, Ky., received at this office yesterday, contained a card which reads: "Thomas Chambers Atkinson, born April 18th, 1904."

James L. Clore brought to this office, one day last week, a set of artificial front upper teeth, which a colored man foundhere in town and delivered to him. The owner can have same by calling at this office.

The members of the Boone Base Ball Club will meet here next Saturday afternoon for the purpose of organizing and practice. Every member of the club is earnestly solicited to be present at that meeting.

Don't forget that the Democrats of this county will hold a mass convention at the court house next Saturday at 1 p. m. to select delegates to the district Congressional Convention which meets in Newport on the 27th inst.

The base ball season was opened at Erlanger last Sunday by a game between the Erlanger team and the McMickins, of Cincinnati, in which Erlanger pulled down the victory by a score of 4 to 3. Hughes was in the box for Erlanger, and threw fine ball.

The RECORDER'S friend, James M. Barlow, of Pleasant Valley, accosted the writer one day, last week, saying, "I have a paper I want to give you," and handed out a nicley folded sheet containing the name of a friend in a distant land and the money for one year's subscription. That is the kind of a paper to serve on a country editor.

A Thoghtful Man.

M. M. Austin of Winchester, Indiana, knew what to do in the hour of need. His wife had such an unusual case of stomach and liver trouble, physicians could not help her. He thought of and tried Dr. King's New Life Pills and she got relief at once and was finally cured. Only 25c, at all Drug Stores.

Mrs. James L. Huey, of Union neighborhood, who had not been in good health, committed suicide, yesterday, by hanging. Mr. Huey went out on the farm in the morning, and when he returned about noon he missed his wife, and began a search, finding her hanging in the cellar. How long she had been dead is not known, as she was cold. Mrs. Huey was a daughter of the late Lewis Aylor, of Florence.

M. F. Wingate, of Petersburg, has sold his tobacco for between $16 and $17, and will make $15,000 or more. Mr. Glasscock, of Walton, has sold his purchase of 200,000 pounds at $15½, making $15,000 or more. John W. Berkshire, of Petersburg, had two purchases, one Indiana tobacco at Aurora, and the other, Boone county tobacco—in all about 350,000 pounds. The Indiana tobacco he sold for $20 and the Kentucky tobacco, $18 per hundred. His profit will be close to $25,000. Riley & Hogan sold their purchase, yesterday, at $16½. The Boone county dealers have cleaned up about $100,000 in profits in the last few days.

A CARD.

To the Democrats of the Sixth District of Kentucky:

The scurrilous and despicable sheet called the Commonwealth mailed all over the 6th District of Kentucky, is the contemptible and dying effort of a defeated Congressman to make sentiment against myself and and friends. It is a series of unmitigated lies from beginning to end.

I started life a poor boy. I have for many years and am now President of the Board of Trustees of the Public Library of Covington; was for two terms Mayor of Covington, and am now and have been since its organization, a director of the Citizens National Bank of this city.

The filthy, blackmailing sheet has no one identified with it to hold responsible. It is called the Commonwealth to mislead the people, because for many years, there was a paper known as the Covington Daily Commonwealth, which long years ago, ceased to be published.

I am making this race upon a high plane—seeking the nomination because I consider it one of the greatest honors that could be conferred upon me to represent the people of this district. I shall do nothing to further my interests that could, by any possibility, injure the party in this district, and, if it became necessary to vilify, abuse and misrepresent men of known character and standing in the party in order to secure the nomination, I should at once withdraw from the race.

Long before the Congressional committee met at Sparta I announced through the press in the district that I would make the race whether the committee ordered a primary or convention. I stood by that statement and still stand by it, and whenever I find that my personal preference is to be placed above the constituted party authority, then I feel that I am not subject to its authority, and would be making the race, it I continued to run, as an independent candidate. The authority has spoken, I accept its action, as has Col. Nadaud and Mr. Smith.

I have not gone about seeking to remove committees or chairmen or to dig up and give new life to old committees who have long since gone out of power, but I have appealed to the people in a fair, open and honest way, both in person and over my signature, for their support and in this way, I hope to secure, through them the nomination.

Thus I shall continue my canvass to the end, trusting to receive your support in the Mass Convention on the 23d inst. and assuring you that I shall be deeply grateful for your support.

I remain sincerely yours,
JOSEPH L. RHINOCK.
Covington, April 18, 1904.

Signed Statement of All Nominees of the Late Primary.

Williamstown, Ky., April 16, 1904.

We, the nominees of the Democratic party for the various offices to be filled at the regular election in '05 in Grant county, Ky., and who received our nominations at the late primary election in Grant county, Ky., believe that the Congressional District Committee for this the 6th District of Kentucky, acted for the best interests of the party in calling a convention to nominate a candidate for Congress in this district rather than a primary election, and while espousing the candidacy of no particular candidate for Congress before said convention, we are compelled in the interest of party harmony in our county, to condemn as wholly uncalled for the action of our present representative in Congress, Hon. D. Linn Gooch, in the efforts which he has been making in this county to stir up dissention and strife in the party in our county, and we urge all good Democrats to discountenance such methods and stand by and support the regular party organization in this district.

The remains of James M. Riddell, who died recently at Williamstown, will be interred in the old cemetery at Burlington at 2 p. m., next Sunday. The services will be conducted by the Masons, of which order he had been an active member for many years, and it is desired that every Mason who can, will be present and participate in the funeral services.

Those who, a few years since, consoled themselves with the belief that the winters in this climate were growing milder and shorter, will have to abandon that belief. The winter of 1903-4 has been anything but short and mild.

Our suggestions to the ever faithful correspondents of the RECORDER that they incorporate more crop and stock items in their communications was accepted in the proper spirt, and there has been a marked improvement along that line.

A special term of the Grant county circuit court will begin next Monday. The large criminal docket in Grant has caused a delay in the disposing of the civil dockets to such an extent that Judge Lassing determined to give litigants the benefit of a special term.

It is very refreshing to read of the very handsome amounts of money that have been made by the Boone county tobacco buyers. They have been handling the weed on a very small margin for several years, and now that things have come their way no one should envy them their good luck.

It is rumored that the tobacco buyers in Carroll have made from $15,000 to $60,000 on their purchases. They have hardly come out even for several years and took the risk this year, and had it not been for the Continental trying to freeze out the independent manufacturers they would not have fared well.—Carrollton News.

CIRCUIT COURT.

The grand jury adjourned finally about 2 p. m., last Thursday. In its written report it stated that it examined 37 witnesses and found 7 indictments. It made about the same old report in regard to the county infirmary.

Of the seven indictments 2 were against the two negroes in jail. The other five were for misdemeanors.

The petit jurors were discharged Thursday afternoon, and allowed for three days' services.

Commonwealth's Attorney F. C. Greene, made a very good impression on those with whom he had business here, but there was no prosecutions in which he had an opportunity to prove his ability.

Taking Desperate Chances.

It is true that many contract colds and recover from them without taking any precaution or treatment, and a knowledge of this fact leads others to take their chances instead of giving their colds the needed attention. It should be borne in mind that every cold weakens the lungs, lowers the vitality, makes the system less able to withstand each succeeding cold and paves the way for more serious diseases. Can you afford to take such desperate chances when Chamberlaiu's Cough Remedy, famous for its cures of colds, can be had for a trifle? For Sale by all Druggists.

WHAT'S THE RUSH ABOUT?

The President Is in a Big Hurry to Get Congress Off His Hands.

President Roosevelt has ordered congress to disband. Congress does not usually adjourn the long session until after midsummer, but the republican leaders declare that May 1 at the latest will be the date this year. President Roosevelt probably feels more than any other former president that he has "Congress on his hands," and wants to get rid of it. This dislike and fear of congress has always been the talk of the "best business interests" in Wall street and thereabouts. It is not difficult to see that this feverish haste to get rid of congress can be traced through the administration to Wall street. If there were no democrats in congress, the trusts, combines and corporations would not object to its continuance forever, but the minority leaders are making too good a record and calling the attention of the country to the great need of reform, so they must be got rid of.

President Roosevelt has also another reason for wishing to get congress off his hands. He knows that nine-tenths of the republican senators and representatives secretly dislike him and would be quite willing to see him commit political hari-kari. On the surface they are favorable to his renomination, but they fear he will be defeated and that the loaves and fishes will be lacking with his political obliteration. They would feel safer with some other candidate, but see no way out of their dilemma. Why should congress adjourn without passing upon the many matters that the voters deem of great importance to them? Unfortunately what the people want is not what the trusts desire. The people want reform. The combines are willing to stand pat and the republican president and lawgivers stand with the corporations against the people. To have a record vote on those important reform measures the democrats favor would show too plainly to the voters how their representatives stand and it would be awkward for many republican congressmen to decide between their friends the corporations and their constituents. Caucuses and conventions are being held about this time and the ordinary republican voter, who is opposed to the trusts, might make trouble now, and more about election time. If it could be proved to him that he was represented by a trust lover, instead of a trust buster.

There is another reason for the anxiety of the republicans to adjourn congress at this early date. The democrats are demanding that the post office department be investigated, as they have evidence that but a small part of the rottenness with which that department has been proved to be honeycombed has been disclosed. It is very annoying to the republican leaders to be thus bearded in what they consider to be their own den by the minority and have the country constantly reminded that only a partial exposure of the grafting has been uncovered.

——A talk with political leaders in Washington makes one thing plain—the Cleveland wave is coming along with an irresistible sweep. "He is the only man that the democrats can win with," is what one hears on all sides. The Chronicle's observations in recent days lead it to believe that Cleveland's nomination will be inevitable.—Charlotte (N. C.) Chronicle.

TAFT AS A MOUTHPIECE.

Roosevelt's Method of Checking Any Demonstration Favoring Philippine Independence.

The St. Louis Republic conjectures, no doubt accurately, that Mr. Roosevelt spoke when Secretary Taft declared that it would be many years before the Filipino would be fit for self-government. It thinks, says the Albany Argus, that Taft was selected, because he used to be governor-general of the Philippines, and on the theory that what he said would carry more weight than any other cabinet mouthpiece.

Of the utterance itself the Republic says

"It is called out by the formation of the Philippine independence committee. Some of the best-known men in the country, regardless of politics, compose the committee that seeks what the democratic national platform of four years ago sought. Among those on the committee are: Charles Francis Adams, of Boston; Judge George Gray, of Delaware; W. D. Howells, the novelist; David Starr Jordan, president of the Leland Stanford university; Bishop Potter, of New York; Bishop Spalding, of Illinois; George Foster Peabody, the philanthropist; Andrew Carnegie, Wayne MacVeagh, Henry Van Dyke and Boke Smith."

In the opinion of our St. Louis contemporary, it is small wonder that when these men and others equally prominent in philanthropy, religion, literature, the sciences, the arts and politics move for the independence of the Filipino, Mr. Roosevelt hurries one of his numerous mouthpieces to the fore with a carefully prepared and censored speech calculated to counteract the influence of such men. But can he succeed?—it wonders.

ROOSEVELT GETS A PROD.

Republicans Are Only Shamming in Their Opposition to the Trusts.

Congressman John Sharp Williams, the minority leader in the house, has just offered two resolutions of inquiry which, while directed at Attorney General Knox, are really a prod to the whole Rooseveltian administration for its refusal to prosecute the trusts.

One of these resolutions virtually asks why the criminal clause of the Sherman anti-trust law is not being applied to the rich officials of the Northern Securities company, who, by the supreme court decision, are shown to be criminals. Why are those found guilty not being indicted?

The other resolution asks substantially why the attorney general has not made use of the evidence put in his possession a year and a half ago showing clearly that the anthracite coal trust is an illegal combination.

The attorney general is the only person who can bring suit against a trust. Why does he not follow up the nominal victory won against the Northern Securities company? Why does he hasten to assure the trusts that he will not "run amuck" in enforcing the law against trusts? Is it not clearly because the republican party does not dare to antagonize the trusts at any time, and especially on the eve of a presidential election? Where would they get campaign funds if they were to make enemies of the trust magnate?

Make no mistake; the republicans are only shamming opposition to the trusts.

——The Republican press is still worried over Judge Parker's silence. They will have no cause for worry over Roosevelt on that score. Many republicans wish that Roosevelt was blessed with some of the New York judge's reticence.—St. Louis Republic.

——Since the commission charged by the house of representatives with the investigation of the postal scandals is everywhere known as the "whitewash commission." it is not to be wondered that its sessions are secret, "far from the maddening crowd," Whitewashing jobs of that character will not bear the sunlight of publicity.—Albany Argus.

NOT YET

By JOE ANDERSON NORRIS

(Copyright, 1904, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

JUDITH had come from the west to New York with mammoth artistic ambitions and crude ideas of morality common to rude, young and unsophisticated countries. She located in a small downtown studio and becoming suddenly afflicted with a homesick loneliness that struck cold to the marrow of her soul commenced to fraternize with whomsoever happened to be available. This was Louise Markham, her nearest neighbor, who occupied a studio on the second floor above. Clinging to her eagerly she inadvertently made a study of her life.

This girl painted little water color sketches of somewhat impossible heads with dreamy eyes too close together and red hats. Sometimes she sold these little pictures, but oftener it appeared that she did not. She kept house in a light way in her studio; and as is the rule in such cases, unless her friends took her out to lunch or dinner, she lived on air.

She was not without a certain charm. Very courteous, with a hoarsely musical voice in which there lurked considerable fascination unless heard too continuously, fortunately for Judith she was bent upon being agreeable, upon starting the western girl off in a society way—if the inhabitants of a building of offices and studios can be called society—advantageously as possible by introducing her as her friend.

Going the rounds with her she last of all introduced her to Gilbert, another artist of male persuasion.

So far as appearances went he was rather a superior artist. His studio was furnished in a fashion bordering upon elegance, in black oak, the screens and draperies in green to match the canvas with which the walls were covered.

As a matter of fact, judging casually, Judith was almost led to believe that he made money. Either that or he had developed a skill bordering upon the marvelous in the way of borrowing it.

People were never so entertaining to her as upon the occasion of talking about the most interesting possible thing to themselves; but before she had been with him ten minutes she had to acknowledge that Gilbert overdid it. He was so deeply, so astonishingly and profoundly interested in himself the wonder of it was to her that he found time to paint.

And a greater wonder that he could have the heart to waste a moment of that precious time on other people.

And yet it seemed that he found several moments to waste upon Louise. Once, twice, thrice even he paused in his subdued monotone relative to his career artistic, past, present and to come, embracing semi-occasional and brief allusions to various and sundry art editors for whom he had worked, for whom he was engaged in working, and for whom he expected at some future date to work, to point out the merits of his own masterpieces and show her how it was done.

When finally they tore themselves away—he had not half finished his biography, but Judith determined it should wait—and landed safely in the hall, Louise clasped ecstatic hands together and raised her eyes ceilingward.

"Isn't he lovely?" she cried. "Lovely!"

"Lovely enough," assented Judith, "but there is one serious objection to him."

"What?" sharply.

"He is too unselfish. He is wrapped up in the outside world to the exclusion of himself."

"What?" again.

Unhappily Louise did not always understand.

"It is my lunch time," explained Judith. "Will you come out with me?"

"No," refused Louise, with her politely elastic smile. "I will have my lunch in my studio."

Judith suppressed a groan at the thought of those lunches of hers. A wafer and a glass of water. A cracker and a cup of tea. Worse! One day she had found her lunching on burnt potatoes.

A week later she drifted into Judith's studio, not hilariously as was customary with her, but in a depressed way, as if crushed by something.

Judith looked up from her drawing and back again.

"Why aren't you laughing?" she asked her. Ordinarily she laughed.

Judith was homesick enough. Sometimes she was homesick enough to die. Cheerful company in so much as it enlivened her was therefore grateful. But she had to confess that there were moments spent in the society of Louise which she would rather have spent alone.

Louise sat down and swept her hand across her eyes.

"I feel more like crying," said she.

"Why?"

"He is married."

"He? Who?"

"Gilbert."

Judith put down her work.

"How did you find it out?" interrogated she.

"I asked him accidentally, never for a second thinking he could be, and he told me he was."

"It's a mighty good thing," ruminated Judith, "that you accidentally asked him."

"Why?" quickly.

Judith turned upon her.

"You wouldn't be going about with a married man, would you?" she demanded to know.

Without answering directly, Louise fell to dreaming aloud.

"He is so charming," she murmured. "We are so congenial."

"Unmarried people are always congenial," put in Judith.

"We have so much in common, both water color artists."

"If you were married you would be jealous of one another."

"I should never be jealous of him," indignantly. "He is so far above me. And how could he be jealous of me, so far beneath!"

"Marriage seems to change the current of people's lives," declared Judith "and people."

Louise gave a sigh so deep as to fill the studio.

"I don't know what I shall do without him," she lamented. "I don't. He is so helpful. Did you see that morning how he showed me about the colors? How to lay them on. What to do. That is a most unusual thing in an artist. Most of them wouldn't give you a hint if you died for it, but he! I don't know what in the wide world I am to do without him."

Here she buried her face in the pillows and Judith looking on was shocked to see that her shoulders shook.

She left her work, took a seat in the rocking chair, and sat there for some time silently endeavoring, to the best of her ability, to express her sympathy through the medium of mental telepathy, since she failed to find words.

Bye and bye Louise, lifting herself wearidly up, took out her sidecombs, combed back her hair, put them in again and began to talk.

"Of course," hesitatingly, "I must do without him," she said.

"Considering the unhappiness you might cause his wife," she decided, "I should think you must."

Louise got up and walked the floor for a space, not very far this way or that, for there wasn't room.

Presently:

"Why will these men marry?" she exclaimed.

"Before they have seen us," finished Judith. "It is just as well. If we were their wives they would soon find some other little artists around in studios that they would like better."

The subject had grown in interest. She concluded to give it her undivided attention.

"How would you like to be his wife?" she asked and some day come down and find yourself in his studio?"

Louise stopped walking and stared.

"Find myself in his studio?" she questioned limply.

"I mean find some other girl," Judith hastened to explain.

"I shouldn't like it," she declared. Then passionately:

"It would kill me!"

"It perhaps affects his wife in exactly the same way," remarked Judith calmly. "She wouldn't be a woman if it didn't. Go on, though, if you must. Then some fine morning she'll discover you. She'll find you in his studio and him gazing at you with those dreamy, shifting artist eyes of his and drop dead in her tracks. And it will be you," finally, "that will be after havin' that death to answer for, as Philip would say."

Philip was the Irish janitor.

All the laughter had gone out of Louise. Her eyes were sad. Slowly she walked to the door and opened it.

"I'll give him up," she promised, adding reminiscently and with seeming irrelevance, "the lovely little dinners he took me out to!"

Judith observed her in surprise, only half comprehending.

"But," she added quickly, "I'll give him up. I promise you," and the door shut on the word.

As Judith looked out the window at the heartening view of blackened chimneys, she thought:

"An honorable, straightforward girl, that. I like her."

What was her amazement then to see the girl on the following evening dressed in her best, going down in the elevator with Gilbert, going down blithely and out to dinner with him at some cafe; for she heard him say so.

She smiled across at Judith anxiously, propitiatingly; but she resolutely turned her back, refusing to speak.

It was late that night.

Judith had come home from her solitary dinner at a little cafe, brushed her hair, made her preparations for sleep, robbing the couch of its variegated day covering and turning it into a whitely counterpaned bed; and was lying on it, half dozing in the dark when she heard a light footstep in the hall and skirts brush against her door.

There came a hoarse voice whispering outside. It was the voice of Louise.

"A dinner is a dinner," it whispered, and waiter.

Judith lay quite still. Not getting up and asking her in to sit on the side of her bed and talk awhile, as she would formerly have done. Just lying there.

"Under the circumstances," said she, after a time, "I think I would rather starve."

Then back came the voice from the dark of the hall to the dark of her room in a cry revealing depths in the life of the girl which happily Judith had not sounded.

"But you have never been hungry yet," it said, repeating, "but you have never been hungry yet!"

Judith sat up and gazed into the dark, which seemed all at once to her frightened eyes to be filled with skeleton fingers ready to clutch her, with the relentless fingers of poverty, bony, merciless and grim.

"Oh, no," she whispered back, her own voice hoarse as that of Louise in her fright, "I have never been hungry yet!"

First Use of Torpedoes.

Torpedoes for the destruction of vessels were first used in the spring of 1861 by the confederates in the James river. In 1865 the secretary of the navy reported that more ships had been lost by torpedoing than from all other causes. Gen. Rains, chief of the confederate torpedo service, put the number at 53, a greater number than has been destroyed in all the wars since.

Young women may avoid much sickness and pain, says Miss Alma Pratt, if they will only have faith in the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I feel it my duty to tell all young women how much Lydia E. Pinkham's wonderful Vegetable Compound has done for me. I was completely run down, unable to attend school, and did not care for any kind of society, but now I feel like a new person, and have gained seven pounds of flesh in three months.

"I recommend it to all young women who suffer from female weakness."—MISS ALMA PRATT, Holly, Mich.

FREE MEDICAL ADVICE TO YOUNG GIRLS.

All young girls at this period of life are earnestly invited to write Mrs. Pinkham for advice; she has guided in a motherly way hundreds of young women; her advice is freely and cheerfully given, and her address is Lynn, Mass.

Judging from the letters she is receiving from so many young girls Mrs. Pinkham believes that our girls are often pushed altogether too near the limit of their endurance nowadays in our public schools and seminaries.

Nothing is allowed to interfere with studies, the girl must be pushed to the front and graduated with honor; often physical collapse follows, and it takes years to recover the lost vitality,—often it is never recovered.

A Young Chicago Girl Saved from Despair.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I wish to thank you for the help and benefit I have received through the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills. When I was about seventeen years old I suddenly seemed to lose my usual good health and vitality. Father said I studied too hard, but the doctor thought different and prescribed tonics, which I took by the quart without relief. Reading one day in the paper of Mrs. Pinkham's great cures, and finding the symptoms described answered mine, I decided I would give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. I did not say a word to the doctor; I bought it myself, and took it according to directions regularly for two months, and I found that I gradually improved, and that all pains left me, and I was my old self once more.—LILLIE E. SINCLAIR, 17 E. 22d St., Chicago Ill."

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the one sure remedy to be relied upon at this important period in a young girl's life; with it she can go through with courage and safety the work she must accomplish, and fortify her physical well being so that her future life may be insured against sickness and suffering.

THE GREAT DELIVERER

Jesus Has Vanquished the Devil and Is Able to Free From His Power.

Sermon by the "Highway and Byway" Preacher.

(Copyright, 1904, by J. M. Edson.)

Chicago, Sunday, April 17, 1904.

Text:—"Then was brought unto Him one possessed with a demon, blind and dumb; and He healed him, insomuch that the dumb man spake and saw."—Matt. 12:22.

SOMEWHERE in Galilee where the ministry of Jesus had taken Him was wrought the incident so briefly recorded in our text. The man under cruel bondage to Satan was there, and to that place the great Deliverer came and performed His mighty work. His coming transformed a life. It made a dark and afflicted home one of brightness and joy. It brought gladness to the man's circle of friends and it exerted its influence upon the multitude that saw and heard of the miracle. It is not hard to picture that home before Jesus came. There was sorrow there; there was trouble there. The skeleton in the closet was that demon-possessed man. We do not know how long he had been in that condition. We do not know whether it was the son of aged parents or the father of the home. But we do know that it was darkened by a black shadow. Ah, how many such homes there are! The fair-haired boy has grown to manhood, and instead of bringing gladness and pride to the hearts of his parents, he has yielded himself to the evil influences about him until at last he has become possessed of a wicked and dissolute spirit. Or it may be the husband and father of the home has forgotten his sacred marriage vows, he has stifled the finer, nobler, manlier feelings which came when the first baby nestled in his arms and seemed to crow with delight because of its sense of safety and protection in his strong embrace, and as a result of his wayward course, the indulgence of his baser nature, the light has gone out of his wife's eyes, the bloom has left her cheeks, and instead of the song upon the lips there are the heavy heart and aching head. Yea, and aching and sore body and limbs, too, perhaps, where the cruel blows have fallen. And the children crouch and tremble when they hear the heavy tread of the father's feet. Ah, how many, many, homes there are in this fair land where the Devil has found his abode in the father or son, and the black shadow of sin has driven out all the joy and gladness. Somewhere in Galilee there was such a home. And there are still such homes to-day—thousands and thousands, scattered through city, town, village and hamlet.

OH, WHAT a bondage Satan is able to lead into! Strand by strand he forms the rope of habit until it is too strong for any human will to break. Link by link he forges the chain that will drag the soul to hell if the power of God is not invoked to break it. It has been said that every home has its skeleton. But however true or false that may be, it is true that sin and Satan are the partners that have articulated every bone in its hideous body. Certain it is that God has no part in building the dark closet and placing therein the hideous sorrow that blights the home. It is the Devil's work. He blighted that Galilean home. He got such a hold upon that man that he was made blind and dumb. And the Devil is busy at his wicked work to-day. He makes people blind to everything that is good and true and beautiful. He makes their lips dumb so that no kindly word is ever spoken. From the testimony of the Scriptures it would appear that there was a special manifestation of the Devil's work at the time when God was so wonderfully manifesting the light of His Son to the world. It may be that we have no such aggravated cases of the demon-possessed as those with which Jesus came in contact. But be that as it may, it is certain that the work of the Devil remains to this day. But there are homes where sin has wrought its terrible work; where the Devil has taken possession of some member of the household as tenent as to bring the dark shadow. And when we speak of the Devil as taking possession we do not roll upon him the burden of responsibility and let the one possessed go free of blame. Scripture says of Judas, the betrayer: "After the sop, then entered Satan into him." But Judas was responsible for permitting Satan to get into his heart. And so it is with people to-day. The Devil does take possession, but it is only because sin, sin, sin, has paved the way over which he rides into full possession.

BLIND and dumb! Devilish blindness! Devilish dumbness! This case was peculiar for that very reason. There were other blind persons brought to Jesus for healing. There were those who were deaf and dumb who were made to hear and speak. But the blindness, the unresponsive ear and the palsied tongue were not the direct and special work of the Devil as in this case before us. This man was blind and dumb because the Devil was in full possession. It was a condition for which the man himself was undoubtedly responsible. And for this reason there was seemingly the least right to expect compassion and Divine mercy. At least, so might the friends and relatives of this man have reasoned. They might have felt that it was easy to enlist the interest and sympathy of Jesus in such cases as Jairus' daughter, whose death had brought such sorrow to that Jewish ruler's home, or the blind beggars by the wayside, or the outcast lepers, or the multitudes of others who were sick or afflicted, but this man with the devilish blindness and dumbness, what right had he to come; what right had he to expect the Lord to deliver him from that for which he was directly responsible? And how many, many desperately needy ones such reasoning keeps away from Jesus today—men and women who have sunk to the very lowest depths of the Devil's dominion! Step by step the downward path has been traveled until the Devil has gained complete and awful control over every passion and desire of the body. Warnings have been unheeded. Pleadings have exerted but a momentary influence. Down, down, down, until wrecked manhood or womanhood reveals the Devil's mark of complete servitude. The case seems hopeless. Man can do nothing, and it does not seem that God is able to do anything, or willing to do anything, either. Drink and gambling and lust have been the bait which the Devil has used to lure to ruin. Devil possession, to-day? Yes! How else can you explain the awful wretchedness of the drunkard's home? Wife and children are nothing when the appetite for drink is to be satisfied. The demon-possessed man will take the bread from the helpless babe's mouth; he will take the very clothes from the backs of his wife and children, to get drink. Anything, if only the desires and appetites can be gratified. And deliverance seems hopeless.

SO IT might have seemed to the friends of this man about whom our text tells. But a few days before this, Jesus had delivered a demon-possessed man, and perhaps they heard of the case and were encouraged to believe that what Jesus had done for another He could do for this man. That Jesus did cast out demons there can be no doubt. That He is able to deliver from such possession to-day is equally certain, as many living witnesses are able to testify. The enemies of Jesus who were not able to dispute the fact that demons were cast out charged that He obtained this power from the Devil himself. But Jesus went on to show them in the verses which follow our text how very ridiculous their claim was, giving us the figure of the strong man shut within the house with his treasures, and the spoiler coming and first binding the strong man and then at his leisure taking of all that which he desired. The Devil was the strong man, so strong that no human power could escape him. Jesus was the Deliverer who came and first met and overcame and then bound the strong man, and then spoiled him of his human victims. Ah, what a picture of Jesus as the great Deliverer we have here! With the Devil conquered and his power limited by the Almighty arm of Jesus, what wonder is it that the demons should flee from before Him? Why should we marvel that Jesus was able to deliver from the power of the Devil? The enemy overcome is never feared. I remember hearing my father tell of a dog he owned in his boyhood days which was in mortal fear of a neighbor's dog. He (the dog) would go far out of his way to escape meeting his enemy. But one eventful day chance brought the two dogs together, and before the fight ended the dog of my father was complete victor. With canine pride the conqueror led the whipped cur by the ear to his home and dismissed him with a final and warning nip, and ever after that my father's dog, with seeming delight and pride, stalked by the house of his old enemy. Not afraid to meet him now because he had completely overcome him. And my father who before had feared the savage brute of the neighbor never felt afraid when his own dog was with him. Satan is a whipped cur. He is an arrant coward. If he can catch his poor human victims alone he is brave and victorious. But when Jesus—who has so splendidly and gloriously defeated him and destroyed his power—comes, he flees before Him. He dare not meet Him. He must leave his human victims at the command of Jesus.

AND it was to this unfailing Conqueror this great Deliverer, that they brought this demon-possessed man. Doubtless he would not have come himself. Perhaps he not only did not want to meet Jesus, but he feared to do so. But his friends brought him. They realized his condition, even though he did not. They wanted him set free from the Devil, even though he was resigned to the servitude. And so they brought him. This was the first step in the right direction. It was a blessed thing for that man that he had friends who were enough interested in him to bring him. They had not cast him off utterly. Perhaps they remembered what he had been before the Devil had gained such power over him. The wife had clung faithfully to him. She would not leave him. Perhaps her devotion and her faith had encouraged the friends to take up his case and lead him to Jesus. Ah, how often the love and faithfulness of a wife have followed the Devil-driven husband until at last he has been brought to Jesus and delivered! How often the wayward and wicked son has been clung to by the broken-hearted mother when every other friend and relative has turned away in disgust and discouraged hopelessness! How her prayers have followed him as he sunk lower and lower in the Devil's power, until at last he was brought to Jesus! Oh, sorrowing one, whoever you may be, despair not! Hope on! Pray on! It is not the Lord's will that any should perish. Jesus, the great Deliverer, is able to set free from the Devil's dominion and power. That loved one, that friend who is unsaved, who is living in sin, who is almost yielded to Satan, may be brought to Jesus who is able to deliver. Cease not in your efforts to bring that needy one into Jesus' presence, where He may speak the words that will give glorious and blessed freedom.

THE friends in our text brought this poor demon-possessed man just as he was. If they had waited to "put the man on his feet," as they say to-day, so that he would be presentable to Jesus, they would have missed the Saviour and lost the blessing. Many a modern-day church, where Jesus is supposed to be, would stand aghast were such cases as that of this man brought there. It would want the friends to wait until the demon-possessed man was temporarily delivered, and then bring him in stylish clothes and polite manners to join the church. Many and many a man who has been under the dominion of Satan and fallen low in the depths of sin has been straightened up by human friends and encouraged to look within himself for deliverance from the enemy of his soul. He is told to "keep straight and be a man" so often that he begins to believe he can. And perhaps after a time he thinks he is good enough to join the church, and join the church he does. But at such deliverance the Devil laughs. He knows he has a string tied to every one who tries to do for himself what Jesus only is able to do. The poor Devil-driven soul must come to Jesus' feet, just as it is, if Jesus is to give deliverance. And the friends of that demonized man were wise in bringing him to Jesus with all the horrible marks of sin upon him. The churches ought not to be shocked or scandalized if such cases come into their midst. The missions in the slums of our great cities furnish glorious examples of how the drunken outcasts, the moral lepers, steeped in sin and degradation, are gathered in and brought to Jesus, where His power delivers them from the Devil that possessed them. The Pacific Garden mission in Chicago and the Jerry McAuley mission in New York city have over and over again demonstrated how the demon-possessed have been brought just as they were, in their maudlin, besotted, dirty, foul, diseased condition and been healed by Jesus. Lift the man out of the gutter and bring him to Jesus. No matter how desperate the case, if you can only bring the one suffering from the dominion of Satan to the presence of Jesus, He will give deliverance.

AND the reward of the efforts of those friends was the immediate and complete deliverance of this man from the demon which had possessed him. Jesus did not send him away to his home again and tell him to feel sorry for a few days for his condition. God only knows how he had been troubled about it for years. He healed him at once. And that is the way Jesus always wants to do. Never need a soul come to Him and go away again without the blessing. No agonizing; no days of darkness and doubt; no days spent in desperate struggle to try to win Jesus over to willingness to give the needed deliverance. Poor souls do go through such experiences, but it is not Jesus' will that it should be so. It is because human doubt delays the reception of the blessing which Jesus is ready to give at once. Those friends had gone to Jesus with the request that the following week at a certain hour, after there had been a certain amount of agonizing and doubt and darkness, He should heal this man, I doubt whether he ever would have been saved from his distressed condition. But they came expecting immediate relief, and they received the blessing at once.

THAT was a different home, you may be sure, after that blessed day of healing. The home is always different after Jesus has come into the life of some one of its members. The dark shadow and the sorrow are taken away. The skeleton which the Devil has put there, and whose bones rattle a hideous death march day after day, is thrust out forever. What a home-coming that was that day when that man, who had gone forth Devil-blind and Devil-dumb, came back seeing and speaking! He was led out by friends, but he came back leading the joyful company. And the influence of a life delivered from the power of Satan extends beyond the home and the circle of friends. In the case before us all the multitudes were amazed at the transformation. And so it is always. The multitude beholding the work of God upon the life of an individual is always moved. In the village where that man lived what a testimony to the grace and power of God he must have become! So often Jesus had to send back to the place from whence he had come the man who had received the blessing, in order that he might be the witness for the Lord. It was so with the man of Gadara, out of whom Jesus cast a legion of devils. It was so with multitudes of others whom Jesus healed and blessed, and so it is generally with those to-day who find deliverance through Christ Jesus. Their place of service is back there in the home, with the friends, and for the multitudes with whom they come in contact. The great Deliverer has come. He continues to break the power of Satan. He will set you free. He will open your eyes to see Him and give you a tongue to talk with and for Him. Will you not let Him do this for you now, this very moment?

WHERE THE BLAME LAY.

He Wanted to Get to the Front a Little Too Quick for His Own Good.

Recently the judge regarded the prisoner before him. He beheld a man of tender, unripe years, whose face was fair to look upon, bearing as it did every known mark of honesty. Appearances gave no reason for committing the crime, and yet the jury had decided, on first ballot, that the prisoner was guilty. In fact, the plea for the defense was very weak, says the New York Times.

"It seems incredible," said the judge, "that a man with your connections should have stooped so low as to become a common forger. Surely some one else must have been the cause of your downfall. A woman?"

"There was some one," replied the prisoner, "but that some one was not a woman. It is yourself, your honor."

"I?" ejaculated the judge, amazedly.

"Just so. A short time ago I was a member of the graduating class in my college. You were one of the speakers at the farewell session. You may remember your words: 'The world lies ahead of you. But you must push your way steadily. I want each one of you to forge to the front; I want to soon see each occupying a prominent position in the eyes of your families and of the world.'" The prisoner paused and smiled. "I forged quicker than the others. I've gained a place before the public. And now, what next?"

"Three years," laconically said the judge.

"Next case!"

NeKoma, Ill., April 15th.—Away back in 1901 Mr. Albert E. Larson of this place was suffering with Kidney disease and backache. The pain he was called upon to endure was very great and rendered his life almost a burden to him. He heard of Dodd's Kidney Pills and began to use them and almost at once he began to get better. He had been unable to work, but Dodd's Kidney Pills soon made him able to go to work again. He used the remedy till he was completely cured. He says he has grown stronger year by year since he got rid of his old trouble.

"Dodd's Kidney Pills certainly gave me a complete and permanent cure. For I have felt stronger since I used them in 1901 than ever before. I can do harder work now in 1904 than I could last year. I cannot praise Dodd's Kidney Pills enough. I would not be without them in the house."

Impossible.

"Sir!" exclaimed the injured party, "you stuck your umbrella into my eye."

"O, no," replied the cheerful offender, "you are mistaken."

"Mistaken!" demanded the irate man. "You idiot, I know when my eye is hurt, I guess."

"Doubtless," replied the cheerful fellow, "but you don't know my umbrella. I borrowed this one from a friend today."—Stray Stories.

A MICHIGAN MAYOR SAYS:

"I Know Pe-ru-na is a Fine Tonic for a Worn Out System."

Hon. Nelson Rice of St. Joseph, Mich., knows of a large number of grateful patients in his county who have been cured by Peruna.

Hon. Nelson Rice, Mayor of St. Joseph, Michigan, writes:

The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio:

Gentlemen: "I wish to congratulate you on the success of your efforts to win the confidence of the public in need of a reliable medicine. I know Peruna is a fine tonic for a worn out system and a specific in cases of catarrhal difficulties. You have a large number of grateful patients in this county who have used Peruna and have been cured by it, and who praise it above all other medicines. Peruna has my heartiest good wishes."—Nelson Rice.

MARCH, APRIL, MAY.

Weak Nerves, Poor Digestion, Impure Blood, Depressed Spirits.

The sun has just crossed the equator on its yearly trip north. The real equator is shifted toward the north nearly eighteen miles every day. With the return of the sun comes the bodily ills peculiar to spring. With one person the nerves are weak; another person, digestion poor; with others the blood is out of order; and still others have depressed spirits and tired feeling.

All these things are especially true of those who have been suffering with catarrh in any form or la grippe. A course of Peruna is sure to correct all these conditions. It is an ideal spring medicine. Peruna does not irritate—it invigorates. It does not temporarily stimulate—it strengthens. It equalizes the circulation of the blood, tranquilizes the nervous system and regulates the bodily functions. Peruna, unlike so many spring medicines, is not simply a physic or stimulant or nervine. It is a natural tonic and invigorator.

If you do not receive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

LIVER TROUBLES

"I find Thedford's Black-Draught a good medicine for liver disease. It cured my son after he had spent $100 with doctors. It is all the medicine I take."—MRS. CAROLINE MARTIN, Parkersburg, W. Va.

If your liver does not act regularly go to your druggist and secure a package of Thedford's Black-Draught and take a dose tonight. This great family medicine frees the constipated bowels, stirs up the torpid liver and causes a healthy secretion of bile.

Thedford's Black-Draught will cleanse the bowels of impurities and strengthen the kidneys. A torpid liver invites colds, biliousness, chills and fever and all manner of sickness and contagion. Weak kidneys result in Bright's disease which claims as many victims as consumption. A 25-cent package of Thedford's Black-Draught should always be kept in the house.

"I used Thedford's Black-Draught for liver and kidney complaints and found nothing to excel it."—WILLIAM COFFMAN, Marblehead, Ill.

WHEN YOU GO TO THE WORLD'S FAIR

Suggestions That Should Be Helpful to the Stranger in St. Louis—No Trouble When You Get Your Bearings—The Greatest of World's Expositions.

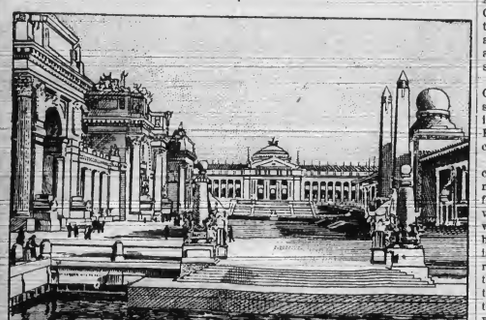
It will be worth all the self-denial that one may practice for several years to see the World's Fair of 1904 at St. Louis. Money saved, earned or borrowed cannot be better spent than in getting acquainted with the world's progress as revealed at this latest and greatest of expositions. All of us cannot travel around the world to take note of what the nations are doing, but the nations from all around the world desire us to know and have sent their best works to St. Louis to be placed on display.

Within the two square miles of the Louisiana Purchase exposition at St. Louis there is more to be seen than ever was brought together in ten times the space before. It is a great collection of expositions massed into one. It is nearly twice as large as the Columbian exposition at Chicago, nearly ten times larger than the Pan-American exposition at Buffalo. Every exhibit palace offers the equivalent of a splendid exposition, each covering many acres of space.

The largest of these is the Palace of Agriculture, with its 23 acres under roof and filled to the doors with the most wonderful agricultural collection ever assembled upon any occasion. The important states and nations of the world are all here alongside great numbers of individual exhibitors. Five great staples have been chosen for extraordinary display. Corn, cotton, sugar, rice and tobacco are here arrayed as they have never been before and undreamed possibilities are revealed to inquiring minds. Such a dairy display was never attempted and such a collection of farm machinery and tools was never placed on exhibition.

The Palace of Transportation is next in size, covering 15 acres. One may only hint at the wonders it contains. The historical exhibit of locomotives is one of the features. It shows the development of 75 years in locomotive construction. Strange indeed is the person who is not yet impressed with these evidences of man's long struggle with the problem of rail transportation, the most civilizing of modern influences, next to the newspaper, which must always stand first. To describe in detail this exhibit would be a long story in itself. The exhibit is made complete by the installation of the largest locomotive ever built and by some magnificent imported locomotives. We cannot leave the Palace of Transportation without a reference to the great automobile show, the motor boats and other water craft, and the great carriage display.

Now let us cross the flower gardens to the Palace of Machinery just south of Transportation. The huge power generators are the first things to arrest the eye—the Allis-Chalmers engine of 5,000-horse power, the Curtis steam turbine of 8,000-horse power, the Parsons steam turbine of 5,000 kilowatts, the four Westinghouse generators of 3,000-horse power each, and each as high as a house. And then other generators great and small of all kinds—the most wonderful display of engines ever assembled. But these are not all. Think of ten acres of glistening machines of every kind and you have some idea of the contents of the Palace of Machinery.



We cross the lagoon to the eastward and come to the beautiful Palace of Electricity, with eight acres of exhibits from many countries which show the marvelous development of electrical science. To the north again over one of the arched bridges we approach the Palace of Varied Industries, viewing its wonderful grace and splendor as we go. Here are 14 acres of exhibits from all over the world. The Palace of Manufactures is the same size and stands on the opposite side of the Plaza of St. Louis. It is equally interesting in the variety and newness of its contents. Here again the nations of the world and the manufacturers from all parts of the United States display their best products.

Opposite the Palace of Manufacture to the southward is the Palace of Education, this being the first time that education has been allotted a great building all its own. A variety of schools in daily session are the feature of this eight-acre display. The two exhibit buildings in the eastern part of the main group are Mines and Metallurgy and Liberal Arts. The Department of Mines and Metallurgy has a 12-acre outdoor display in addition to the nine acres under roof.

The United States Government building is on a broad terrace half way up the hill in the extreme eastern part of the grounds. Uncle Sam never had such a large exhibit building at an exposition before. It is nearly 800 feet long and 250 feet wide. Another building devoted to fisheries built in the style of an old Roman house stands upon lower ground directly southwest from the larger building. The outdoor display of ordnance is not the least interesting of the government exhibits.

The Palace of Art at the World's Fair contains 135 galleries. Each gallery is a large room, lighted from above and filled with the choicest works. All countries of the world in which art has made noteworthy progress are represented. The group of buildings which house this magnificent display represents an expenditure of more than $1,000,000. The group is situated upon high ground south of Festival hall. The Festival hall is the center piece of a rich architectural work crowning the hill which rises above the Grand Basin and upon whose slopes are the Cascades and gardens. Here another million dollars has been expended to produce a decoration that will distinguish this exposition from all others.

In a short article such as this one can only refer to such great features as the Philippine exhibit, covering 40 acres and containing more than 1,000 natives from those far-off Pacific islands; the United States government Indian exhibit, covering many acres and occupying a large building; the exhibit of the United States bureau of plant industry, consisting of an outdoor map of the United States, covering four acres; the great athletic field where the Olympian games of 1904 will be held; the Aerial concourse where the airship and balloon contests, having prizes aggregating $200,000, will take place; the anthropology exhibit; the 40 or more state buildings; the outdoor exhibits of the departments of agriculture and horticulture, covering many acres; the Palace of Horticulture, 400 by 800 feet, containing the largest exhibits of horticulture ever brought together; the beautiful Temple of Fraternity; the magnificent buildings erected by foreign nations; the great inside inn, where 6,000 guests may find accommodation at rates from $1.50 to $5.00 per day; the extensive live stock pavilion; the great landscape clock made of flowers, 112 feet in diameter, and giving the correct time of day; the intramural railway, which gives a seven-mile ride for a single fare, and many other things of interest to visitors.

PALACE OF LIBERAL ARTS AND MINES, WITH THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT BUILDING IN DISTANCE.

Even to the timid traveler St. Louis presents no complications. It is all as plain as a b c when once you get your bearings. The streets all run east and west or north and south with rarely a confusing diagonal. Market street and its western extension, Laclede avenue, are the dividing line which separates the northern and southern sections of the city. All streets north and south from Market begin their numbering at Market, so that No. 2024 South Broadway, for example, would be 20 blocks south from Market street. All east and west streets begin their numbers at the Mississippi river, so that No. 3120 would be 31 blocks west of the river. Sometimes in a long block 200 numbers are allowed.

All trains into St. Louis arrive at Union station, one of the finest railroad terminals in the world. The station is on the south side of Market street between Eighteenth and Twentieth streets, so that when the visitor emerges from the station he finds himself at the beginning of the city numbering both north and south and 18 blocks from the river.

Standing on Market street with his back to the station the downtown or main business section of the city is to his right about one mile. The World's Fair is to his left, westward about five miles. All the street cars are so labeled that he may easily know which cars to take. Cars running north on Eighteenth street, at his right, intersect the several car lines running between the World's Fair and the business section of the city. By walking one, two or three blocks to the north the visitor may get a car east or west, or if baggage laden he may take a car on Eighteenth street and get a transfer without extra fare to any of the east-and-west lines except the Suburban, which is a separate car system.

DIVIDES THE REPUBLICANS.

Those in Favor of Reciprocity Read Out of the Party by a Protection Organ.

The spasmodic efforts of the factions of the republican party in several states to throw off the incbuns of the "stand pat" protectionists has another revival, especially in Massachusetts, Iowa, Minnesota, Wisconsin, North and South Dakota and to some extent in Illinois. They are demanding that the republican national convention declare for reciprocity, especially with Canada. Hundreds of manufacturers and business men of Massachusetts have signed an endorsement of such legislation, also to endorse ex-Congressman Foss for delegate to the republican national convention. The Boston Transcript of April 2, a republican newspaper, publishes half a page containing the names of hundreds of those who signed such endorsement and the Transcript adds that there were hundreds of others. In the city of Brockton a partly personal canvass was made to obtain signatures, for the purpose of ascertaining if reciprocity sentiment was general or only spasmodic. The result was convincing. Practically every business man approached signed the endorsement. The republican machines in Massachusetts and the other states, notably Iowa, are fighting tooth and nail to prevent the spread of reciprocity sentiment and to defeat Mr. Foss in Massachusetts. Gov. Cummins in Iowa and Gov. La Follette in Wisconsin.

In Iowa the protectionist ring is making an especially bitter fight against Gov. Cummins and the Protective Tariff league, through its organ, the Economist, says of him:

"Cummins and his followers have shown themselves to be the enemies of true republicanism. They have inaugurated a policy of rule or ruin and they should be compelled to take the consequences. Over and over again, with brazen effrontery and a degree of zeal worthy of a better cause, he—Gov. Cummins—has attempted to force upon the republican party in his own state and in the nation as well, doctrines and policies that are in opposition to settled republican principles."

When it is remembered that Gov. Cummins demanded that the tariff that shelters the trusts must be reformed, it explains the vituperation of the Economist, whose life depends upon contributions from the trusts.

This factional fight in the republican ranks can be viewed with equanimity, if not delight by democrats, for it may result in many republicans voting for the democratic candidates when they see their demands spurned by the republican ring leaders. There is no more hope for these republican reformers now than in the past, though they are more numerous and insistent than heretofore. The only hope of tariff reformers is with the democrats, who are in favor of all and any reforms that will lessen the burden upon the taxpayers and lighten the trust load of high prices which the people now have to bear.

SHIP SUBSIDY IS ON DECK.

Pennsylvania Republicans Are Still for the Old Flag and an Appropriation.

The republicans of Pennsylvania at their late state convention deplored the condition of American shipping and, "the fact that nine out of every ten ships which brought our imports and bore away our exports last year were foreign vessels, built abroad, officered and manned abroad, a part of the potential naval reserve of foreign governments." This depressing fact seemed to have weighed upon the mind of Senator Quay, who dominated the convention and who wrote or was responsible for the platform, for the platform continues, that it favored "the building of an American merchant marine that American built ships and American seamen may have the carrying of at least a fair proportion of American passengers and freightage." This apparently patriotic utterance did not evidently lighten the gloomy feelings of Senator Quay, nor even one of the hundreds of his satellites that attended the convention. No suggestion was made of any hope of a way to improve this desperate condition. The convention wishes to leave it to the voters to discover the remedy. But this lack of foresight, or statement of what would quickly relieve the American ship trust magnates from the slough of despond, was well known to Senator Quay. Only a short time before the platform was concocted he had promised Griscom and Cassatt, respectively, the ship trust and railroad magnate, that such a plank would be included, so that when the ship subsidy bill was received in congress all the Pennsylvania delegation could justify their votes for subsidy. The prospect of a good large subsidy always cheers the drooping spirits of a Pennsylvania republican, but it does not always do to publicly resolve for it, so Quay left the voters in the dark and left them to brood over the decline of the American marine.

Quay and the trust magnates know there is millions in it, if the subsidy bill can only be passed, but the people are rather ticklish on subsidies, they know they will have to pay the big bill and are not so enthusiastic for the old flag and an appropriation, as Quay and the ship trust magnates are. In some other states the same tactics will be used to bolster up the discredited ship subsidy and if President Roosevelt does not carefully watch the incubation of the national platform by Senator Lodge he will be committed to the scheme as the Pennsylvania delegation are.

Only eternal vigilance will prevent the subsidy hunters from loading the taxpayers with this enormous expenditure for a long term of years and their persistence would have been rewarded ere this if the democrats had not been on guard against it.

DELUDED WITHOUT TROUBLE

Republican Platform Plank That Is Hewed Out to Fit a Certain Hole.

At the republican state convention in Minnesota, called to elect delegates to the Chicago convention, the platform adopted declared "for modification of the tariff schedules to suit changing conditions" and "in favor of reciprocity treaties with other countries for mutual interest and to extend our markets." No doubt, says the Indianapolis Sentinel, Iowa, Wisconsin and other western states will make similar declarations and Massachusetts and some eastern states may declare, as did the republicans of Minnesota, "for the protective policy of the republican party." How can the tariff schedules be modified "to suit changing conditions" if the policy of protection is to be upheld?

The republican organs of protection are constantly denouncing those republicans who even favor reciprocity, let alone tariff reform, and have been powerful enough to defeat the ratification of the reciprocity treaties that have been before the senate since 1899, and expired by limitation in 1902. Does that look like favoring reciprocity? The truth about the whole matter is that the republican party has no intention whatever of reforming the tariff. It is committed absolutely to "protection"—to the kind of protection that benefits the trusts and combines, gives them practically a monopoly of the American markets at their own prices and enables them to sell their products to foreign consumers at lower prices than they charge at home. This is exactly the situation. It is not denied.

——Those persons who are heaping credit upon President Roosevelt on account of the decision of the supreme court in the Northern Securities case should not overlook the fact that it was Gov. Van Sant, of Minnesota, backed up by the people of the northwest and of the country at large, who started the war upon the combination. The Washington authorities were actually driven into the case by growing public indignation, backed and directed by the democratic party. Otherwise it is clear that nothing would have been done.—Indianapolis Sentinel.

——Some of his democratic opponents honestly rejoice in the court's decision; some deplore it; but all seem ready to insist that the decision establishes the illegality of nearly all the trusts and railroad combinations, and that it is the president's duty to wade in and enforce the law against all offenders. That the public does not, at this writing, expect him to do so is apparent from the course of the stock market. He seems to have got his bear by the tail. A hunter of his extensive experience doubtless knows whether, in such a situation, it is more politic to hang on or let go.—Life (Ind.).

SUFFICIENT IDENTIFICATION.

Woman After Pension Gives Personal Peculiarities of Her Soldier Father.

Representative Cowherd of Missouri has a constituent, an aged woman, who has been trying to get a pension because her father had been a soldier, she was not sure in just wha war. At first, says the Washington Post, she was inclined to believe he had fought in the Mexican war; then she dropped back to the Seminole war, and finally decided it was in the war of 1812 he had served. On a muster roll of the latter war she found a name that corresponded with that of her father, but did not furnish Mr. Cowherd any positive means of identification.

Mr. Cowherd notified his constituent that it would be necessary to identify her father before a pension could be granted, and in response the soldier's daughter wrote:

"My father was of medium hight, had black hair and eyes. He could not close one eye without closing the other, and didn't know anything about music. I think that ought to be sufficient identification for a pension."

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I cannot praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound too highly, for it is the only medicine I ever tried which cured me. I suffered much from my first menstrual period, I felt so weak and dizzy at times I could not pursue my studies with the usual interest. My thoughts became sluggish, I had headaches, backaches and sinking spells, also pains in the back and lower limbs. In fact, I was sick all over.

"Finally, after many other remedies had been tried, we were advised to get Lydia E. THE FRIEND OF SINNERS

What Jesus Has Done to Prove His Right to Be Known as Such.

Sermon by the "Highway and Byway" Preacher.

(Copyright, 1904, by J. M. Edson.)

Chicago, Sunday, April 24, 1904.

Text:—"And it came to pass, as He sat at meat in His house, behold, many publicans and sinners came and sat down with Jesus and His disciples."—Matt. 9:10.

THE one accusation of the scribes and Pharisees which Jesus seemed willing to let go unchallenged was that He was the Friend and associate of the sinner. When the carping critics of His day charged Him with trying to destroy the law and the prophets He replied that He came not to destroy but to fulfill. When they condemned Him as a Sabbath breaker He vigorously replied that the Sabbath was made for man and not man for the Sabbath, and that He was Lord even of the Sabbath day. When they saw Him casting out demons they declared that He was able to do such mighty works because He was in league with the Devil, but He quickly showed them how ridiculous their charge was and declared to them that He was the Son of God and received His power from above. Every accusation which they brought against Him He denied and clearly refuted, save this one that He was the declared Friend and the willing associate of publican and sinner. This charge He admitted by some of the most beautiful and tender parables and by His loving, compassionate and helpful attitude always manifested toward the outcast and despised sinner. He told the proud, self-righteous Pharisees bluntly and plainly that He had come not to call the righteous (and how I should like to have heard the inflection and emphasis with which he pronounced that word righteous), but sinners to repentance; that "the Son of Man came to seek and to save that which was lost;" that they who were whole needed not a physician, but the sick.

WHEN the woman who was a sinner came and threw herself at Jesus' feet as He sat at meat in the Pharisee's house, and washed His feet with her tears and wiped them with the hairs of her head and poured fragrant ointment upon them, He graciously and tenderly received the devotion of the heart that longed for a better and purer life, and rebuked the proud Pharisee, who was shocked that Jesus should allow this sinful woman to touch Him. When Jesus passed through Jericho on one occasion He went out of His way to invite Himself to dine with Zaccheus, the tax gatherer, the notorious bad man of the town. Repeatedly Scripture declares that the sinners and publicans flocked to Jesus, and He welcomed them always. And when the Pharisees murmured He told them the beautiful and touching stories of the lost sheep, the lost coin and the lost boy, and by them gave Heaven's standards of values and showed how much a soul was worth in the estimation of God. And even in death Jesus found joy and fellowship with the sinner as the dying thief turned to Him for comfort and He replied: "This day shalt thou be with Me in paradise." Jesus was the Friend of sinners. He was willing to be known as such. He welcomed them as they came, He helped them as they tarried, He sent them forth to purer and better lives.

ONE of Jesus' disciples, Matthew, was taken from the despised class of publicans, or tax gatherers. And this served further to identify Jesus with the despised lower classes. To the punctilious and sanctimonious Pharisees there was no greater condemnation which they could pronounce against Jesus than to say that He associated with and ate in the company of publicans and sinners. The scribes and Pharisees observed such rigid rules in regard to outward conduct and associations, were so faithful to avoid and manner of defilement, that they stood aghast and filled with horror at the conduct and associations of Jesus. He, claiming to be a Teacher sent from God; yea, more, claiming to be the Son of God, the promised Messiah, eating with publicans and sinners! He, receiving their attentions! He, graciously ministering unto them, and fellowshiping with them and even choosing from among their number those who should be His disciples! What a violation of all that they had held sacred! No wonder as they saw these things that they murmured. No wonder they cast slurs upon Him. No wonder their unrepentant hearts were hardened before the gracious work of mercy of the Divine Lord. But He was pleased to be known as the Friend of sinners, and to this day He is known as such. Through all the centuries which have unfolded since then He has continued as the Friend of the sinner. And, blessed be God! it is true. How He has gathered to Himself multitudes about Him, how He has succored and blessed them. The Friend of Sinners!

HE was Known as such because of His personality, because He was the Son of God. Instinctively, people were drawn to Him. Little children felt the charm and sweetness and purity of His presence and trustfully and gladly sought His side and were taken in His arms and received His blessing. The Devil-possessed were conscious they were in the presence of the Divine Lord and Master when they came in contact with Him, and in fear cried out: "What have we to do with Thee?" and besought Him not to torment them. The poor and the needy, the sick and diseased came to Him in their distress, confident that they would be graciously received. And the publicans and sinners, those who had yielded their lives to extortion and lust, and yet who had an undefined yearning for a better, purer life, were drawn to Jesus like the steel is drawn to the magnet, for they instinctively felt that here was One Who could understand, One Who would have compassion on them, One Who would help them.

THAT cannot be, for Jesus' last message to His disciples was: "Lo, I am with you always." And He told them plainly: "And I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto Me." No, Jesus is present in the world to-day through His Holy Spirit more fully and completely than ever before. He is everywhere, and the influence of His Presence is felt. He is known to-day, as never before, as the Friend of sinners. Our text gives us the picture of Jesus dining in the home of a publican at Capernaum. Imagine President Roosevelt or some other distinguished personage coming to your town and becoming the willing guest of the most despised man in town. Jesus, the guest of honor at the house of Matthew, the publican! How the news must have spread. Jesus eating at the table of a despised tax gatherer! But there He was, and, praise God! there He is to-day, in myriads of homes where He is needed to cleanse and save. Jesus was in the few homes then, but now in every land and among every people there are the multitudes of homes where Jesus is still the honored guest. Homes of the despised, of the wayward and the sinful, who turn to Him and invite Him to come. Jesus was at Matthew's house because he had been invited.

THE story of this publican's conversion is interesting and helpful. He was busy gathering taxes at the time, following the business that in that day was dishonoring, and almost without exception dishonest. The Roman government levied the tax, deciding just how much each province and city and village should pour into the coffers of the Caesars. The privilege of gathering these taxes was rented out to certain individuals. The Roman government cared nothing as to how much was collected or in what manner the work was done, just so long as the tax collector turned over the stipulated sum. The tax gatherer could have as his own profit all that was collected above the amount the Romans demanded. It can be readily seen what corruption would prevail, and how great temptation would come to the tax collector to make all he could. Matthew was one of these tax gatherers, called publicans. The probabilities are that he was more honest than the rest, but however that may be he was a publican, and identified with that despised class. But he met Jesus, and it wrought a revolution in his life. It always changes a man to meet Jesus in heart to heart contact. From the first meeting with Jesus until he was called from his tax receipts and money drawer forever, he realized that Jesus was his Friend. It made him long for a better life. It made him want to be near the Friend who had spoken kindly and helpfully to him. And during those days in which he continued to serve as tax collector, I am sure he handled the business on a higher and more honest basis. I am satisfied that he was anxious to show how fairly such distasteful work could be administered. And after all it is not generally the business, but the man behind the business that is dishonest. The vast majority of the commercial enterprises and businesses of the world are honorable and necessary. But the men behind the business determine whether honest or dishonest methods shall be followed. Before meeting Jesus, I imagine Matthew found it an easy thing to follow the "tricks of the trade," and got all the tax he could. Others did it, why should not he? But when he met the Friend of publicans and sinners and his conscience was awakened, he felt differently about it. Day after day as he sat there at his post, the influence of that new Friend drew him in thought and purpose. He wanted to be with Him, and when the call came: "Follow Me," he was ready to respond.

WHAT a friendship that was! Jesus fellowshiping with Matthew! Sinner, think of it! Jesus your friend! Jesus willing to be in your company, to be guest at your home, or your companion upon the street! Jesus not ashamed of you because you are a sinner—perhaps the worst man in town—but Jesus loving you and eager to put His arm around you and longing to help you! He is not your Friend because of what He selfishly hopes to receive from you, but He is your Friend because of what He longs to do for you. One of Chicago's aldermen seeks to be known as the friend of the workingman. He resorts to almost every device and subterfuge to appear in that light. But is it the workingman and his interests which he has at heart? No; he is the workingman's friend for what he can get out of him. He cares no more for him than the dirt which he kicks from his shoes. His poor dupes are welcomed into his "Workingman's Exchange," as long as they have a nickel in their pockets to spend for the vile beer he dispenses, or the prospect of getting the nickel, but when a fellow is squeezed dry and there is no more profit in him, and no need of his vote, out he goes and the "friend" of the workingman is ready to greedily grasp the hand of another foolish victim. And there is a good deal of that kind of friendship in the world. Friendship that is based upon selfishness. But Jesus is not such a friend. Jesus died that He might prove His friendship. He tells us: "Greater love hath no man than this, that he lay down his life for his friend."

LUKE tells us that after Matthew had been called as Jesus' disciple he made a feast for Him and then invited all the publicans and sinners he could reach to come and take dinner with him. One sinner won to Jesus seeking to bring others to Him. For Jesus to go to that house where so many of questionable reputation were gathered was to bring down upon Him the denunciation of the Pharisees and scribes, but Jesus did not go there to become one of them, but to make them one with Him. That is, His association with them was not that He might have a good time in their company, but it was that He might lift them to the higher fellowship with Himself. Matthew invited his erstwhile friends to meet the One who had done so much for him. And if there was more of that kind of feasting and sociability to-day instead of the social functions and dinner parties given for selfish gratification it would be more to the honoring of God and the saving of souls. Matthew wanted to present his Lord as the Friend of sinners, and so he made a feast and got all the worst sinners he could together. When you make a feast who is it you invite? The most polished and cultured you can find. You invite those who will be able to make a dinner party in return some time and invite you to attend. But it was not so with Matthew. If it had been do you suppose Jesus would have been able to attend? No. He would have had business at the other end of town saving the soul of some poor wretch who was eager to know Him as the Friend of sinners. No, Matthew filled his house with publicans and sinners, and Jesus was there. He made sure of Jesus' presence first and then invited the crowd to meet Him. Oh, that there were more devoted souls like Matthew to make Jesus the honored guest in the home, and then invite the sinners all about to come and receive blessing at His hands!

HAVE you ever wondered what that odd assortment of humanity talked about that day? Well, I have. I should like to have been a member of that company. I should like to have looked into those faces. I believe there was many a sob there that day, that there was many a tear-stained face turned toward the Saviour as He talked to them of sin and deliverance from sin, and of the better life. Sin is an awful thing, and some of the guests of Matthew must have realized it as they came into the presence of the sinless One and became conscious of the fact that He was there not to condemn them, but to save them. Who would think of calling one his friend who had nothing but condemnation and denunciation for him because he had done wrong? Who would feel drawn towards the man who would pick all the flaws he could and never in sympatny and love try to draw from those sins and faults to a better and purer life? And we would not feel that Jesus was our Friend if all He held before us was our sins and all we heard was condemnation because we were sinners. No, Jesus does not declare His friendship in that way. He shows that He is the sinner's Friend by pointing the way of deliverance.

A PARTY of settlers was seeking to escape the bands of hostile Indians which were lurking on every hand, but not knowing the country, they were completely at a loss as to which way to turn. Darkness came on while this dilemma confronted them, and with the darkness came deliverance. There suddenly rose from the grass in their midst an unarmed Indian. He professed friendship. He said he had crept in unbeknown to the other Indians, who were plotting their destruction, so as to show them how they might escape. How could he prove that he was a friend? Not by telling them of all the hostile Indians that lurked without the camp, but by showing them the way of deliverance. Some were afraid to trust him, but braver hearts said: "It is our hope." They followed the Indian through a trail they never could have found for themselves and escaped the threatened danger. They knew then that the Indian who had come to them that night was a real friend. He had proved it by pointing the way of deliverance. And Jesus in a fuller, higher sense proves His friendship by pointing the sinner to the way of escape from sin and its consequences. And Jesus' talk that day in Matthew's house was of deliverance from sin. Ah, how the thought of that Friend grew upon that company of men! Oh, there is nothing that so appeals to the sinsick heart as the loving, earnest words of the Everlasting Friend, "the Friend that sticketh closer than a brother." Oh, sinner whoever you are, and however deep you are in the mire of sin, Jesus is your Friend. He longs to prove His friendship by lifting you up and leading you out into the light and joy and liberty of a new life, a life of fellowship with Him. Will you not let him?

"Sound as a Dollar."

Monticello, Minn., April 25th.—Mr. J. W. Moore of this place stands as a living proof of the fact that Bright's Disease, even in the last stages, may be perfectly and permanently cured.

Mr. Moore says:—"In 1898, three reputable physicians after a careful examination told me that I would die with Bright's Disease inside of a year. My feet and ankles and legs were badly swollen; I could hardly stand on my feet and had given up all hopes of getting cured, when a traveling salesman told me that he himself had been cured of Bright's Disease two years before.

"He said he had taken to his bed and expected to die with it, but that he had been cured by a remedy called Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"I commenced taking them at once and I am thankful to say that they saved my life. After a short treatment, I was completely restored to good health and I am as sound as a dollar."

Good One Necessary.

One of the English weekly papers tells a good "caddie" story. A distinguished amateur came to the links with the air of one who has only to come and see in order to conquer.

"Haw, caddie," he said.

"Yes, sir."

"What's the length of this hole?"

"Two hundred yards, sir."

"Haw, I see. Just a drive and a putt."

He addressed the ball, swung, and drove it a couple of yards.

"Noo," said the caddie, "noo for the de'il o' a putt!"—N. Y. Tribune.

How to Keep House.

With all the luxuries and pleasures of this life, its big enjoyments and its smaller comforts, there is an offset or antithesis which we have to contend with in the form of aches and pains. In some way and by some means every one has a touch of them in some form at some time. Trifling as some of them may be, the risk is that they will grow to something greater and rack the system with constant torture. There is nothing, therefore, of this kind that we have a right to trifle with. Taken in time, the worst forms of aches and pains are easily subdued and cured by the free use of St. Jacobs Oil. No well regulated household ought to be without a bottle of this great remedy for pain. It is the specific virtue of penetration in St. Jacobs Oil that carries it right to the pain spot and effects a prompt cure even in the most painful cases of Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Lumbago. You want it also in the house at all times for hurts, cuts and wounds, and the house that always has it keeps up a sort of insurance against pain.

Economy in Threshing.

The fact that there is more grain put into the straw stack than there should be, is something that merits the earnest attention of the up-to-date farmer.

Is it not possible to save the wastage of grain and time which attends the use of old-style machinery? This is something that should command the careful consideration of every farmer.

In line with the thought we call attention to the ad. of Nichols & Shepard Company, Battle Creek, Michigan, found in another column.

It would seem that the time has come when this great channel of wastage on the farm should be eliminated.

Save Your Thresh Bill

Why not save the grain ordinarily put into the straw stack? Why not save the time which the ordinary threshing outfit wastes for you?

This can be done by employing the RED RIVER SPECIAL.

It has the Big Cylinder, with lots of concave and open grate surface.

It has the Man Behind the Gun, that does most of the separating right at the cylinder.

Besides these, it has all the separating capacity of other machines.

There have come improvements in threshing machinery the same as in everything else.

As the modern self-binder is ahead of the old reaper of forty years ago, so is the Big Cylinder and Man Behind the Gun ahead of the small cylinder old-style thresher.

The old-style thresher with its small cylinder and limited separating capacity has stood for years without much improvement.

The RED RIVER SPECIAL is the crowning improvement in threshing machinery.

It is built for modern, up-to-date work; to thresh well; to thresh fast; to save time and grain and money for the thresherman and farmer. It does it. There are reasons why. Send for our new book on threshing, it gives them and it is free.

Employ the RED RIVER SPECIAL, it is the only machine that has the Man Behind the Gun, and saves enough grain and time to pay your thresh bill.

BOONE CO., RECORDER

W. L. RIDDELL, - - Publisher.

THE life sentence of Jim Howard was confirmed by the Court of Appeals, last week.

UNDER the divorce law in this State, henceforth, it will be impossible to obtain a divorce in Kentucky on other than scriptural grounds.

IN the Republican county conventions last Saturday, Governor Bradley appears to have been placed in the saddle again, notwithstanding the fight made against him.

LESLIE T. APPLEGATE, until a few year's since a rampant Democratic officeseeker, is the Republican nominee for Congress in this district. Rhinock will defeat him just as e-a-s-y in November as falling off of a log.

THE next Democratic State Convention will be a warm number. The reorganization of the party machinery will bring about a hot fight, unless there is a great change between now and the meeting of the convention.

THE suit brought by Auditor's Agent Lucas, to require banks to pay tax on the individual deposits was decided in a Louisville court, last week, it being held that banks are not responsible for taxes on individual deposits. The case will be taken to the court of appeals, the judgment of which will be final.

IF Roosevelt breaks the record this fall by being elected President, hereafter the second place on the national ticket will be sought as a stepping stone to the Presidency. Never in the history of the country has a vice-President been nominated and elected to the Presidency, but Roosevelt has a reputation as a record smasher.

THE editor of The Commonwealth, a labor journal published in Covington, has sued Congressman Gooch and Frank Tracy for $5000, alleging that they appropriated the name of his paper for their campaign sheet issued week before last, and that he has been damaged in the above sum by the unauthorized use of the name of his paper by the defendants.

IF each of the other States were to follow the example set by New York in selecting her delegation to the national convention in St. Louis, the convention would be an aggregation of statesmen the like of which has never assembled in this country. New York will be represented by her ablest Democrats. How many other States will select their ablest sons ?

One of the heaviest rain and wind storms in years was experienced throughout Western and Central Kentucky Monday afternoon. In Bourbon and Nicholas counties it assumed cyclonic proportions, wrecking or unroofing many buildings both in Paris and Cynthiana. The loss in each city is estimated at $30,000. In Daviess, Henderson and Union counties the rainfall resembled a cloudburst, followed by a destructive wind. One man was fatally injured in Paducah, and a child was hurt in Owensboro.

THE indications are that the name of Joseph L. Rhinock, of Covington, will be the only name placed before the Congressional Convention in Newport, today. The regular conventions in Campbell, Kenton, Pendleton and Grant instructed for him, while Boone, Gallatin, Carroll and Trimble instructed for Smith. Rump conventions were held in Campbell, Kenton and Grant counties, but the delegates appointed by them will have no standing in the convention. That Rhinock will be nominated for Congress today, there is not the faintest shadow of a doubt.

THE Republican Mass Convention assembled here, last Saturday afternoon, deposed Hon. T. B. Mathews as chairman of their County Committee. Mr. Mathews had been chairman of the Committee for many years, and when he took hold of the party reins in Boone county there was scarcely any life in the party, but he soon rehabilitated the remains, and it became a living, scrappy organization. Had it not been for Tom Mathews the Republican party in Boone would have become extinct years ago. J. G. Tomlin, a prominent attorney at the Boone county bar, and a leading business man of Walton, was chosen to succeed Mr. Mathews.

Democratic Convention.

From the frequent political caucusses held here last week between the local political leaders and their lieutenants, it was evident for several days that something political was doing, and the assemblage of 400 or 500 of the unterrified to attend the Democratic mass meeting held here last Saturday was the result of these frequent interviews and comparison of notes. The boys in the trenches began putting in their appearance at an early hour that day, and long before noon it was evident that the Rhinock men were largely in the ascendancy and that they would organize and control the convention easily, and those in charge of his interest were wearing great, broad smiles. When A. B. Rouse, chairman of the county Democratic Executive Committee, called the mass meeting to order at the base ball park, and announced that nominations for chairman were in order, the Rhinock men nominated Hon. J. W. Kennedy, of Union, and the Gooch men nominated Hon. Benjamin Stephens, of Florence, for chairman. A division of the crowd was demanded, and when the count was made it showed that the Rhinock candidate had 250 votes to 125 for the Gooch candidate. The temporay chairman was made permanent, and W. L. Riddell was elected secrectary. The Gooch men were apparently taking their medicine very nicely until some of them became incensed at too much speech making, and, for a minute or so, at one time, serious trouble appeared iminent, but this was avoided, and the business of the convention proceeded.

The following were appointed delegates to represent Boone county, in the Congressional Convention in Newport today:

M. F. Wingate,	Ben Stephens, jr
O. S. Watts,	J. M. Eddins,
M. Souther,	J. A. Huey,
T. F. Curley,	C. A. Roberts,
J. T. Dempsey,	R. H. Stephens,
R. A. Brady.	A. B. Rouse.

The delegates were instructed to vote for Hon. E. C. Smith, for Congress, and to vote as a unit on all propositions before the convention.

Republican Convention.

The Republican convention was called to order in the court house in Burlington at 1:30 o'clock last Saturday by county chairman, T. B. Mathews. G. W. Baker was elected chairman and Earl Whiting, secretary. On motion of J. G. Tomlin the chair appointed committees as follows :

On resolutions—C. G. Hughes, A. M. Edwards, Cyrus Kelly.

On county committee—Fritz Zimmer, Wood Maxwell, J. G. Tomlin.

On delegates—C. C. Hughes, Lute Baker, Lee Gaines.

The committee on resolutions reported as follows :

Resolved, That the Republicans of Boone county in Mass Convention assembled, hereby approve and endorse the administration of President Roosevelt, and in as far as the county can do so, we reccommend his renomination.

Resolved, That this Convention instruct its delegates to the Sixth Congressional District Convention, which meets at Covington, to cast their votes and the votes of Boone county, for our esteemed fellow county man, the Hon. J. G. Tomlin, for the nomination for Congress from said district.

Resolved, That the delegates to the State Convention be and they are hereby instructed to cast their votes for the Hon. R. P. Ernst and Gov. Wm. O. Bradley for delegates-at-large to the National Convention, and to vote for Hon. John W. Yerkes for National Committeeman.

The committee on County Committee reported as follows:

Walton, J. G. Tomlin; Verona, Lafe Kennedy; Florence, Fred Rich; Union, Sam Hicks; Big Bone, Geo. Miller; Constance, Fritz Zimmer; Bullittsville, J. Utzinger; Petersburg, J. Harry Stevens; Rabbit Hash, Z. T. Kelly; Belleview, Cyrus Kelly; Burlington, G. G. Hughes; Beaver Lick, J. O. Griffith.

The committee on Delegates reported as follows:

Delegates.	Alternates.
G. L. Miller,	Jonas Stevens,
C. C. Hughes,	Earl Whiting,
J. G. Tomlin,	R. H. Hood,
F. P. Zimmer,	Jas. Gunning,
A. M. Edwards,	Lafe Kennedy,
Cyrus Kelly,	Frank Maxwell,
I. O. Griffith,	Chas. Kelly,
Lee Gaines,	John Elston.

All of which reports were adopted.

By action of the Convention, Mr. Mathews, retiring chairman of the County Executive Committee, was accorded the thanks of the party for his excellent administration.

On motion the Boone County RECORDER was requested to publish the proceedings of the convention.

After several brief and well timed speeches, the convention adjourned.

G. W. BAKER, Chmn.
EARL WHITING, Sec.

It is probable that a good many politicians in both parties regret that they have not said as little as Judge Parker has.—Enquirer.

The following is an extract from a letter Mrs. Joe Walton of Rabbi Hash, received from a friend in Los Angeles, California:

Dear Maud:—As Will is writing to Joe I will write some also and tell you about the Chinese New Year, which they celebrated last week. The celebrations last from the 15th to the 21st of February. Six weeks before they put their sacred lilies in their Joss-house or temple, and if they blossom on the night of the 14th it is a sign that they will all be prosperous and have good luck all the year, so they think. Well, this time they blossomed at just the right time and more and bigger blossoms than usual, so they rejoiced exceedingly. They begin their preparations some time before, pay all their debts, whether just or unjust, forgive all their enemies and make peace with one another generally. At any other time they don't like it much for white people to go through Chinatown, but during New Year they are very polite and don't seem to mind the white people. So Will and I went to see the sights. First, we visited the Joss-house, such a very queer place, but trimmed up with more gold and silver than you ever saw in your life. They have five idols sitting on little thrones with a gorgeous embroidered canopy over them. Before each one, on a little table, were dishes of fruit and candy, a cup of tea and jar of opium. They also have one place fixed the same way for their "invisible God," which I believe they think they can see, but other people can't. The idols are all hideously ugly things—reminded me of the kings and jacks on playing cards. They were about twice life size. One of them looked quite a good deal like pictures of old Li. The incense was so strong it made us rather fainty, so, after seeing the idols, we did not tarry long. Then we went to see a Chinese family, who live in the cellar under their shop. It is a wonder to me the Chinese don't all die, they live crowded together so. They had some little idols sitting around in their house, and queer looking ornaments made of peacock feathers. They had a table set with candy, fruit and something that looked like raw biscuit, and as they expect you to eat all the time we left as soon as we could. Then we went in several of their stores, and in each one they gave us sacks of the awfullest tasting candy, and cups of tea which was real good, though it was real strong and did not have any sugar in it. I don't know where the Chinese keep their women and children most of the time, for you hardly ever see any in Chinatown, but last week the streets were just swarming with them. The children are as cute as they can be while they are real little, and pretty too. They are not so yellow as the older ones, just a kind ot cream color, and they all seem very well behaved—much more so than white children. But they were dressed to look so comical. The boys and girls dress just alike except the girls wear breeches that are loose around the bottom and the boy's fit tight. Their coats and breeches were all made of silk, and such funny colored things—green, yellow, pink and lavander, all mixed up any old way, sometimes one sleeve green and the other pink, one breeches leg yellow and the other lavander, and stripes and patches just "hit or miss." The girls had their hair combed tight across their heads and done up in a tight, little knot just over their left ear, and decorated with little shells and feathers. The boys had a red ribbon wrapped around their pig-tail and a black tassel on the end. Some of the right little fellows had little pig-tails not more than an inch long that stuck out straight, and looked so funny. There are a great many Chinese here, more than any other town in California, except San Francisco, and when you go to Chinatown you can just imagine you are in China itself.

THE RECORDER does not desire to create any unnecessary excitement by the statement that representatives of a large oil company have their eyes on this county, which will be visited in the next few weeks for the purpose of ascertaining if there are any surface indications of the presence of oil. Big Bone valley will be visited first, and should there be anything to indicate the presence of oil in that vicinity, other neighborhoods in the county will be visited. The same investigation is being made in some of the counties across the river in Ohio and Indiana. There is no telling, but what mother earth contains, in paying quantities, the coveted substance immediately beneath us.

Local News.

Considerable garden truck was planted last week.

Bees have not done their usual amount of buzzing in the month of April.

The price the 1904 crop of tobacco brings may not pay for its production.

JOHN GOODRIDGE, Richwood.

The Democratic convention that meets in Newport to-day, will name the next Congressman for this district.

The Sheriff received his 1904 tax books, last week, a reminder that taxes are to be forthcoming again shortly.

There was considerable getting-up-and-going among local politicians last week. There was a fight on in both parties.

Notwithstanding the heavy rains that have fallen this spring the ground is plowing nicely where it has been dry enough for breaking.

The Odd-Fellows' lodge at Petersburg, will have a big time to night. All the neighboring lodges are invited to be present and participate in the fun.

James Strouse, whose wife had the smallpox week before last, became a victim of the yellow flag the latter part of last week. He has a light case of smallpox.

With a grand stand to seat 500 people and the ground in excellent condition, the Boones ought to be able to furnish the local fans a good article of ball this summer.

The rural mail route that starts from Ludlow and swings down through this county, continues to grow in popularity, and is now serving a large number of families.

In a few days some farmer will startle his neighbors by the announcement, "I am through planting corn." Who will be the first to report to this office? A crop of less than fifteen acres will not be considered.

The Boone County Telephone Company installed an expensive little instrument at their exchange, last week, which they expect to be of great assistance to their operator by increasing the ringing power at "central."

A Thoghtful Man.

M. M. Austin of Winchester, Indiana, knew what to do in the hour of need. His wife had such an unusual case of stomach and liver trouble, physicians could not help her. He thought of and tried Dr. King's New Life Pills and she got relief at once and was finally cured. Only 25c, at all Drug Stores.

The excitement caused by the high price in tobacco has subsided, and the preparations for another crop are under way. In the matter of price the Indiana weed brought more dollars per 100 pounds than the Kentucky article did, and only a few years ago it was understood that Indiana could produce only a very inferior article of tobacco.

Hubert Conner has the contract for building the Gitizens' Telephone line from Burlington to Hebron; Thomas Hafer, from Hebron to North Bend, and John Griner, from Hebron to Constance. Each of these gentlemen is paid a stipulated sum per day, and is limited to a certain amount per day for each hand he employs. The lines are to be put up at once.

A CARD OF THANKS—We desire to extend our sincere thanks to relatives and neighbors for the sympathy shown us in the sad bereavement in the loss of our beloved husband and father, Geo. W. Gordon. We also extend our thanks to Rev. Duncan for his consoling words, and Allison & Yates for their efficiency in conducting the funeral.
BEREAVED MOTHER AND CHILDREN.

Nothing Equal to Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy for Bowel Complaints in Children.

"We have used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera, and Diarrhoea Remedy in our family for years," says Mrs. J. B. Cooke, of Nederlands, Texas. "We have given it to all of our children. We have used other medicines for the same purpose, but never found anything to equal Chamberlain's. If you will use it as directed it will always cure." For sale by All Druggists.

The remains of James M. Riddell were taken from the vault here at 2 p. m., last Sunday, and consigned to their last earthly resting place. The ceremonies were conducted by the Masonic Lodge at Williamstown assisted by about forty members of the Masonic order in this county. R. H. Elliston was master of ceremonies and conducted them in a most solemn and impressive manner.

"We come, my brothers, sorrowfully today, to the points of the compass that marks the beginning and end of the earthly life of our beloved brother, James M. Riddell. They include the span of a long, useful and beautiful life. For nearly one quarter of a century he was my nearest neighbor. We could almost shake hands from my front door to his front door. Twenty-five years of the most intimate friendship and neighborship! I saw him in the morning, at noon and in the evening. I saw him constantly beautifying his home; I noted his untiring and ceaseless energy; I watched his tenderness and devotion to those of his household; I saw him at his work bench with the same ceaseless energy; I saw him in his church an inspiration to his fellow members and a living example that the church is all that she stands for; I saw him in the Sunday school, for twenty-five years with bared, white head and kind face, the first at the door to greet the little ones, in snow or in sunshine, who ran to him as they would run to a good father to be nestled under the influence of his gentle words; I saw him in the lodge room—a truer, better Mason never lived. He loved the history and traditions of the order. He never wavered, never was discouraged. He was as faithful to the order as he was to his church. And then I saw him in the shadow of a great sorrow, just a few months ago when his life partner, a lovely, beautiful character, went from his side and was laid to rest in your cemetery here. I saw the crushed and bleeding heart of the gentle man and affectionate husband, so gentle, so true, so considerate that he seemed to fear that his agony might become the burden of his friends. And now, so soon he comes to be laid again by her side and with his fathers. I loved him as I loved my own flesh and blood. He seemed next to my own father who preceded him only a short while, and whose sainted memory with his will ever rest over our lives like a sweet and beautiful benediction. My brothers, I never knew a life sweeter than his.

"Life's race is well won—
Life's work well done—
Heaven's crown once won."'

Married, at the residence of Uncle Ed Stephens, of Erlanger, on Wednesday, April 13, 1904, Mr. Perry L. Aylor, and Miss Emma C. Conner, both of Hebron. They were attended by Dr. and Mrs. F. L. Sayre. Mrs. M. L. Aylor, Miss Iva Aylor and Miss Lizzie Clore accompanied them to the preacher's. The bridal party went on to Cincinnati where they attended the theater. On Thursday, Mrs. Susie Early, sister of the bride, gave them a fine dinner at her home on Colerain Ave., Cincinnati. They returned in the afternoon to be welcomed by a sumptuous supper at the home of the groom. The bride looked very sweet in a dark blue cloth suit and a white chiffon hat. D. W. Conner, brother of the bride, gave her an elegant dinner at her former home on the following Sunday. They were the recipients of a number of useful presents and they have the best wishes of a host of friends for a long and happy married life.

Farmers are hauling considerable provender from the city this spring. Not many years ago a load of hay or corn was seldom hauled from Cincinnati to the county, but now nearly every farmer has to go to the city for these or some other articles of food about this season of the year. Is this because farmers keep too much stock or is it because their land is losing its productive properties? This is a question worthy of investigation.

Three Great American Inventions.

[By Sherley Tolin.]

Before the year 1800, 2060 American inventions had been patented. One of these, the Cotton-Gin, exerted an immense influence upon the industries of the nation. The invention was received with great favor, and cotton became the staple crop. In cultivating the white fibres, slavetrade became of great importance.

The second invention was the steamboat, invented by Robert Fulton. In 1807, after many experiments, he solved the problem of running a boat by steam-power. His first steamboat, the Clermont, was launched on the Hudson river. As there were no railroads, the steamboat was especially useful on large rivers and lakes.

And third was the telegraph, which, in the year 1832, Samuel F. B. Morse, an American artist inventor, while on a voyage from Havre to New York, conceived the idea of a magnetic telegraph. Having no means Prof. Morse was unable to apply his invention and for six years vainly petitoned Congress for a certain sum to make the experiment. In 1843, when he had almost yielded to despair, Congress at mid-night, and the last moments of the session, appropriated $30,000 for an experimental line between Washington and Baltimore. The line was completed in 1844, and the first message sent over it was, "What hath God wrought?" Prof. Morse was rewarded by testimonials, honors and wealth.

Carl, son of Benjamin Cason, who lives down on Middle creek, left for the wild and woolly West, last week, his destination being Tacoma Washington. Hope Carl will make a great success of growing up with the country.

The May Street Fair.

Nearly all the preliminary arrangements have been made for the street fair to be held in Aurora, May 16—21, under the auspices of the Haymakers Association.

There will be numerous attractions during each day and evening and no improper dancing, gambling, liquor or graft games of any character, or any other feature that is not absolutely clean, high-class and moral will be tolerated.

This will surely be a gala week in Aurora. On Wednesday May 18, there will be a grand parade. All societies and orders in the city and surrounding county will be invited to participate. Excursion rates have been secured on both railroads, the traction line, boat lines and the bus line.

By Order Haymakers Committee.

Taking Desperate Chances.

It is true that many contract colds and recover from them without taking any precaution or treatment, and a knowledge of this fact leads others to take their chances instead of giving their colds the needed attention. It should be borne in mind that every cold weakens the lungs, lowers the vitality, makes the system less able to withstand each succeeding cold and paves the way for more serious diseases. Can you afford to take such desperate chances when Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, famous for its cures of colds, can be had for a trifle? For Sale by all Druggists.

Every child should be taught that thirst quenching does not depend so greatly on the quantity of fluid that is swallowed as on the length of time during which liquid is kept in contact with the tissues of the mouth and throat.

Three dangerous burglars were caught a few nights since in Brussels while "operating" by means of one of the police dogs, which pinned the leader as he was hiding behind a wall. These dogs have only lately been added to the suburban service and are doing good work.

El Cafetal, a coffee trade journal published in New York, is authority for the statement that the quantity of coffee yearly bought and sold in the world's trade is worth $255,000,000, which probably corresponds to a net yield from over 1,800,000,000 coffee trees in full bearing.

THE JAPANESE LINES.

They Extend Thirty Miles Along the Yalu River.

Czar's Troops Are Preparing to Resist a Japanese Advance By Fortifying on the Manchurian Side of the Yalu River.

St. Petersburg, April 23.—Viceroy Alexieff's announcement of the destruction of a launch and the loss of 21 men by the explosion of a Russian torpedo at Port Arthur has added to the gloom which prevailed since the disaster to the Petropavlovsk.

"We are paying the price of carelessness," said a member of the admiralty, "and previous disasters seem to teach nothing." The war commission suppressed part of the viceroy's dispatch which showed where the mines were being laid. It is believed that as launches were employed they were mining the entrance to the harbor in order to prevent the Japanese from forcing an entrance and attempting to destroy the remaining ships.

It is evident from the closing of the entrance that Viceroy Alexieff has no intention of letting his ships to sea again even against an inferior force, though this may not be the policy of Vice Adm. Skrydloff, who will determine on a plan of opposition when he assumes command.

St. Petersburg, April 23.—The following telegram from Viceroy Alexieff has been received by the emperor:

"Quite a series of reconnoissances carried out on the Yalu have shown that the Japanese are concentrating in considerable force. It is believed that they have about one division to the north of Wiju. They are also beginning to concentrate the operations in Wiju from which place they have moved the Korean population. Information has reached me that quantities of material, apparently parts of pontoon bridges, are being collected opposite the island of Mahikhe. Our scouts have killed two Japanese scouts, one of whom appeared to be an officer.

"On our right flank our scouts executed daring reconnoisances, extending over several days, on the left bank of the Yalu, as the result of which it has been ascertained that there are only a few troops south of the River Pomakua, but that the Japanese there are occupied in preparing boats. A Russian detachment of two officers and 32 men proceeded thither in three boats. The detachment, however, was discovered by the enemy and shots were exchanged, three of our riflemen being killed. Staff Capt. Smeizing and 11 riflemen were severely, and Lieut. Pushkin and four men slightly wounded. The detachment returned to our bank of the river under the cover of two of our guns."

Seoul, Korea, Saturday, April 23.—Advices received here state that the Japanese lines now extend 30 miles along the Yalu river, reaching from Yongampo to ten miles above Wiju. The Russians are strongest at Antung. Tiger Hill is, as it was in the China-Japanese war, the key to the situation. Three islands, one above and two below Wiju, will facilitate an attack as they offer a base for artillery to cover the crossing of the Yalu.

Paris, April 25.—According to the St. Petersburg correspondent of the Echo de Paris, Col. Van Novsky, of the Russian general staff, declares that the report of a Japanese reverse on the Yalu has not been confirmed. The colonel does not believe that there has as yet been any serious fighting on the Yalu, neither side having finished the concentration of troops. He estimates the Japanese strength in Korea to be 85,000 men.

New Chwang, April 25.—There is no official information that any decisive fighting has taken place on the Yalu river, neither have any reliable reports been received here that the Japanese have yet attempted to cross, although the opposing lines, it is understood, now skirt the two banks of the river.

Shanghai, April 25.—Fearing a possible attack, the Chinese officials have decided to remove the Shanghai arsenal to Wu Hu, an inland town about 150 miles west of Shanghai. It is estimated that the entire cost of moving the arsenal will reach three million taels.

New Chwang, April 25.—The Russians are preparing to resist a Japanese advance by the further construction of intrenchments and other fortifications on the Manchurian side of the river, especially opposite the points where the Japanese have concentrated their forces within the last few days, and all reports of decisive engagements on the Yalu are premature.

London, April 25.—The far eastern dispatches Monday morning are chiefly concerned with reports and speculations concerning Japanese landings and the plan of campaign. The Telegraph's Tokio correspondent says the present delay is more apparent than real, both as regards field and naval operations. The Japanese, according to the correspondent, are acting prudently and will not be hurried. They realize that certain movements must precede the next coup by land and sea, and they are awaiting both favorable weather and occasion, and from Port Arthur to Vladivostok are on the alert.

THE BOUNDARY BETWEEN KOREA AND MANCHURIA.

At Wiju, the point at which this photograph is taken, the river is divided into three channels, across two of which, the deeper, bridges have been thrown.

BALL PLAYERS ARRESTED.

Whether Sunday Ball Playing Is Illegal Is to Be Tested.

New York, April 25.—Whether the playing of baseball games in Greater New York on Sunday is illegal, is to be decided on a test case, the first step in which was that taken Sunday under instructions issued by Police Commissioner McAdoo. Besides the players, three sellers of score cards were arrested. Commissioner McAdoo recently made the statement that he would not permit the playing of games in Manhattan, but that he would permit such contests at Washington park, Brooklyn, contending that these grounds are situated in a sparsely inhabited district and therefore games there did not interfere with the residents. Sunday, however, the commissioner issued instructions to arrest those most conspicuous in such games, and as soon as Frank Roth, of the Philadelphia club, had struck the second ball pitched by Poole, a police captain and four detectives placed Roth, Poole and Jacklitsch under arrest. The six prisoners were admitted to $200 bail each, and will have a hearing Monday.

THREE MEN EXECUTED

The Chicago Car Barn Bandits Pay the Penalty.

Neidermeier Had to Be Carried to the Gallows, While Marx and Van Dine Showed No Emotion on the Scaffold.

Chicago, April 23.—Atheist to the last, but completely unnerved, Peter Neidermeier, the leader of the car barn bandits, was hanged Friday from a chair, contrasting with his companions in crime, Gustav Marx and Harvey Van Dine, who, standing erect, kissed an image of Christ and died without a tremor. The three executions were separate, 20 minutes apart, the same scaffold being used for all. Only once before in the large number of executions that have taken place at the jail in this city has it been necessary to carry a condemned man to the gallows as Neidermeier was Friday. The crime for which the three bandits paid the penalty was one of eight murders which the three men are known to have committed—that of Francis W. Stewart, a clerk in the car barns of the Chicago city railway. Neidermeier had boasted continually of his courage but as the last moments approached he collapsed.

Dr. F. W. McNamara, the jail physician, had visited Neidermeier previously and said that Neidermeier's physical condition was satisfactory. The bandit leader himself told Chief Deputy Peters, who appeared with the death warrant, that the last walk would be without aid. Deputy Peters then read the document, and Neidermeier started from his cell. He had gone only two steps when he sank, and it was found it would be necessary to lift him to the scaffold. Immediately Neidermeier's feet were strapped together. He was handcuffed, placed on a hospital truck and wheeled to the end of a tier of cells. Then three deputies carried him down a flight of stairs. Entirely contrary to general expectation Neidermeier made no effort at resistance. Saying nothing and appearing almost in a daze, he was seated upon a chair placed over the trap of the scaffold.

No minister or priest accompanied Niedermeier, he having finally said, when offered a last opportunity before leaving his cell, he would die as he had lived, an atheist. On the scaffold Jailer Whitman disregarded the custom of asking whether the condemned man wished to say anything. The shroud and hood were quickly adjusted, the bandit instinctively moving his head that the rope might more easily be arranged, took a last glance at the spectators. He appeared as if in a stupor. A moment later, at 10:35 o'clock, the trap fell, the chair being quickly removed from behind as the body shot downward. The shroud became partly disarranged and fearful muscular struggles of the dying man continued for 15 minutes in view of the witnesses of the execution.

The convulsive movements of Niedermeier's body while he was suspended at the rope's end led the physicians at first to believe that he had horribly strangled to death. After an official examination, however, it was said his neck had been broken.

Shortly before the hanging Neidermeier's mother had asked to be admitted to the jail, but her request was refused.

The only requests that the other bandits, Marx and Van Dine, made were that they be allowed to bid another good-bye, which was granted. They counselled each other to be brave, and joined in hoping that they would "meet again." The men had been bitter enemies until a few days before the execution, Van Dine being incensed at his companion for having made the confession which led to their capture.

When the body of Neidermeier had stopped quivering and had been removed, Marx walked slowly to the scaffold with several priests, after having confessed, repented and received the last sacraments, as did Van Dine, both men having been converted to the Roman Catholic faith following the death sentence.

Marx, like Van Dine, was neatly attired in black and in the coat lapel of each was a white rose. Neidermeier, unlike his comrades, wore a rose of dark red. Marx showed no emotion while on the scaffold, and in a steady voice repeated a litany after the priests. He fervently kissed the crucifix and at 11:17 o'clock was hanged. His neck was broken.

The execution of Harvey Van Dine was varied by a curious incident. While he stood on the drop praying and waiting for his arms to be pinioned and his legs secured, the noose fell from the cross piece of the gallows and dangled before the eyes of the bandit about to die. Disregarding the noose the bandit continued praying steadily to the end. Death in his case, as in that of Marx, was almost instantaneous and not being due to strangulation, but to the fall.

THE CANAL IS OURS.

The Contract With the French Canal Company Signed.

Paris, April 28.—The contract by which the ownership of the Panama canal passes to the senate has been signed, sealed, delivered and is complete. The title to the canal route is now vested in the government of the United States.

The document by which this transaction is consummated bears the signatures of President Bo and Director Richman, of the Panama Canal Co., who signed for the company as its responsible officials. The transfer is complete and without reservation and the United States secures a perfect title. This result has been accomplished quietly and most unexpectedly, as the public had been given to understand that the contract would not be executed until after the meeting of the stockholders of the Panama Canal Co. Saturday, at which the question of ratification would be presented.

It is confidently believed that the completion of the sale before the meeting will increase the vote for the ratification, as it will be recognized that nothing more remains but to acquiesce in the action taken by the highest officers of the company.

When W. A. Day and Charles F. Russell, the United States assistant attorneys general, who are in Paris to assist in the transfer of the property, were seen Friday night, they reluctantly admitted that the transfer had been consummated, and in order to avoid misunderstandings regarding a transaction of this magnitude they furnished the following official statement in writing:

"The papers transferring the rights and property by the new Panama Canal Co. to the United States have already been executed and delivered. They will be ratified Saturday afternoon by the stockholders' meeting.

"The arrangement includes a general conveyance and provisions for deeds and resignation in the republic of Panama and in the canal zone now under the jurisdiction of the United States in which zone the civil law continues in force by reason of the session of the zone from a civil law sovereignty. All formalities of the local law on the isthmus have been arranged for and secured to these United States.

"The property will shortly be delivered on the isthmus and upon that being done the purchase price will be immediately paid. The United States gets an unencumbered title."

THE NEW BELLEVUE HOSPITAL.

It Will Be the Largest Structure of the Kind in the World.

New York, April 23.—The new plans for the new Bellevue hospital in this city were made public Friday. They provided for the largest hospital in the world, a magnificent structure, which will extend from 26th to 29th street and from First avenue to East river. It will take ten years to finish the structure and will cost $12,000,000 Architecturally, it will rank among the great buildings of the country. It is to be constructed of brick and stone, will be fireproof and will accommodate 2,500 patients. The largest hospital in the world now is one at Hamburg, which houses 1,700 patients. It is planned to have 125 doctors and 320 nurses. At present there are 42 doctors and 160 nurses at Bellevue.

Constantinople, April 23.—The Turkish cruiser Medjidia, built at Cramps shipyards, Philadelphia, arrived at Mytilene Friday and was delivered to the Turkish officials. The sultan was so pleased with the Turkish admiral's report on the cruiser that he sent a complimentary telegram to President Roosevelt and a personal message to United States Minister Leishman, commending the high qualities of the American shipbuilding industry. His majesty has invited the officers and crew who brought over the cruiser to visit Constantinople at his expense.

SUNDAY BALL GAMES.

They Will Be Permitted in Brooklyn League Park.

New York, April 23.—In a statement issued Friday Police Commissioner McAdoo says that the playing of baseball games on Sunday will not be permitted at either of the league grounds in Manhattan, but that match games will be permitted in isolated neighborhoods, provided there be no violation of the law in regard to such games. In the commissioner's opinion the Brooklyn league park is in an "isolated place," and therefore he will take no action against the league games now being played on Sunday in that borough.

FIXING PRICE OF POETRY.

The Only Way of Deciding What the Real Article for Magazine Use Is.

The great magazine editor was wrapped in thought and cigar smoke. To him came an assistant editor with a poem, relates the Chicago Post.

"This seems to have passed the usual test," said the assistant.

"Have I read it?" asked the editor.

"Yes."

"Was I able to make anything of it?"

"No."

"Then accept it, of course."

"But how much shall we pay for it?"

The great editor increased the cloud of thought and cigar smoke.

"Have you read it?" he asked, at last.

"Yes."

"Were you able to make anything out of it?"

"No."

"Looks as if it might be pretty valuable, doesn't it? How many of our manuscript readers have tackled it?"

"Six."

"Could any of them make out what the poet was driving at?"

"That takes $10 off the price," said the editor. "Just figure it up according to the usual method—$10 added for every man who couldn't understand it and $10 deducted for every man who could. We've got to pay good prices for good poetry, and there is only one way to decide what has real magazine merit."

HAS A SAY.

The School Principal Talks About Food.

The Principal of a High School in a flourishing Calif. city says:

"For 23 years I worked in the school with only short summer vacations. I formed the habit of eating rapidly, masticated poorly which coupled with my sedentary work led to indigestion, liver trouble, lame back and rheumatism.

"Upon consulting physicians some doped me with drugs, while others prescribed dieting and sometimes I got temporary relief, other times not. For 12 years I struggled along with this handicap to my work, seldom laid up but often a burden to myself with lameness and rheumatic pains.

"Two years ago I met an old friend, a physician who noticed at once my out-of-health condition and who prescribed for me an exclusive diet of Grape-Nuts, milk and fruit.

"I followed his instructions and in two months I felt like a new man with no more headaches, rheumatism or liver trouble and from that time to this Grape-Nuts has been my main food for morning and evening meals, am stronger and healthier than I have been for years without a trace of the old troubles.

"Judging from my present vigorous physical and mental state I tell my people Methuselah may yet have to take second place among the old men, for I feel like I will live a great many more years.

"To all this remarkable change in health I am indebted to my wise friend and Grape-Nuts and I hope the Postum Co. will continue to manufacture this life and health giving food for several centuries yet, until I move to a world where indigestion is unknown." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Ask any physician what he knows about Grape-Nuts. Those who have tried it know things.

REVIEW OF CONGRESS.

A Total of Over 1,400 Bills Became Laws.

In the Senate There Were 5,645 Bills Introduced—One Senator and Seven Representatives Died During the Two Sessions.

Washington, April 25.—The important legislative accomplishments of the sessions of the 58th congress were confined to two subjects—Cuba and Panama.

The senate ratified the treaty negotiated with Cuba to carry out the terms of the Platt amendment. It also satisfied the Chinese commercial treaty which provides for two open ports in Manchuria.

Chairman Hemenway, of the house committee on appropriations, in a statement compiled under his direction, gives the total of all supply bills (subject to light changes in pending bills) as $597,802,324, to which must be added $84,791,820 for interest on the public debt. The estimated revenues are $704,472,060. By these figures the expenses are $22,000,000 less than the revenues. The estimates of the various government departments on which the appropriation bills were based exceeded the total estimated revenues by $42,845,862.

While a total of over 1,400 bills became laws during the two sessions, less than 150 of them were "public" bills, and of this latter number, one-half simply authorized the bridging of rivers, the damming of streams, the regulation of federal courts, and the ordinance of the District of Columbia.

It was made a crime to "crimp" seamen of the United States, by soliciting them as lodgers or charging a fee for shipping them.

The only general pension legislation which became a law makes the pension of those who lost their sight in the military or naval service $100 per month. Agitation for a service pension bill resulted in the introduction of many such bills. It was decided, however, that no such action should be taken at the present session, after which the general order making age the evidence of physical disability to perform manual labor was issued by the secretary of the interior and recognized by congress in a deficiency appropriation of $1,500,000 to make it effective.

The house, by independent action, directed an investigation of the alleged "beef trust" by the department of commerce and labor. The attorney general was given the benefit of the unexpended appropriation made last congress for the prosecution of the trust, an amount aggregating $475,000.

The extension of the east front of the capitol building was provided in the sundry civil appropriation bill and provisions were made for an office building for senators to correspond with the proposed office building for members of the house of representatives. These buildings are to cost in the neighborhood of $5,000,000 each.

The creation of two additional states in the union was provided for in a bill which passed the house, but not the senate. Oklahoma and Indian territory were united as Oklahoma. Arizona and New Mexico as Arizona. Legislation directly affecting the labor interests of the country received consideration in the committees of the two houses but final action was not taken. The eight-hour bill was referred to the department of commerce and labor for investigation and report, and the anti-injunction bill was postponed by the committees until the next session.

In the senate the confirmation of Gen. Leonard Wood as a major general was accomplished after much inquiry and objection.

Senator Hanna and seven members of the house have died, namely, Representatives T. H. Tongue (Ore.), Vincent Boreing (Ky.), R. H. Foerderer (Pa.), Henry Burk (Pa.), W. W. Skiles (O.), G. W. Craft (S. C.) and C. W. Thompson (Ala.). T. H. Ball (Tex.) resigned. His place is filled by J. M. Pinckney. George B. McClellan (N. Y.) resigned and was succeeded by W. Bourke Cockran. Charles Dick (O.) resigned to succeed Senator Hanna in the senate. George Howell (Pa.) was unseated in favor of William Connell and J. F. Shafroth (Col.) resigned in favor of R. W. Bonynge, who contested his election.

In the house there were 15,298 bills, 319 resolutions, 152 joint resolutions and 61 concurrent resolutions introduced. Of these 2,253 passed the house. In the senate there were 5,645 bills introduced.

FLOODS AND STORM.

Property Destroyed at Fort Scott By Water and at McPherson By Wind.

Fort Scott, Kan., April 25.—Fort Scott is experiencing the most serious flood in its history. Marmaton river and Mill creek, which runs into the former stream here, have risen ten feet in the past 24 hours, the result of heavy rains. Several hundreds of persons have been rescued in boats. As far as known no lives have been lost. The estimated loss to live stock drowned and property damaged is $100,000.

The two streams began to rise at 10 o'clock Saturday night and Sunday the city was divided into three sections and almost completely isolated. Sunday night the entire northern part of the city was cut off and part of the city is inundated. Ten feet of water is rushing through the streets in that part of the city and several hundred persons in what is known as Bellitown have been forced to leave their homes.

Kansas City, April 25.—Unusually heavy rain and wind storms, causing more or less damage, prevailed in Western Missouri and Central Kansas Sunday, with a blizzard in Western Kansas. Small streams in Kansas are over their banks and many telephone and telegraph poles have been blown down. One drowning is reported. Many trains are late on account of washouts.

McPherson, Kan., April 25.—A severe tornado struck McPherson Sunday afternoon, demolishing six residences and causing more or less other damage to property. Three persons were injured, one seriously. Much damage was done in the country north of here.

The tornado passed four miles east of Salina, wrecking telephone and telegraph poles and farm property. Efforts were made to follow the course of the storm by telephone, but all the wires are down.

It is a miracle that great damage was not done at McPherson and many persons killed, as the tornado barely missed the thickly settled residence district.

KILLED HER PET DOG.

The Girl Grieved So Over the Act That She Drank Poison.

New York, April 25.—Grieving because she had killed her pet, a St. Bernard dog, Miss Martha Bond committed suicide at New Rochelle Sunday by drinking carbolic acid. Miss Bond was 24 years old and was companion to Mrs. William Carey, living in a fashionable apartment house. Miss Bond Saturday evening called her big pet into the yard of the apartment house and fired two bullets into its head. She had been told that she could not keep the dog in the building on account of a rule against animals of any kind being permitted there. After she had killed the animal she repented her act and grieved through the night. She said she had done wrong in shooting the animal and in remorse for the deed, planned her own death.

HALF MILLION DOLLAR FIRE.

The Victor Talking Machine Co., Camden, N. J., the Victim.

Camden, N. J., April 25.—The interior of the large four-story building of the Victor Talking Machine Co., of this city, was destroyed by fire Sunday afternoon, causing a loss estimated at nearly $500,000. The concern carried an insurance of $250,000. Upwards of half a million phonographic disc records and 25,000 talking machines in various stages of completion were destroyed. Thousands of original records which can not be replaced were also ruined. A fire boat and four fire companies from Philadelphia assisted the Camden fire department in preventing the flames from spreading.

THE PARKER BOOM.

CANDIDATE LAUDED AT IROQUOIS BANQUET.

New Yorkers Declare He Can Win for Democrats—Is Indorsed by Leaders of the Party.

The Iroquois banquet at the Auditorium hotel, Chicago, was the scene of an enthusiastic democratic demonstration, Wednesday night, April 13. Foremost among the speakers was Martin W. Littleton, president of the borough of Brooklyn, New York city, who officially launched the presidential boom of Judge Alton B. Parker, of New York. Mr. Littleton reviewed the Jeffersonian principles and their influence on the nation and continuing said:

"Before the summer sets in full we will be face to face with our old antagonist, a party whose full and fruitful years ended with the end of President McKinley and Senator Hanna and whose irresponsible conduct began with President Roosevelt; a party committed now to a policy of destruction of the coordinate branch of the government; a party planted firmly upon the plan to exalt the executive and humiliate all other branches of government; a party not content with natural extension of territory, but treating that as authority for a departure from a proper constitutional balance of its three great powers; a party guilty in the judgment of the country of continuing a great department weighted down with corruption and fraud, a party providing shelter and fostering monopolies through tariff; a party of executive usurpation, administrative corruption and increasing extravagance. At the head of this party we have a candidate against us as a man whose strenuous radicalism has shaken the confidence of the country in his stability and safety. He has strayed far from the orthodox and conservative path marked out in the era of McKinley and Hanna; his politics and practices are a genuine source of danger to constitutional and republican government.

"Within our own party we have another danger to the sound politics of the nation—a danger growing out of an effort to divide the American people in such a way as to array all the rich and comfortable on one side against all the poor and the needy on the other; a danger set on foot by a coalition between the idle rich and the idle poor and meant to pull apart the natural union of the industrious rich and the industrious poor. Mr. Bryce said that in Europe the line of cleavage in politics was horizontal—that is, with all the powerful and rich above and all the poor and helpless below—while in this country it was vertical—that is, with the rich and poor on the one side and the rich and poor on the other. We, as democrats, must resist, not only as a danger to our party but as a peril to the nation, the effort to be made to shift the vertical line of division to a horizontal one. We must not permit our party to be used as a means to set the faces of the poor against the fortunes of the rich.

"You ask me what of the empire state? What of the hope of democracy? Speaking solely on my own responsibility, I tell you that the democracy of New York demands a return to constitutional government and an obedience of constitutional authority; it demands that the shelter of the tariff shall be withdrawn from those who do not need it; it demands that extravagance shall give way to economy and that corruption shall be cut out root and branch.

"And I say to me: 'What of the man who shall lead us in the contest?' The answer from my state is a cry from farm to factory, from banker to laborer, from capitalist to the toiler, from merchant to manufacturer, from every class to every class, for Judge Alton B. Parker. Holding the government in perfect balance under the constitution, with the clearest sense of all its sensitive powers, viewing with undimmed vision the advancing civilization of our race, friendly alike to the laborer and to the capitalist, and fearing neither if they transgress the law; having a perfect faith that commerce and the constitution go hand in hand and holding wisely that one must not be used to impair the other, he would impart to the public life of the nation all of the democratic faith of Jefferson, all of the fine intellectual force of Tilden, all of the patriotic fervor of Bryan and all of the unfailing courage and conscience of Cleveland."

HOPE IN THE DEMOCRACY.

Former Senator Vilas Declares Pure Political Principles Will Triumph.

At the Iroquois banquet, Chicago, April 13, Former Senator William F. Vilas, of Wisconsin, spoke in part as follows:

"To one who brings to the contemplation of the democratic outlook naught but the hope to see his country happier through democratic principles, the famous council table of the Illinois club proffers a alluring charm. The pleasing consciousness pervades him that he enters here the fraternity of true believers, instructed, ingrained in the doctrines of constitutional liberty, who put no dominion over the tongue but the mind of the soul free.

"Sound democratic faith, like true religion, is never out of place in reckoning the conduct of life. The time was—and it was the day of party glory—when democrats lived in close familiarity with party principles. And, though as heresy in politics has been befouled by the corruption of protection, I trust that day has not wholly passed.

"What though the spoils-seeking scoffer may cry: 'This is not practical politics, but Utopian counsel, which wins no place in the polling booths!' Oh, ye of little faith! Here is democracy's fundamental commandment, trust in the people; the underlying rock of popular liberty. It is the grand strategy of democratic war. In this sign we conquer or we conquer not at all.

"To the plots of protection, that archdemon of governmental iniquity, its very name a cheat, has been surrendered control of legislation in barter for service of ambition. Rethink you of the change of 30 years. Democrats so long ago foretold its bitter fruit by concentration in the hands of the wealth produced by the masses, to make the rich richer, the poor poorer! Has the prediction failed?

"Twenty years ago we pointed to its hateful children or sin—then coming to light—trusts and combinations to fleece the public by extortion, and warned against their increase. Was that warning false?

"How long, O Lord, how long is this iniquity to lie upon us? The answer is inescapable. Till sound democratic principles shall prevail, or the surges of revolution then heave it off. Stop it! cries every dictate of liberty, justice and patriotism. Stop it! It is the nation's peril, the breeder of social ruin."

——Mr. Williams, of Illinois, hit upon an apt phrase when he styled President Roosevelt as a "harmless agitator" of the trust question.—Mobile Register.

Ever since the adoption of the constitution it has been the belief of the American people that our government was composed of three co-ordinate branches—executive, legislative and judicial. But Mr. Roosevelt has discovered that this is a mistake. The government is composed of Theodore Roosevelt, as he has taken pains to show on several occasions.—Indianapolis Sentinel.

FIFTY-EIGHTH CONGRESS.

Regular Session.

Washington, April 20.—Senate—The question of additional accommodations in the way of office and committee rooms occupied the attention of the senate the greater part of the day. The subject arose in connection with the provisions in the sundry civil appropriation bill, one for an extension of the east front of the capitol building in accordance with sketches left by Architect Walters, and the other, for an outside senate office and committee building.

House—After a debate extending through the entire session of the house Tuesday passed the bill providing for joint statehood of Oklahoma and Indian territory under the name Oklahoma and of Arizona and of New Mexico under the name of Arizona. The vote was 147 to 102. In discussing the rule which had been reported by the committee on rules, providing for immediate consideration of the bill, Mr. Williams, the minority leader, declared that no republican had any idea that the bill would become a law at this session. Delegate Wilson, of Arizona, opposed the bill. It was favored by Delegates Rodey, of New Mexico, and McGuire, of Oklahoma.

Washington, April 21.—Senate—The senate Wednesday listened to a set speech of almost two hours' duration on the trusts by Mr. Dolliver and afterwards completed consideration of the sundry civil appropriation bill, again devoting much time to the provisions for an extension of the east front of the capitol and for an additional office building for the senate. The office building amendment was agreed to as reported from the committee, but the extension paragraph was so modified as practically to provide for plans only, the appropriation being reduced to $75,000.

House—The house, after an extended debate, sent the naval appropriation bill back to conference, the only disputed senate amendment accepted being that providing for the construction in navy yards of two colliers, a bill providing for allotment of the lands of the New York Indians was passed under a resolution of the committee on rules for its immediate consideration.

Washington, April 22.—Senate—The pension appropriation bill, carrying an appropriation of over $137,000,000, and the emergency river and harbor appropriation bill, which carries $3,000,000, were passed Thursday by the senate, leaving only the general deficiency and the military academy bills of the entire list of supply measures still to be considered by the senate. The house bill increasing the size of homestead entries in Western Nebraska to 640 acres also received favorable consideration, while the river and harbor measure was under consideration. Mr. Gorman sharply criticised the failure to bring in a general river and harbor bill. Speeches were made on the pension bill by Messrs. McCumber and Scott, the latter declaring that he favored a service pension of $25 per month.

House—The house Thursday gave evidence of approaching adjournment by passing a large number of bills, among them being one to provide a temporary government for the Panama canal zone. A rule was adopted after the democrats had forced a roll call for the consideration at any time of the bill creating a commission to investigate the merchant marine of the United States, and the bill was then laid aside.

Washington, April 23.—Senate—The general deficiency appropriation bill occupied the major portion of the senate's time Friday, but before it was taken up Mr. Gallinger spoke at some length on the tariff policy of the republican party. While the reading of the deficiency bill was in progress Mr. Cullom delivered a speech on the Chinese exclusion rider. He expressed the opinion that there should be explicit legislation re-enacting existing exclusion laws, but opposed the remaining portion of the house provision and moved to strike it out. During the day the attention of the senate was brought to the amendment of the house to the bill for the government of the canal zone and some embarrassment was created by naming Mr. Gorman as democratic conferee on behalf of the senate in place of Mr. Morgan, who is the senior democratic member of the committee on inter-oceanic canals, with the result that both senators declined to serve.

House—The ship subsidy bill was considered in the house Friday. Consideration of the Alaskan delegate question was resumed after having been sidetracked several days.

STATE ITEMS OF INTEREST.

AN ANONYMOUS CARD.

The Political Integrity of Ex-Gov. W. O. Bradley Attacked.

Lexington, Ky., April 22.—Through the instrumentality of an anonymous card circulated Thursday, a bitter attack is made upon the political integrity and sincerity of former Gov. W. O. Bradley. Reference in it is made to the prosecution of John Ryan and John McKenna, the democratic election officials, who were convicted of election frauds in London, but whose cases were dismissed by the circuit court of appeals in Cincinnati.

The charge is made that Gov. Bradley was counsel for the defendants, and by securing their release he practically undid all the work of the republicans looking for fair elections. Bradley's friends are incensed, and say that being a lawyer he had a right to take any case worthy of his ability.

San Francisco, April 22.—When Samuel Davis died on April 5, in Lane hospital, there was no one at his bedside who dreamed that the septuagenarian had an estate of $1,500,000. He lived in one room at No. 408 California street. His most intimate friends were Julius Reis and Attorney J. F. Cowdrey. Davis left a will in his own handwriting, executed in February, 1898. It does not contain the name of a single devisee or dispose of any of his estate and simply names Reis as executor. The estate is worth $1,500,000 and the only relatives of the testator are Jane Davis, a sister; Mrs. Mary Stone, his niece, and Henry W. Davis, a nephew, all living in Churchville, Ky.

They were sweethearts and the girl accompanied another boy to a party Saturday night, which incensed Demaree. He went to her home Sunday, and after a few words shot her. The girl was holding her three-year-old sister in her lap and the bullet tore an eyebrow off the child before entering the body of the older one. The murderer escaped.

Cropper put out poison for them and killed two old ones and eleven young ones. The next day one of his neighbors shot two more. This is desimating the fox tribe pretty rapidly.

by local application, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucus lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Every man ought to know political beans when the bag of corruption is open.

Wm. Snelling and wife, and Wm. Slayback went to Aurora shopping last Saturday.

Nanly Ryle, of Gunpowder, was a guest of his sister, Mrs. Will Sebree, last Sunday.

Cad Sullivan and wife were guests of Woodie Sullivan and wife, last Saturday night and Sunday.

Untold wealth awaits the oculist who can help people who are blind to see their own interest.

Bob Popham, who went to Illinois about six weeks ago, has returned to his old love, and will crop with Albert Underhill.

A Mr. Jones, of Rising Sun, visited his aunt, Laura and cousin, Sadie Marshall, from Thursday of last week until Wednesday of this week.

James Botts has for sale a Poland China sow and pigs. We forget the number of pigs. She is not full blood —only about ½ Poland China, the other fourth is sow, of course.

Omar Porter went to the barn a few days since and found a their among his chickens. He returned to the house, got his gun and shot it. The thief proved to be Mr. Fox.

John Freeman and wife have completed Clyde Berkshire's barn. They are to build a small addition to his house and will build a barn for Bert Berkshire and one for his brother Edgar.

Jacob Craig has moved back from Cincinnati, and will work for Bert Gaines this summer. His wife spent two or three days this week visiting her grandmother and uncle, William Slayback.

Tommie Roberts and Commissary called on Mrs. Parsons, last Sunday, being among her first callers since her return home. Her daughter-in-law came home with her to remain a few weeks, and probably all summer.

A Mr. Brower and wife, of near Holton, Indiana, were guests of George Ranes, last Sunday. Mrs. Brower is a daughter of Henry Griffith, of Belleview. Mr. Brower is canvassing for a nursery, and has sold a large bill of fruit trees in this county.

Born, April 22d, to Flave Louden and wife, a son. Dr. Williamson named him and told us his name, but we have forgotten it. We saw his name hanging on the clothes line the other evening as we passed. We are not positive, but think the name is Ernst Eddie.

Last Saturday while in Burlington we met Mr. Wilson, one of the Rabbit Hash correspondents, and had a short but pleasant chat with him. We have a standing invitation to break bread with him, at which time the past and present will be fully and intelligently discussed.

G. B. Hoppins, of near Elizabethtown, Ohio, left in McVille for us a shiner and the fractional part thereof necessary to insure the Boone County Recorder to be a weekly visitor at his home for one year. It places him in touch with the news and the good and intelligent people of Boone county, of which he was once a resident. Who will be next to follow his example?

Last Thursday, while returning from Belleview, we held up Bernard Rogers and talked Elixir of life (Boone county Recorder) to him. He said: "I think your remedy is too high priced." We referred him to other remedies on the market which were good at the commencement of their manufacture, but owing to the low price they were soon adulterated so that they are almost worthless. He admitted the truth of what we said, and said: "I was jesting about the high price." He gave us an order for a year's treatment.

Mr. Cason received a letter from Carl the first of this week. We did not learn the date of the letter, but he was sidetracked at Hannibal, Mo. He arrived there in the evening and had to stay over night and a few hours the next morning before his train would pull out. When he awoke in the morning he looked out on 6 inches of snow that had fallen during the night. We have an idea the sight of the snow sent lonesome, homesick, chilly sensations chasing eachother up and down his spine. If he met with no other delay, he reached his intended destination Sunday or Sunday night.

BEAVER LICK.

There has been some newspaper discussion in reference to a debate between the Baptist and the Methodist Churches at Beaver Lick: Two weeks ago an article appeared in the Recorder from the Baptists, in which they withdraw from the debate, and charge our pastor, Bro. Mills, with trying to put a false statement before the public. We are very sorry, indeed, that our Baptist brethren lost their temper so badly and descended from the plain of christian brotherhood, and accuse Bro. Mills and T. J. Hughes of lying. Bro. Mills has been in our midst for nearly three years; we have never seen anything in the least amiss in his christian character. He has been a minister in the Kentucky Conference for nearly ten years and his character has never been called in question. It is a sad state of affairs when men—and christian men—can no longer sustain a position which they themselves have assumed, begin to vilify a man's character, especially a christian minister, whose character has ever been beyond reproach. We do not want to say any hard things about anyone, nor to assail anyons's character, but we do believe there ought to be given to the public a clear statement of the facts as they have existed. If we do err at any point we do not do so intentionally, and are ready to be set right by any person who may come to us in the right spirit.

From his pulpit, sometime in November last, Mr. Earl, then pastor of the Beaver Lick Baptist church, made some remarks in regard to John Wesley, the founder of Methodistism, accused the Methodists of being inconsistent in their practices, &c., and even went so far as to make an open challenge, backing it with $1,000 to be paid to anyone who would prove the Methodist discipline teaches open communion. After considerable trouble Bro. Mills, in company with T. J. Hughes, finally succeeded in obtaining an interview with Mr. Earl at the home of W. H. Griffith (Mr. Cleek was not present.) Bro. Mills asked him why he had said what he did, and he replied he wanted to let his people see that theirs was not the only close communion church, but if others practiced what their standards teach they would also be close communionists. Bro. Mills insisted again that he correct his statement publicly, which he refused to do. Thereupon Bro. Mills told him we were candidates for his $1,000. But, lo! he immediately took down the cash (Back down No. 1). Bro. Mills then challenged him to find a representative Baptist who would meet a representative Methodist in open debate on the question involved, as we felt we should prove to the community the falsity of his statements. Mr. Earl accepted the challenge, but stipulated that he could not attend to it until after his examination, which Bro. Mills and T. J. Hughes each understood would be in a few weeks and to this they agreed, but urged that it be attended to as soon as possible. After waiting a reasonable time and having heard nothing from Mr. Earl, Bro. Mills wrote him a very friendly letter, inquiring what he had done and when we might expect the debate, &c. To this Mr. Earl condescended no reply, nor did he reply to 2d, 3d, 4th or 5th, letters written him. Bro. Mills had made up his mind and the church along with him, that the Baptist had given up the fight. In fact, we have never thought from the start that they would meet the issue, because the premises are so foreign to the doctrine and practices of the Methodist church that we did not see how any man of common sense in church polity could take such a position. Thereupon Bro. Mills wrote him inviting him to be present April 10, at 11 a. m., at which time he would reply to his statements. Upon receipt of this letter Mr. Earl wrote that he would not be present, he did not care what Bro. Mills preached upon and that he didn't propose to do anything until after his school was out in May, &c. Although we were surprised at his claiming May to be the time agreed upon, we desired to show fair play, and at once announced through the Recorder that the debate would be later, giving Mr. Earl more time to find his man. It does now seem that the Babtist brethern could not meet the issue. The question was upon them. They had to dispose of the matter by some means. They took the method which appeared in the Recorder (Back down No. 2.)

This method for the disposal of this question we deem a very unfortunate one. We think the Baptist church ought to retract the statements she has made through her pastor, or meet the issue like fair, honest men, in debate as agreed upon. We as a church, are ready to meet the issue. In fact, we insist that this matter be not dropped and left in this manner. If it is left so anyone can easily form his opinion as to why it is.

By the act of the Official Board of the Methodist Church South, Beaver Lick, Ky., this May 23, 1904.

To the Members of the Beaver Lick Baptist Church:

My Dear Neighbors:—You have evidently misunderstood my letter of recent date which was published in the Recorder. When I said that Mr. Earl's memory had served him badly I did not mean any reflection upon his moral character. A consideration of what led to the statement will fully explain my meaning. When I called to see Mr. Earl about the mistakes he had made regarding Mr. Wesley and the position of the Methodist Church on the sacrament question, I was surprised to find that he did not even know of whom he was speaking, of John or Charles Wesley. Several times he said "Charles" Wesley. I interupted, "you mean John Wesley, don't you?" He replied, "Well, really I have the two men mixed. I am not very well informed on the subject." It was this mistake together with others exactly akin to it that led me to say, "his memory had served him badly." If there was any reflection at all, it was upon his bad memory in the whole matter together with its direct bearing upon his lack of information. Sincerely yours,

H. R. Mills.

On Saturday night the Knights of Pytheas had a big time along the same line. The Lawrenceburg team was present, and did the degree work in grand style. About 250 people partook of the supper. The brill iant success of the above two occasions is due, largely, to the interest the good ladies took in them.

Spiritual Counterfeiting

Putting the World's Brass in the Place of God's Gold.

Sermon by the "Highway and Byway" Preacher.

(Copyright, 1904, by J. M. Edson.)

Chicago, Sunday, May 1, 1904.

Text:—"So Shishak, king of Egypt, came up against Jerusalem, and took away the treasure of the house of Jehovah, and the treasure of the king's house; he took all away; he took away also the shields of gold which Solomon had made. And King Rehoboam made in their stead shields of brass, and committed them to the hands of the captains of the guard, that kept the doors of the king's house. And it was so, that, as oft as the king entered into the house of Jehovah, the guard came and bare them, and brought them back into the guard chamber."—II. Chron. 12:9-11.

GOLD shields possessed, but lost. Brass shields made and displayed. The base and common substituted for the precious and pure. The counterfeit taking the place of the genuine. The false appearing in the light of the true. This is an epitome of the life of King Rehoboam. Heir to the glory, riches, honor and power of Solomon, his father, he had great opportunities and possibilities before him. At the mature age of 41 he began his reign, but "he forsook the law of Jehovah, and all Israel with him," and within five years' time the judgment of God had fallen upon him by the hand of Shishak, king of Egypt, who came up against Jerusalem with an immense army, and captured all the fortified cities of Judah and looted the treasure city, Jerusalem. The magnificent temple which Solomon had builded and furnished with its golden vessels and gold-covered furniture was stripped of its treasure. The king's palace did not escape in the raid, and all that was precious was carried off. Among the things specially mentioned as being seized by Shishak and his army were the 300 shields which Solomon had made of beaten gold. Three pounds of pure metal had gone into each shield. These shields were in the hall of the house of Lebanon, and were carried by the guard which attended the king when he went from his palace in state procession to the temple to worship.

THE shield was symholic and suggestive of the Divine protection, and the gold from which they were made was indicative of that purity which God desired in His people. Mere display is never pleasing to God. He is not to be flattered and appeased by glitter and show. The flashing of those magnificent gold shields in the sunlight as the king passed in royal state to pay his vows unto his God was not pleasing and acceptable to God, unless every blazing shield proclaimed the protection God gave to His children who were pure and sincere in their worship. As every part of the temple service and worship was significant and symbolic, so we are warranted in believing that Solomon in making these shields of gold for the decoration of the walls of the beautiful house of Lebanon, and for carrying when he went to the temple, desired to convey the thought of purity and the Divine protection. And these were the shields which came into the possession of Rehoboam, and which we have reason to suppose he took delight in displaying and using because his vanity was gratified. Although he had forsaken the law of Jehovah and drawn all the people away with him in heathenish and idolatrous practices, nevertheless it is to be presumed that he continued his stately and magnificent processionals to the temple, flanked on either side by the splendidly caparisoned guard bearing the 300 glittering, golden shields. So it continued through five years. Five years of glorious display, but meaningless worship. Five years in which God patiently waited, and then the judgment fell and the king was stripped of all his treasure.

BUT although Rehoboam had lost the golden shields, he was not to be denied the vainglorious pleasure of his parade to the temple and return. The 300 shields must flash in the sunshine as of yore and dazzle the eyes of his people. The 300 shields in the hands of the guard must circle the temple door and must tell a waiting people that their king was within worshiping. The 300 shields must open to receive him as he reappeared and must move in stately magnificence back to the palace. And to gratify this passion for display, having lost the gold shields, he "made in their stead shields of brass." This may appear on the surface like a very innocent and proper procedure on the part of the king. It may seem that in so readily and quickly adapting himself to the circumstances of his misfortune he displayed skill and wisdom, but when we consider what these shields signified, and the circumstances which culminated in their confiscation by a heathen king, we shall begin to understand the real meaning of the making of the brass shields and be able to make deductions that will teach important lessons.

THERE are three periods or epochs in this experience of Rehoboam—the possession of the gold shields; the loss of the gold shields, and the making of the brass shields. And under these three divisions we wish to consider our topic: Spiritual Counterfeiting. Rehoboam was a counterfeiter, and people to-day are prone to commit the same error and sin. Losing God's gold, some in the temptation to substitute the world's brass. We put the base for the pure, the false for the true, the counterfeit for the genuine. The glitter and display of externalities are of more real concern to us than the spirit and purpose which should lie behind them. The Scribes and Pharisees of Jesus' day had learned the art of counterfeiting. They had lost God's gold, and unwilling to lose the glamour of the outward display of their religion they substituted the base metal of their own fusing. They made for themselves shields of brass that they might make the same show and appear to have lost nothing. They cared more for what the eyes of man saw than for what the all-seeing eye of God beheld. And so with Rehoboam, and as with the Scribes and Pharisees of Jesus' day, so with multitudes of people to-day. Glittering shields must he had and the world's brass is eagerly taken and used, when God's gold is not to be had because of sin. Rehoboam might better have gone without shields altogether after he lost the gold ones than to have substituted the brass ones of his own making. Why should he try to make it appear that he had lost nothing by Shishak's raid? Why should he prondly hoid his head aloft and flatter himself with the glitter and display which he had enjoyed before his sin and punishment? And why should people to-day, having forfeited the gold of God's favor and presence, seek to ignore the loss and substitute therefor the brass shields of their own making?

THE Possession.—Rehoboam possessed shields of pure gold. They constituted a rich treasure which had been committed to his hands. They typified God's protection and the gold from which they were made was symbolic of purity. Their possession was a sign of God's favor and blessing. Gold shields for Rehoboam when he came into the kingdom, and gold shields for you and me when we enter the kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ. Rich treasures committed to our hands. Gold shields typifying the protection of God and His purity. Ah, how we delight in their possession! We have them hung about the walls of the palace of our heart, and we delight to take them down and march with them to the temple of our God, where we may worship Him. Gold shields of protection promised to them that love and obey Him. Gold shields of purity, because through the blood of Jesus Christ we are made clean and His righteousness and purity are counted for us. Purity and protection—what more can God give? Within these two are comprehended all that God has to give to the trusting soul. Purity is God-likeness. And the Christian attains that condition or quality in two ways: By imputation and by acquirement. Through the cleansing and transforming power of Jesus' blood the sinner is made pure. That is, Jesus, having borne the punishment of our sin, is able to throw over us as a mantle His righteousness and purity. Apart from Jesus Christ there can he no purity in God's sight. If God sees in us Christ, He sees purity and holiness. If by faith the heart lays hold of Christ, hy that act of surrender and obedience we become possessed of His purity and righteousness, and God, in beholding us, sees not the marred and scarred life, but His precious Son, behind Whom the sinner takes refuge. Thus is His purity and righteousness imputed unto us.

THE Shield of Protection.—This is offensive and defensive. It implies the surrounding presence of God which shields from every danger, which nerves for every conflict, which sweetens every joy, which soothes every sorrow, which intensifies and deepens every relationship and responsibility of life. This is what God's protection means. It includes everything essential to the welfare and enjoyment and success of life. The child enjoys the protection of its father, and this protection comprises shelter, food, clothing, as protection against exposure, hunger and cold. It includes provision for the best welfare and needs, and development of the child as well as a shielding from the dangers that lurk on every hand to harm and destroy. God speaks of holding us in the hollow of His hand. And Jesus in His last prayer with His disciples reported to the Father that He had guarded them and not one of them had perished save the son of perdition, who never really belonged to Him. The protection of God is of a three-fold character: Offensive, defensive and intensive. Intensive as that protection enables us to grow from weak and immature babes into full-statured and strong saints ready for aggressive warfare in His name. Defensive in that He prevents the world, the flesh and the Devil, the iniquitous trinity, from crushing to eternal destruction. When talking about His righteous servant Job, God said to the Devil: You may test him to the point of taking his life, but upon his life you shall not even lay so much as your finger. Peter was in imminent peril of utter annihilation by the Devil, but Jesus prayed for him and set the bounds of the Devil's power over him. And it is so with God's children always. They are kept from utter defeat and destruction. His protection is defensive. And God's protection is intensive. It gives the sunshine and the rain, the rich soil and the tender care which are essential to the deeper rooting in Him and the pushing upward of the trunk and branch and the bearing of much fruit for Him. A larger growth, God says, and He deepens the soil; or our experience and enriches it and mellows it so that the roots can spread far and wide and obtain nourishment and drink deep of the hidden springs of refreshing. More fruit, God says, and He cuts away the dead and useless branches. He purges the branches of fruit-bearing possibilities. He sends the dew and gentle shower and the warm sunshine as they are needed. This is the intensive protection of God. And these are the gold shields of the Christian.

GOLD Shields Lost. — Rehoboam was the proud and happy possessor of 300 gold shields. But the day came when he lost them. He was stripped of his treasures. His house was left desolate. Sin had been eating like a corroding acid at the very roots and vitals of his and the nation's life, and within five years we behold Shishak and his hosts sweeping down upon Judah and Jerusalem and taking away those things which had been the glory and delight of the king. The gold shields typifying God's protection and purity were lost. And the Christian sometimes, yea, often, loses his golden shields of God's purity and protection. His heart is stripped hare of the splendid treasure. Sin, as in the case of Rehoboam, has crept up, and up, and up into the life until the enemy has come and stripped us of the purity of the presence of Christ and carried off into a far country the sense of the protection of God. The gold shields lost. Rehoboam forsook the law of his God, and the entering wedge, I am inclined to believe, was a mere perfunctory discharge of his religious obligations. He lost sight of God, he forgot the meaning of those shields of gold and gloried only in their external beauty and richness. He delighted in the magnificent procession to the temple only because the glitter and show of the golden shields went with him. And from the hollow pretense of formalism is only a step into positive and destructive sin. He forsook God in spirit, and he soon forsook the law of God as well.

THE Brass Shields.—When Rehoboam lost his shields of gold he made him shields of brass that he might continue his glittering displays and march in magnificence to the temple. He was willing to put the base instead of the pure. He would be satisfied with the false now that he had lost the true through sin. He would substitute his counterfeits for the genuine. And oh, how many, many Christians who are doing that very thing! Sinful indulgence has robbed them of that first flush of purity which came with Jesus into their hearts. Sin has come as a gigantic barrier between themselves and God. What shall they do? Admit their condition to the world and their fellow worshippers? Miss the glitter and display of outward show and discharge of religious obligations? What if God does see their desolate condition? What if He does know that the gold shields have been lost? It is of what men think and say, which is their concern. The genuine are gone, but there must he the glitter and display still. And so they make for themselves shields of brass. They use the base metal of their own endeavor to construct shields that will glitter and flash. They will have something to display when they go forth to worship. The counterfeit must take the place of the real. They must keep up appearances with men, even though the chamber of their heart is bare of the precious shields. Brass shields! Are you, oh, Christian, bearing about with you a brazen shield which flashes before the eyes of your fellow men and appears to them as the purity and protecting presence of God, but which you know is a base and wicked sham? Away with it! Better no shield than the counterfeit shield of brass!

BUT you need not be without the shields you have lost through sin Rehoboam never recovered his shields of precious gold. They went into Egypt never to return. He could never get them back. But, thanks he to the gracious and merciful Heavenly Father, He will replace the lost golden shields with others as precious and genuine as those we have lost. He will give us back the purifying presence of the Christ, He will shelter us about with His blessed three-fold protection. But not if we dare to resort to spiritual counterfeiting. Not if we put brass of pretense and deceit for the precious pure gold of His coinage. Away with the brass shields! Cast them aside as the peril of your very soul! Give up the glitter and display and sit alone in the desolate chamber of your heart! God will come to the penitent heart and forgive! He will come to the heart that has lost but that longs for the genuine instead of the counterfeit, and He will hang upon the palace walls of your heart the golden shields of His purity and protection. Perhaps you have been counterfeiting without being really conscious of the deceptive work. The heart is deceitful above all things and leads astray so often. Many a dear soul perhaps has fallen into the mistake of Rehoboam without being really conscious of it. Without the purpose of being a hypocrite or deceiver. But let me warn you to examine yourself and see whether they are the gold shields God has given you which you are bearing about, or whether they are the brass ones you have made and substituted for the genuine when you lost them through sin. You have felt you must keep up appearances with men and have made yourself shields of brass. Cast them aside, oh, precious soul! Get the genuine! You may be able to deceive the eyes of men. Polished brass does look like gold, but you cannot deceive God, and it is with Him you have to do, it is His holy presence into which you must come some day. Then quit Spiritual counterfeiting and posses yourself with the genuine gold of God's shinlage! "I counsel thee to buy of Me gold refined by fire, that thou mayest become rich." God has the gold; you can get it nowhere else. Then buy of Him.

THE DREAMER.

BY JOHN WICKLIFFE GRAY.

The wind was groaning incessantly. Now and then it grew to a piercing shriek, as it whirled anow under the eaves and in the corners of the big bay window. It laid an icy grasp on the frames and shook them angrily, enviously, because it could not enter and destroy the scene of comfort within.

She was a jewel of a landlady who would keep the fire burning for him as long, Herbert mused. "To keep the chill out," Mrs. Williams had told him once, and his words of thanks did not fully convey his gratitude for her mothering him.

He lighted his redolent briarwood pipe, pulled the big leathern chair before the fender, leaned back in its depths and the luxurious folds of his lounging robe. His feet perched on the fender, for the fifth time since the office closed that afternoon, he pulled out a dainty little blue linen envelope.

He read his own name and address two or three times before he took out the sheets within.

"Round and firm, and—just like Mildred," he mused.

He spread out the sheets on his knee and read:

"Dear Herbert—We are having a glorious time trying to forget the snow and ice up north. The weather is perfect, except for an occasional misty day, and outdoor amusements are the rule with everybody.

"I am glad to know that business will soon permit you to take a vacation. Are you thinking of coming south? I know you must be, though, for there's hardly anywhere else to go, now that everything up there is ice—and snow-bound.

"What do you think of joining our party here at Palm Beach? We will remain here another week, when we have planned an altogether original tour of either Jamaica or San Domingo on bicycles. All of us brought our wheels from home, and these suggested the trip. We have discarded the automobile idea because two or three machines would be required for the nine of us, two in the crowd are indifferent chauffeurs, and because we are not certain about the roads down there. Bicycles will go anywhere and we have determined to use them, see the country thoroughly and get a healthy tropical tan.

"Wire me if you can come. And if you can, be sure to bring your bicycle. It will be indispensable to a thoroughly good time.

"Mary begs to be remembered to you. As ever, Mildred Halcomb."

Then:

"P. S.—Don't forget the bicycle."

The warm firelight was having its effect after coming in from the cold outer air. He was drowsy. An involuntary yawn showed two fine rows of teeth as he placed the letter on the table.

He and Mildred had been chums since childhood. They always corresponded when one or the other was away. And in the past few months he had come to realize that he could not live without her. There had been no vows, but since as children they had roamed the parks together on their bright, new bicycles, they had been conscious of a mutual exhilaration and joyousness in one another's presence. Yes, bicycles, and the intimate companionship they bring, seemed strangely interwoven in their lives.

"We'll go wheeling, wheeling, wheeling
Down the distance-dwindling pike;
Hearts a-feeling, feeling, feeling,
All the joy that's in a bike."

He had heard the doggerel parody of a popular song somewhere, and the lines continued to repeat themselves in drowsy fashion:

"We'll go wheeling, wheeling, whee—"

He and Mildred were resting on the sod beneath a towering palm tree. Not far off several people of their party were laughing and talking together. He saw the surf come rolling in not 20 yards away, dwindling from mighty waves to a smooth, even flow as they reached the higher heach. Beside them were their bicycles. Cries of strange birds were heard, and a bright plumaged fellow flew over their heads and fluttered away inland.

How beautiful Mildred was! She was looking straight into his eyes. And in the big gray orbs he saw her soul shining there. It was shining for him, all for him! He knew it, and that was enough.

"You are mine," he was saying. "All these years I have loved you, and waited for you. And now we must part no more. Your life shall be my life, and mine shall be yours."

Out of the distance he heard the chime of bells. One—two—three—four—five—six—And still it rang.

The sleeper awoke with a start. The clock claimed his attention first, for it was striking 12. He rose quickly, and as he did so a telegraph blank on the table caught his eye.

"Better write it now and send the first thing in the morning," he thought.

Rapidly his pencil traced the words:

"Miss Mildred Halcomb, Hotel ——, Palm Beach, Fla.—Be there Thursday with bicycle. Herbert."

Pigskin Grafted on Woman.

By using the skin of a pig two months old the life of Mary Grant, a colored woman of Richmond, Va., has been saved. Some weeks ago the woman was fearfully burned about the body by the explosion of a lamp. Much of her skin was destroyed, and could not be replaced by nature. Efforts were made to get her relatives to supply the necessary cuticle for grafting, but they objected. The physician in charge then procured a young white pig, which was chloroformed, and enough of the necessary hide removed and grafted on the woman.

"I Think I Know."

Silverville, Ohio, May 2nd.—There is a Civil War veteran in this place who is very positive in his way and when he makes a statement everyone knows he means it and that it is true. His name is Mr. J. Stephens and he has written for publication the following letter:

"I have been a sufferer with Kidney Disease since the Civil War. Sometimes my back would hurt me so that I could not dress myself for weeks. I took a few boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills and have found great relief. They have done me a great deal of good.

"The general health is much better since using Dodd's Kidney Pills. I can recommend this remedy to be the best thing for the Kidneys that is on the market. I have taken a heap of medicine for my back and kidneys and I THINK I KNOW WHAT HELPS ME.

"I am 83 years old and was through the Civil War as a soldier."

Mr. Stephens KNOWS that Dodd's Kidney Pills helped him. They will cure any case of Backache.

The letters of Miss Merkley, whose picture is printed above, and Miss Claussen, prove beyond question that thousands of cases of inflammation of the ovaries and womb are annually cured by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Gradual loss of strength and nerve force told me something was radically wrong with me. I had severe shooting pains throught the pelvic organs, cramps and extreme irritation compelled me to seek medical advice. The doctor said that I had ovarian trouble and ulceration, and advised an operation. I strongly objected to this and decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I soon found that my judgment was correct, and that all the good things said about this medicine were true, and day by day I felt less pain and increased appetite. The ulceration soon healed, and the other complications disappeared and in eleven weeks I was once more strong and vigorous and perfectly well.

"My heartiest thanks are sent to you for the great good you have done me."—Sincerely yours, MISS MARGARET MERKLEY, 276 Third St., Milwaukee, Wis.

Miss Claussen Saved from a Surgical Operation.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—It seems to me that all the endorsements that I have read of the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound do not express one-half of the virtue the great medicine really possesses. I know that it saved my life and I want to give the credit where it belongs. I suffered with ovarian trouble for five years, had three operations and spent hundreds of dollars on doctors and medicines but this did not cure me after all.

"However, what doctors and medicines failed to do, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did. Twenty bottles restored me to perfect health and I feel sure that had I known of its value before, and let the doctors alone, I would have been spared all the pain and expense that fruitless operations cost me. ONE DOLLAR WHEAT.

Western Canada's Wheat Fields Produce It—Magnificent Yields—Free Grants of Land to Settlers.

The returns of the Interior Department show that the movement of American farmers northward to Canada is each month affecting larger areas of the United States. Time was, says the Winnipeg Free Press, when the Dakotas, Minnesota and Iowa furnished the Dominion with the main bulk of its American contingent. Last year, however, forty-four states and districts were represented in the official statement as to the former residence of Americans who had homesteads in Canada. The Dakotas still head the list, with 4,000 entries, Minnesota being a close second with 3,887, but with the exception of Alabama and Mississippi and Delaware every state in the Union supplied settlers who, in order to secure farms in the fertile prairie country of Canada, became citizens of, and took the oath of allegiance to, the Dominion. Last year no less than 11,841 Americans entered for homestead lands in Canada.

From the Gulf to the Boundary, and from ocean to ocean, the trek to the Dominion goes on. Not only the wheatgrowers of the central Mississippi valley, but the ranchers of Texas and New Mexico, and the cultivators of the comparatively virgin soil of Oklahoma, are pouring towards the productive vacant lands of the Canadian North-West. It is no tentative, half-hearted departure for an alien country that is manifested in this exodus; it has become almost a rush to secure possession of land which it is feared, by those imperfectly acquainted with the vast area of Canada's vacant lands, may all be acquired before they arrive. There is no element of speculation or experiment in the migration. The settlers have full information respecting the soil, wealth, the farming methods, the laws, taxation and system of government of the country to which they are moving, and they realize that the opportunities offered in Canada are in every respect better and greater than those they have enjoyed in the land they are leaving.

Canada can well afford to welcome cordially every American farmer coming to the Dominion. There is no question but that these immigrants make the most desirable settlers obtainable for the development of the prairie portion of the Dominion. Full information can be had from any authorized Canadian Government Agent whose address will be found elsewhere.

An Animal Mirage.

In a speech before the curtain in a western town a few nights ago Ezra Kendall announced that he was writing a book of information for "Rounders Who Go the Cocktail Route."

"Did you ever awaken in the morning," he asked his hearers, "and see an animal mirage? It is a dissolving caravan, with everything in it from four paws to no paws. The doctor says that my mirages are caused from eating animal crackers when a child—and then preserving them in alcohol as I grew up."—N. Y. Times.

No Doubt of It.

"Blank's wife thinks he's a crack shot on his hunting expeditions," said his friend, "but the truth is, he couldn't hit a duck if it would sit up and pose for him. You see, he's a schemer—he can afford to be, with that honest face of his. Out at camp he just loafs around all the time, and then on the way home he stops at the market, buys a bag of game, and presents it to his wife as a souvenir of the hunt."

"Hm!" mused the other; "he's what you'd call a dead game sport, isn't he?"—Detroit Free Press.

WOMEN'S WOES.

Much of women's daily woe is due to kidney trouble. Sick kidneys cause backache, languor, blind headaches, dizziness, insomnia and urinary troubles. To cure yourself you must cure the kidneys. Profit by the experience of others who have been cured.

Mrs. William W. Brown, professional nurse, of 16 Jane St., Paterson, N. J., says: "I have not only seen much suffering and many deaths from kidney trouble, but I have suffered myself. At one time I thought I could not live. My back ached, there were frequent headaches and dizzy spells, and the kidney secretions were disordered. Doan's Kidney Pills helped me from the first, and soon relieved me entirely of all the distressing and painful symptoms."

A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine which cured Mrs. Brown will be mailed on application to any part of the United States. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. For sale by all druggists, price 50 cents per box.

DINNER PAILS SMALLER.

Prices Up, Wages Down and Mills Closing, Business Bad and Getting Worse.

The republicans are doing their best to deceive the people as to the real conditions in the business world. They are pouring speeches into congress for use in the coming campaign the tenor of which is "Stand pat," "All is well," "Prosperity is still rampant," despite a few facts to the contrary. They would have the country believe that we are rapidly recovering from the temporary set-back to industry which occurred from October to January, when wage reductions became general and when nearly half the mills in many industries had to close.

Although there never was more important business for congress to attend to than at present, in order to bring relief from the tyrannical trusts which have put up prices and increased the cost of living to the highest point ever known, while reducing wages in all directions, yet it is the aim and policy of the republicans to adjourn congress just as soon as the appropriate bills can be rushed through. They will then begin to circulate their "stand-pat" and "prosperity" speeches, hoping to lull to sleep the great mass of voters and to keep them ignorant of the real facts as to the industrial depression which is still on and which cannot be vanquished, even by republican rhetoric. The republicans know that every day they remain in Washington will not only bring to light new scandals in their administration, but that it will add new evidences of the depression which is now running its course. They know that the democrats hesitate to picture conditions as bad as they really are and that, if congress adjourns at once, the democrats will practically be without frankable speeches to offset the frankable prosperity speeches of the republicans. This, they think, will give them another opportunity to fool the voters. This accounts for most of their unseemly haste to adjourn congress.

That the business world, after some slight recovery in February and early March, is again on the down grade is reasonably certain. The testimony of the trade papers is conclusive. Thus, that greatest of all trade journals, the Iron Age, in its issue of March 31, mentions numerous wage reductions and closed mills, some of which are:

"McKinley lodge, Amalgamated Association of Steel and Tin Plate Workers, Elwood Ind., all hot mill men and numbering 500, have decided to quit work rather than accept the 20 per cent. reduction in wages proposed by the American Sheet Steel and Tin Plate company and indorsed by the officers of the Amalgamated association."

"At New Castle, Pa., the men in the lodges of the Amalgamated association employed in the tin plate mills in the Greer & Shenango works of the American Sheet & Tin Plate company, have voted to accept the reduction of 20 per cent. in wages which went into effect on March 21. At South Sharon, Pa., the men in the lodge of the Amalgamated association have voted not to accept the reduction in wages."

"While the Amalgamated officials refuse to give out anything to-day as to whether the vote is in favor of or against the reduction in wages, we learn from reliable sources that the tin plate workers have voted against the reduction. If is not known at this time what action will be taken by the association in this event, but it is probable that a number of the union tin plate mills will be closed. At other plants where the men voted in favor of the reduction, as they did at the Greer & Shenango works of the American Sheet & Tin Plate company at New Castle, Pa., the plants will likely continue to operate at reduced wage scale. The whole situation from the Amalgamated association's standpoint is serious, and it will require the greatest diplomacy on the part of the officials of the organization to hold it together."

The Wool and Cotton Reporter of March 31 mentions a 5 to 10 per cent. reduction in wages at the Arlington mills, Lawrence, Mass., affecting 2,000 of the 4,000 operatives, which took effect on March 28. It also says that the woolen mills at Newcastle, Del., and the Chester (Pa.) Manufacturing company have closed down for indefinite periods. Also that the West Warren Cotton mill (Mass.) has shut down No. 3 mill and that the mills of the Lonsdale (R. I.) company will, in future, run only five days a week.

Turning to the New York Journal of Commerce of March 31 we learn that some of the weavers employed in the Harrower Knitting mill at Troy, N. Y., are on strike because of a cut of 2½ cents a dozen on the goods handled. Again, on April 1, it tells us that 30,000 textile operatives in Philadelphia are idle because of poor conditions in the cotton and woolen goods trade and that "in the next few weeks it is probable women and children out of employment will be increased materially." It says that "many mills are running on half time, and some have closed down entirely. Among the latter are the Dobson Cloth & Blanket mills at Manayunk, and the Winfield Manufacturing company."

Other trade and commercial organs contain similar news as to industry. Only two or three weeks ago 190,000 soft coal miners voted to accept a reduction in wages of over 5½ per cent. It has become known that the average reduction in wages of those of the 168,000 employes of the steel trust who were not discharged a few months ago was more nearly 30 than 10 per cent.

The window, flint glass and silk industries are perhaps in as bad condition as are those of steel, textile and coal mining. Railroad earnings are greatly decreased, notwithstanding that thousands of men were recently laid off and that hundreds of thousands have had their wages reduced. Only a few days ago President Mellen, of the New York, New Haven & Hatford railroad, announced that the trade depression in New England had become so severe that his road had found it necessary to curtail its passenger service.

These are some of the facts that indicate that republican tariff and trust legislation is rapidly reducing the size of the working man's dinner pail. Not only have money wages declined greatly recently, but the cost of living, according to Dun's tables of prices, is now 43 per cent. higher than when the Dingley tariff bill became law. If dinner pails are to be full this year, they must be very, very small. To get a feeling of fullness, the working men must wear shorter belts than usual and keep them buckled up tight.

BYRON W. HOLT.

TRUSTS ARE THEIR IDOLS.

When Combines Cannot Be Accommodated Republican Leaders Are Unhappy.

The Tawney tobacco bill has ripped open the republican party lines in the ways and means committee, to the great disgust of Chairman Payne. He told the republican members that he thought it was foolish for the committee to attempt to do any business at this session and useless to have any committee hearings. So because the republican members of the greatest committee of the house of representatives cannot all agree on one bill, the whole machinery is to stop. What a travesty on popular government. The representatives of the people in congress assembled are supposed to be engaged in legislating for the wants of their constituents, but because some of his associates do not agree with Mr. Payne he threatens to shut up shop, stand pat and go home. The pluck of the republican members has certainly greatly deteriorated or they would resist the do-nothing policy when there is so much legislation that is demanded. Mr. Tawney's bill, the matter that raised this rumpus, was to prevent tobacco manufacturers from putting prize coupons into packages of cigarettes. It is said to be in the interest of the tobacco trust, and because some of the republican members of the committee voted with the democrats and defeated it, led to this outburst of Chairman Payne. When a trust cannot be accommodated the republican leaders appear to think it is time to quit doing business. Possibly the voters may take a different view of it when they cast their ballots next fall.

——It might be a shrewd precautionary measure if President Roosevelt would enact a law pensioning ex-presidents. He may need the money after March 4.—Atlanta Constitution.

——Congress appears to have reversed the rule. It has a president on its hands.—Rochester Herald.

——All political observers agree that President Roosevelt is weakest in his own state. Perhaps it might be more accurate to say that the weakness there is that of President Roosevelt's party, rather than that of himself, personally. The trouble is with Gov. Odell whose domination of the party makes for increasing revolt. With anything like a sane democratic nomination, New York is to be reckoned a doubtful state at least.—Boston Herald.

ISSUES FOR DEMOCRATS.

The Party Must Oppose Trusts and Tariff, Says Former Vice President Stevenson.

Speaking at the Iroquois banquet, Chicago, April 13, Adlai E. Stevenson, former vice president, said:

"During the century that has passed since the proclamation of this political creed by Jefferson, the democratic party has kept the faith: The champion of equal and exact justice to all, it stands to-day, as in the past, the relentless foe of special privileges, of organized greed, of high protective and prohibitory tariffs, of all unlawful combination, monopolies and 'trusts,' of whatever tends to oppress or to enrich a class at the expense of the people. To the end that labor be lightly burdened and commerce encouraged, the democratic party stands now, as in the past, for tariff for revenue only, for the reduction to the minimum of the cost of all articles of necessary consumption.

"With the living issues—tariff reform, antagonism to trusts, rigid economy in public expenditure, honest methods in all departments of its public service, a return from hazardous experiments in administration to the safe pathway of the fathers—with these well to the forefront the hour of democratic opportunity has come. To the end that it may prove likewise the hour of democratic triumph let the spirit of conciliation, of unity, of harmony, be invoked upon all our counsels."

DRIFT OF PUBLIC OPINION.

——It is not conceivable that any democrats will vote for Roosevelt this fall, while it is certain that tens of thousands of republicans will vote against him, if given a clean, conservative democrat to vote for.—Atlanta Constitution.

——Utah is for Roosevelt. Whether this is because its citizens agree with the president on the question of race suicide, or because, knowing his vanity, the Mormons think to tickle it effectively, we don't know. It is enough that Utah is for Roosevelt.—Utica Observer.

——It is premature, no doubt, to call the United States senate the country's Hall of Shame, but a good beginning is making toward the justification of that title.—Providence Journal.

——The Massachusetts republicans are in favor of reciprocity, but not with Canada. They might have proved their adherence to the principle by declaring for a reciprocal arrangement with the king of Siam or some other potentate who has nothing that we want, and lacks the price of everything we have to sell.—St. Paul Globe.

PE-RU-NA, A VALUABLE PREPARATION," WRITES DR. KEMBALL.

Most of the Ailments Peculiar to the Female Sex are Due to Catarrh of the Pelvic Organs.

Rachael J. Kemball, M. D., 334 Virginia St., Buffalo, N. Y., is a graduate of the University of Buffalo, class 1884, and has been in the practice of medicine in that city since then. She writes as follows:

"My conviction, supported by experience, is that Peruna is a valuable preparation for all catarrhal affections. I have taken one bottle of Peruna myself and just feel fine. I shall continue to take it."—Rachael J. Kemball, M. D.

Peruna has cured thousands of cases of female weakness. As a rule, however, before Peruna is resorted to several other remedies have been tried in vain. A great many of the patients have taken local treatment, submitted themselves to surgical operations, and taken all sorts of doctor's stuff, without any result.

The reason of so many failures is the fact that diseases peculiar to the female sex are not commonly recognized as being caused by catarrh. These organs are lined by mucous membranes. Any mucous membrane is subject to catarrh.

Catarrh of one organ is exactly the same as catarrh of any other organ. What will cure catarrh of the head will also cure catarrh of the pelvic organs. Peruna cures these cases simply because it cures the catarrh.

Most of the women afflicted with pelvic diseases have no idea that their trouble is due to catarrh. The majority of the people think that catarrh is a disease confined to the head alone.

This is not true. Catarrh is liable to attack any organ of the body; throat, bronchial tubes, lungs, stomach, kidneys and especially the pelvic organs.

Many a woman has made this discovery after a long siege of useless treatment. She has made the discovery that her disease is catarrh, and that Peruna can be relied upon to cure catarrh wherever located.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

BOONE CO., RECORDER

Wednesday, - - May 4, 1904.

W. L. RIDDELL, - - Publisher.

JUDGE HODGE got himself nominated for Congress in this district, last Wednesday, by an assemblage of men, a name for which does not appear in the political category. The assemblage was not a convention of bolters as they had not entered, nor even proposed to enter, a regular convention, hence, Judge Hodge is not entitled to the distinction of a bolters' candidate He is simply a political "what is it?"

THE President was defeated in his effort to have the nomination of the negro Crum as Collector at Charleston confirmed at the session of Congress just ended. The Senate Democrats threatened to talk for two weeks on the nomination and the Republicans withdrew the appointment. The President issued a statement that the Republican Steering Committee had decided that if another appointment was made it would be taken up immediately at the opening of the next session and made the order of business until deposed of.

THE Indiana Farmer gives this timely advice. "Examine the roots of your wheat before plowing it up. If healthy they stool out so as to make you a fair crop after all. If satisfied the crop is a failure don't be discouraged but make preparations at once for a bigger corn crop than you have had for many years. Good sound corn brings a fair paying price always. Oats will pay well this year, but it is probably too late for that; but there are millet and sorgum that need not be sown until July, and there is no better forage crop than the latter, especially for diary cattle.

ANOTHER convention has been pulled off in this county, and about the usual number are "cussing" Judge Lassing for the successful manner in which he manipulated affairs for his favorite. But, when the next convention is coming on in Boone many of those who are now saying ugly things about the Judge will, in all probability, be his most energetic lieutenants, while many of those who were "on his side" in the recent campaign will be fighting his slate because it is his slate. Thus it has been for several years and it is likely to continue so for several more years. In politics your opinion of a man's efforts depends entirely as to whether he is "for or agin you." In each successive campaign you are liable to change mess-mates entirely. It has ever been and will ever be, thus.

SINCE Hon. W. W. Dickerson's vigorous and successful campaigns for the Democratic Congressional nomination in this district, no country candidate has been able to convince the entire country portion of the district that he was a candidate in good faith. Their announcements have been followed immediately by the report that they were making the race in the interest of some one of the candidates in the city of Covington or Newport, and in no instance has the candidate been able to overcome the charge, and in the last campaign Hon. Ernest C. Smith was badly handicapped by the charge—so much so that Pendleton and Grant instructed their delegates against him, while Trimble county, which joins Carroll county, gave him only a portion of her delegates. As long as the country people are willing to believe such a charge when made against any one of their number who has congressional aspirations just so long will it be useless for a country man to enter the race, and those rural Democrats in whose hats the congressional bee has been buzzing would better clip the bee's wings at once.

[News-Herald, Owenton.]

Many people insist for a higher ideal in politics, a few hope for it, but not many really expect it. The hopelessness of the situation however, does not prevent our minds from turning now and then from the case as it actually exists to an ideal condition as we would like to have it. For instance, wouldn't it be glorious if the candidate would imitate the Baptist preacher and only go forth when he "had a call?" In other words, let the office call him and not him the office. Something in the man should designate him as peculiarly fitted to perform the duties of a certain office. It is not sufficient for a man to say he needs it for the salary. Thousands of men are just as "ready." In our primary elections it is an interesting study to hear the various reasons assigned by the different candidates for offering themselves as a "public sacrifice" upon the altar of their country. Some are needy, some want to change their business, others desire to move to the county seat in order to get the advantages of "city ways" and still others because they have been "hewers of wood and drawers of water" for sixteen generations and thus feel a right to a seat in the political band wagon.

And again, wouldn't it be glorious if, after receiving "the call" a candidate could announce himself, stay at home, attend to his affairs and let every voter in the county go to the polls on election day and unmolested cast his vote for the man most suitable for the office? It might, indeed, be too severe a strain on the imagination, but we will venture to say that it would also be a glorious thing if, after the polls close, a candidate could go home and sleep peacefully, fully assured that his opponent was not "fixing" the returns while he slept. These may be idle dreams, but all will agree that it is a consumation devoutly to be hoped for. While we do not pretend to believe that conditions so perfect will ever exist, yet do we not owe it to ourselves as thoughtful, patriotic citizens to enforce a condition of affairs that would at least be safe and decent.

[Carrollton News.]

The people of Carroll county will never be able to get a district office until their home candidate can get the united strength of the county. It then takes a hard pull, and a pull altogether, to win.

We could go back and show where the failure of every Carroll county candidate could be traced to our own people. Now, this should not be. We should be for our own, against the world.

Gallatin, as usual, supports Carroll. This was magnanimous after the Commonwealth's Attorney's race. To her all honor is due. Carroll, Gallatin and Trimble should be as one.

Good old Boone—the home of Lassing—went solidly for Smith; no contention; no question. Good. Nothing else was expected. Her interests shall always be our interests.

Grant! What shall we say of her? We have supported and elected her candidates for Congress, supported and elected her candidates for Criminal Judge, and Commonwealth's Attorney. In the days of her distress we were ever with her. In the days of our want she has deserted us. We can not, and do not, attribute this to the good Democrats of Grant county, but to the devious ways of politics. Let us hope for better things hereafter.

Pendleton, well, well! In the words of Theodore Hallam, "we never did anything to Pendleton—why should she have been so cruel?"

The outcome of the county conventions show, beyond a doubt that E. C. Smith would have been the Democratic nominee if the country counties had supported him. On them alone rests the responsibility.

The Utah Experiment Station has from time to time made some very valuable experiments in feeding milk. The testimony on the valne of skim milk for hogs, as a food, is convincing. Comparisons are made with like experiments of the Wisconsin, Colorado and New Hampshire Experiment Stations. Hogs when fed milk and grain, require much less matter to make a pound of gain than hogs fed on milk alone. The average of the Utah experiments showed 100 pounds of milk to be equal to about 24 pounds of grain. In the Colorado experiments the hogs fed on milk and grain, gained more than twice as much per day and required but little more than half as much matter to each pound of grain as did the hogs fed on grain alone. Not only did the hogs fed on milk and grain, gain more rapidly, but they grew larger and were in much better condition. The experiments show conclusively the great value of skim milk when fed in combination with grain as contrasted with feeding grain alone.

The Continental Tobacco Company has bought in Woodford county to date over 3,000,000 pounds of tobacco at prices ranging from 6c to 11c. All this was bought before the recent advance. The Continental's largest transaction here was the purchase of Parrish Bros'. crop of 460,000 pounds at an average of 10c. There is no tobacco now in the hands of the farmers of Woodford county.—Clipper.

HON. JOSEPH L. RHINOCK,
Who will be the Sixth District's next Representative in the National Congress.

The Democratic Congressional Convention held in Newport, last Wednesday, was a very harmonious assemblage. The names of Rhinock and Smith were the only candidates put in nomination, and Rhinock received 80 to Smiths 33 votes and was declared the nominee, and made a nice speech accepting same. Following is the platform adopted by the convention:

"The Democrats of the Sixth Congressional District of Kentucky, in convention assembled, hereby reaffirm our allegiance to the time-honored principles of Democracy as being the safest and soundest doctrines of government for the peace, happiness and prosperity of a free people.

"We point with pride to the distinguished services of our two United States Senators, Blackburn, and McCreary, and indorse their efforts to uphold the honor and dignity of our common country, and to purify the Administration of postal affairs. They have been faithful to their party, their State and to their country's welfare.

"We indorse the wise, economic and Democratic administration of our young Governor, J. C. W. Beckham, of the various State officials and the Democratic Legislature, and congratulate the people of Kentucky that we are now out of debt and enjoying a degree of prosperity never before equaled.

"Within a few months the Democrats of Kentucky and of the nation will be called upon to express their choice for a leader in the coming presidential campaign and to enunciate the principles of the party. We bespeak for the State and national conventions harmonious action in all matters and a wise selection in the nominee. We feel assured that the country is aroused to the true condition of affairs in our National Government that the people will condemn Republican misrule and corruption in high places, and that they demand immediate and substantial relief from a high oppressive tariff and from the rule of trusts and combines. The Democratic party has always stood steadfast against these evils of government, and we believe that, with an able, fair and loyal Democrat as leader, the people will sweep from power the hosts of Republican misrule and corruption, and restore the management of the Government to the Democratic Party."

NINETY-ONE acres best Miami bottoms, with house of 8 rooms in Hardentown, 1½ miles from Lawrenceburg. This land has frequently produced 7,000 bus. of corn per year. With wheat and corn $1.00 and 50c per bu., respectively, is a bargain. Good title. Price, $50 per acre. WARREN TEBBS, Lawrenceburg, Ind.

A dairyman in the Jersey Bulletin says: "When we get down to real earnest dairying we corn growers will all have summer as well as winter silos; then when the pastures fail we can turn to the silo and find a most valuable and unvarying help. Corn is the best crop to put into the silo and it is also our most productive, as it is possible our least exhaustive on the land, and the cheapest to grow per unit of value. In siloing, the first cutting of a crop is generally somewhat immature; it is perfect only for a few days and too mature at the least. When put into the silo the crop can be caught when it is at its best. But until we reach this ideal—the silo stage of dairying—if we want our cows full fed the summer through we must depend on siloing crops to supplement pasture."

While very few of the growers are saying anything, they are all wondering why it was that the boom in tobacco came so soon after they had disposed of their crops. They should remember that the producers are not in the habit of being caught by prices when they take a turn skyward.

W. C. C. Rouse, of Limaburg neighborhood, says, when pear bloom falls in a short time after its appearance it is a sure sign of a good crop of pears, as it is the growth of the young pear that forces the bloom off. When the bloom hangs on it indicates that the pear is not growing.

G. T. Gaines went over to W. T. Smith's, one day last week, to spend the day. Some time during the day he was stroling about the yard, and concluded he would inspect the apple cellar which stands some distance from the house. No sooner had he entered the subterraneum department than the door closed behind him, and despite all his efforts he could not open it. For some time he called, and hammered on the door, in vain to make his distress known. Finally he found a barrel on which he took a seat to await developments, and about the time he had given up hope of being released from the prison, he heard some one passing the apple house, and to them he called and was soon given his freedom. Mr. Gaines says hereafter he will investigate the fastenings on the door before he enters strange apartments.

John William Gaines died at his home in the Plattsburg neighborhood last Friday night after an illness of many months duration. Atwood conducted the funeral exercises, after which the remains were placed in the vault to await final interment.

OPENING OF THE FAIR.

Decorations of St. Louis Down Town Streets Are Profuse and Beautiful.

DISTINGUISHED VISITORS PRESENT

The President of the United States Touched the Golden Button in the White House.

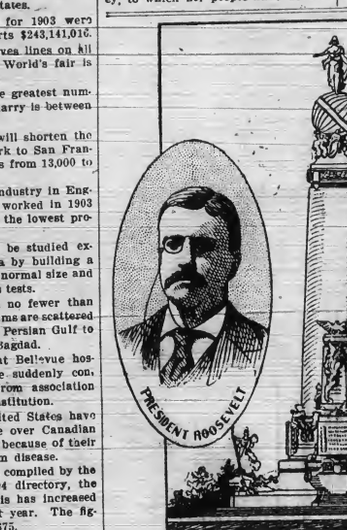
The Cascades Sent Down Their Floods, Thousands of Banners Unfurled and the Great Exposition Was Opened to the World.

St. Louis, April 30.—Saturday at noon the great exposition upon which the city has lavished millions of money, to which her people have devoted serious than resplendant. There was comparatively little of the glittering pageant that marked the dedication exercises a year ago, but the ceremonies preceding the formal opening were none the less interesting.

At 9 o'clock in the morning all the high dignitaries of the exposition met at the administration building and, headed by a band, marched to the plaza of St. Louis in the center of the exposition grounds. Representatives of foreign governments met at the hall of congresses at the same hour and timed their parade to the plaza so as to arrive at the same moment the exposition officials marched in from the opposite direction. At the same time representatives of state and territorial governments entered the plaza from a third avenue, having previously formed at the United States building.

KEYS TURNED OVER.

The Chorus Hymn of the West Was Sung and Addresses Made.



After the gathering had been formally called to order by President Francis, Rev. Frank W. Gunsaulus, of Chicago, delivered the invocation. At the conclusion of the prayer Director of Works Isaac S. Taylor delivered the keys of the buildings to President Francis, who in turn transferred the buildings to Frederick J. V. Skiff, the director of exhibits.

The chorus "Hymn of the West," the words by Edmund Clarence Stedman, and music by John Knowles Paine, was then sung, and addresses were made by the following gentlemen: Mayor Wells, of St. Louis; Hon. Thos. T. Carter, president of the national commission; Senator Henry S. Burnham, of New Hampshire, in behalf of the United States senate; Congressman James A. Tawney, of Minnesota, for the national house of representatives; Commissioner General Albino R. Nuncio, of Mexico, in behalf of the foreign commissioners; E. H. Harriman, of New York, for the exhibitors.

The last speech of the day was by Secretary of War William H. Taft, and at its conclusion the signal was given to President Roosevelt in the white house, the golden key was pressed, the cascades sent down their floods, the thousands of banners were unfurled and the great Louisiana purchase exposition was opened to the world.

Excursion trains came in by the score and Saturday has been officially declared a legal holiday by Mayor Wells.

Among the distinguished visitors to arrive Friday were Secretary of War William H. Taft, who represents the president, and Gen. A. R. Chaffee. They reached the city at 8 o'clock Friday night and were met by Gen. Bates, President Francis and other officials. The special congressional train bearing 400 persons, including the committee from the house of representatives appointed to attend the opening exercises, also arrived Friday night, as did governors from a number of states and several notable foreign visitors.

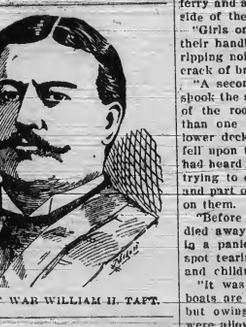
INDIANS AT THE FAIR.



Nearly Every Tribe Extant in America Will Be Represented.

Omaha, Neb., April 30.—A party of 362 Indians, including 20 prominent chiefs, which are to form an Indian congress at the World's fair at St. Louis, passed through the city Friday. Among the notables were Chiefs Red Cloud, Flat Iron, Red Shirt, Crow Dog, Lone Bear and Lost Horse. Chief Red Cloud, who is in his 96th year, together with his family, occupied a private car. He had nothing to say and paid little attention to his surroundings. He was dressed in a great display of Indian finery and wore glasses. The chiefs were lined up and photographed at the station. The party occupied a special train and was in charge of Col Cummins, whom Red Cloud once made chief of the Sioux. The Indians come from 57 tribes and represent nearly every tribe extant in America.

WAR VESSELS ARRIVE.

They Were Greeted By a Salute and a Chorus of Whistles.

During the day the United States gun boat Nashville and the torpedo boat destroyer Lawrence, which will represent the navy at the fair, arrived in St. Louis harbor. Although the boats arrived at an hour somewhat unexpected, which caused disarrangements of plans for a more elaborate demonstration by thousands who had planned to go down to the river to meet them, the greeting to the craft was nevertheless fitting. As the ships came into the harbor they were greeted by a chorus of whistles and shouts of welcome from crowds on excursion steamers. Salutes were fired in answer after which a delegation of World's fair officials, including members of the exposition reception committee, left their yachts and boarded the Nashville, Commander John Hubbard received the party and after coming ashore went to the city hall where he was formally received by Mayor Wells and city World's fair officials. Later Commander Hubbard was received by President Francis.

Hymn of the West

WORLD'S FAIR, ST. LOUIS, 1904.

The following hymn, written upon invitation of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition management, by Edmund Clarence Stedman, was sung by a chorus of five hundred voices at the opening ceremonies of the Exposition. The music for the hymn was written, also upon official invitation, by Professor John K. Paine, of Harvard University:

O Thou, whose glorious orbs on high
Engird the Earth with splendor round,
From out Thy secret place draw nigh
The courts and temples of this ground;
Eternal Light,
Fill with Thy might
These domes that in Thy purpose grew,
And lift a nation's heart anew!

Illumine Thou each pathway here,
To show the marvels God hath wrought
Since first Thy people's chief and seer
Looked up with that prophetic thought,
Bade Time unroll
The fateful scroll,
And empire unto Freedom gave
From cloudland height to tropic wave.

Poured through the gateways of the North
Thy mighty rivers join their tide,
And on the wings of morn sent forth
Their mists the far-off peaks divide.
By Thee unsealed,
The mountains yield
Ores that the wealth of Ophir shame,
And gems enwrought of seven-hued flame.

Lo, through what years the soil hath lain
At Thine own time to give increase—
The greater and the lesser grain,
The ripening bolt, the myriad fleece!
Thy creatures graze—
Appointed ways;
League after league across the land
The ceaseless herds obey Thy hand.

Thou, whose high archways shine most clear
Above the plenteous western plain,
Thine ancient tribes from round the sphere
To breathe its quickening air are fain,
And smiles the sun
To see made one
Their brood throughout Earth's greatest space,
Land of the new and lordlier race!

THE DECK COLLAPSED.

A Large Number of Sightseers on a Ferry Injured.

The Victims Were Precipitated 20 Feet to the Deck Below—They Were Viewing the Gunboat Nashville at St. Louis.

St. Louis, May 2.—The hurricane roof of the ferry steamer Alonzo C. Church collapsed early Sunday evening while the steamer was crowded with sightseers viewing the United States gunboat Nashville at anchor in the river harbor here, and about 20 people were injured, a number of them being reported in a critical condition.

The ferry steamer had been carrying crowds all day from the foot of Valentine street out into midstream past the Nashville and back again. No stop was made at the Nashville owing to the heavy flood current running. As the ferry boat was rounding the Nashville and starting back to dock the crowd on the upper deck rushed to the steamer's side and out upon the hurricane deck. The strain was too great and the roof collapsed, precipitating a large number of people 20 feet to the deck below, which was also crowded. Instantly a panic ensued. Women screamed, some from injury and some from fright, and several persons attempted to jump into the river thinking the boat was sinking. Cooler heads prevented this and efforts were at once begun to succor the injured. A distress signal was blown from the boat's whistle and tugs hurried alongside, but it was deemed best to proceed to land and not attempt to place the injured on the tugs. Ambulances had been hastily called and soon after the Alonzo C. Church had reached shore the injured were being conveyed to the city hospital and many neighboring homes.

Capt. McClelland said the boat was substantially built and that the accident had been due to the excessive weight on the roof. Passengers declare there were more than 1,000 persons on the steamer, and that the deck that collapsed should not have been used for passengers. The captain of the steamer says it was not overcrowded.

An eye-witness in describing the accident said: "When the steamer was about a hundred yards from the Nashville the action of several sailors near one of the guns attracted the attention of the persons on the roof of the ferry and a rush was made to the port side of the ferry.

"Girls on the ferry were waiving their handkerchiefs when there was a ripping noise, quickly followed by the crack of breaking timbers.

"A second later, with a crash that shook the steamer, the entire port side of the roof gave way, hurling more than one hundred passengers to the lower deck, 20 feet below, where they fell upon the struggling crowd which had heard the warning noise and were trying to escape. The broken railing and part of the collapsed deck fell upon them.

"Before the sound of the crash had died away, the 1,000 passengers were in a panic, those nearest the danger spot tearing the clothes from women and children in their frenzy.

"It was said the roof of the ferry boats are not equipped for passengers but owing to the crowds passengers were allowed on all parts of the boat.

"Vitches" Have No Monopoly.

The fun poked at Russian names is rather provincial. Many English proper names must seem quite as odd and mirth-provoking to the Russians as theirs do to us. No Russian would write "Cholmondeley" and pronounce it "Chumley," or "Beauchamp" and call it "Beechem." And what would a Russian of cultivation say to the Virginia family "Enroughty," who pronounce it "Darby?"—Mexican Herald.

SOAKED IN COFFEE

Until Too Stiff to Bend Over.

"When I drank coffee I often had sick headaches, nervousness and biliousness much of the time but about 2 years ago I went to visit a friend and got in the habit of drinking Postum.

"I have never touched coffee since and the result has been that I have been entirely cured of all my stomach and nervous trouble.

"My mother was just the same way, we all drink Postum now and have never had any coffee in the house for 2 years and we are all well.

"A neighbor of mine, a great coffee drinker, was troubled with pains in her side for years and was an invalid. She was not able to do her work and could not even mend clothes or do anything at all where she would have to bend forward. If she tried to do a little hard work she would get such pains that she would have to lie down for the rest of the day.

"I persuaded her at last to stop drinking coffee and try Postum Food Coffee and she did so and she has used Postum ever since; the result has been that she can now do her work, can sit for a whole day and mend and can sew on the machine and she never feels the least bit of pain in her side in fact she has got well and it shows coffee was the cause of the whole trouble.

"I could also tell you about several other neighbors who have been cured by quitting coffee and using Postum in its place." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

A FIVE DAYS BATTLE.

Japs Crossed the Yalu River and Forced the Russians Back.

The Japanese Losses Were About 700 Killed and Wounded and the Russians Lost Over 800 Men—A Stubborn Contest.

Tokio, May 2.—After five days of fighting, largely with artillery, the first Japanese army under Gen. Kuroki has forced a crossing of the Yalu river and Sunday with a gallant infantry charge covering a frontage of four miles it drove the Russians from Chui Tien Cheng and the heights on the right bank of the Iho or Aida river which enters the Yalu from the north almost opposite Wiju. The Japanese turned the left flank of the Russian position and in the battle of Sunday they swept away the new front interposed by the Russians to check their onward movement.

The present position of the Japanese is a dominating one, and they may force the abandonment of the defenses erected by the Russians at Antung and other points lower down the river. Gen. Kuroki began the movement on Tuesday by ordering a detachment of the imperial guards division to seize the island of Kurito, which is in the Yalu above Wiju and a detachment of the second division to seize the island of Kinteito, which is situated below Wiju.

The detachment of the imperial guards met with resistance but it succeeded in clearing the enemy out and occupied Kurito island. The Russians abandoned the island of Kintcito when attacked by the detachment of the second division. The detachment of the second division which took the island of Kinteito sustained no losses.

During the movements on the islands the Russians opened fire on the Japanese with eight 9½ centimetre guns from a hill behind Chiu Tien Cheng and two Hotchkiss guns which were mounted on the bank of the river at Kosan.

The Russians seemed to have established their headquarters. One battery of Japanese artillery which had taken a position on a hill to the east of Wiju fired three volleys at Kosan and at noon of Tuesday the Russian batteries behind Chiu Tien Cheng shelled Wiju, wounding one Japanese soldier with shrapnel. On Wednesday the Russians resumed the bombardment of Wiju, firing at intervals throughout the day. The Japanese artillery did not respond to this fire.

The Russians resumed their bombardment on Thursday, but it was generally ineffective. Subsequently Gen. Kuroki ordered two companies of the imperial guards to cross the Yalu and make a reconnaissance along the left bank of the Iho for the purpose of discovering the view of the Russian fortifications along the right bank of the river. The Japanese force advanced toward Kosan, and then dispatched a small detachment to the village where a party of Russians was encountered. In the engagement which followed five Russians were killed.

The twelfth division of the Japanese army was chosen to make the first crossing of the Yalu. It began preparations on Friday by driving the Russians from their position on the bank of the river opposite Sui Kochin. This division constructed a pontoon bridge over the river and at 3 o'clock Saturday morning it began crossing. The entire division passed over the river during the day and by 6 o'clock Saturday evening it was in the position assigned to it for the battle of Sunday.

A bridge across the main stream of the Yalu just above Wiju was completed at 8 o'clock Saturday night and the second Japanese division and the imperial guards immediately began crossing. They advanced and occupied the hills back of Kosan, facing the Russian position on the right bank of the river. All Saturday night regiment after regiment of Japanese soldiers poured across the bridge. Gen. Kuroki at daylight Sunday centered all his artillery on the Russian position between Chiu Tien Cheng and Yoshoko. To this fire the Russians made reply with all their batteries. At 7 o'clock in the morning the Russian battery at Yoshoko was silenced and half an hour later Gen. Kuroki ordered his line, stretching for four miles, to attack. The Japanese infantry on the word of command charged across the Iho, wading that stream breast deep and began storming the heights at 8:15. At 9 o'clock they had swept the Russian line back across the plateau.

The Japanese losses on the Yalu Sunday were about 700 killed and wounded. The Russians lost over 800 men. The Japanese captured 28 quick-firing guns, 20 officers and many men. The Russians made two stands.

The Japanese Sunday captured Chiu Tien Cheng, ten miles north of Antung, which is regarded as the key to Russian position on the right bank of the Yalu river. It is understood that the Russians will retreat to Feng Hua Cheng, which is on the road to Liao Yang.

FIFTY-EIGHTH CONGRESS.

Regular Session.

Washington, April 28.—Senate—The attention of the senate was devoted Wednesday to consideration of reports of conference committees, set speeches, passage of bills to which there is little or no objection, and an executive session. The session began at 10 o'clock in the morning and continued until 5 in the evening. Final conference reports on the sundry civil, general deficiency, post office and the military academy appropriation bills were agreed to, practically without opposition. A resolution authorizing the continuation during the recess of the inquiry into the right of Mr. Smoot to his seat in the senate was favorably considered during the day.

House—In the presence of crowded galleries and of almost a full membership, Messrs. Littlefield (Me.) and Williams (Miss.) made speeches intended for the coming presidential campaign. The two speakers were wildly applauded by their respective sides, but there was an absence of personalities such as characterized the clash between Messrs. Daizell and Cockran. Indeed, the best of humor prevailed.

Washington, April 29.—Senate—With brief announcement and a sharp rap of his well worked gavel, President Pro Tem Frye adjourned the senate sine die, at 2 p. m. Thursday, the hour fixed by resolution of the two houses of congress. The occurrence was devoid of unusual incident and the final close of the session was but slightly different from the end of an ordinary day's sitting. The senate began its day's work at 10:30 a. m., but the greater part of the time was devoted to a political debate, participated in on the republican side by Messrs. Allison and Aldrich, and on the democratic side by Messrs. Gorman and Culberson. The discussion was based on a statement by Mr. Allison of the appropriations for the session, comparing the figures for this year and for the administration of President Roosevelt with those of other years and other administrations. The president and his cabinet were among the most interested listeners to the criticism and defense of their chief.

House—The closing of the second session of the house of the 58th congress was made notable by the demonstration which was evoked by a resolution offered by Mr. Williams, the minority leader, testifying to the courtesy and impartial manner in which Speaker Cannon has presided over the house. The resolution was not of the prefunctory kind, but was expressive of the kindly feeling which men in the house of all parties entertained toward him. In a graceful speech the speaker declared his appreciation of the resolution. Many conference reports were agreed to on bills which had been in dispute between the two houses. The only debate of any importance was on the bill providing for the restoration to the naval academy of three cadets who had been dismissed for hazing, the house voting overwhelmingly against it. The members, after the speaker announced final adjournment, joined in singing patriotic airs, and slowly filed out of the hall after shaking hands with the speaker.

JAPANESE INGENUITY.

They Made a Demonstration Off Port Arthur April 27.

Port Arthur, May 2.—Details of the demonstration off Port Arthur on April 27 discloses the desperate ingenuity of the Japanese. The squadron set afloat a string connecting raft carrying burning materials. About 1:40 o'clock in the morning, when five miles off shore, the combustibles were fired, the wind and waves bringing the burning floats toward the harbor. Under cover of this screen of fire eight Japanese torpedo boats towing a launch filled with mines sliped around to a spot near where the Petropiaviovsk was sunk, but they were detected by Russian searchlights, when the batteries opened fire and drove them off, but not before the mines had been sown.

The Japanese, knowing that the Russians would intercept wireless messages, tried a neat trick to deceive and worry Viceroy Alexieff. For several nights in succession they sent by wireless telegraphy orders to prepare for a landing, to send in fire ships, to attack with submarine boats, etc.

Beauty, Size and Sentiment of the World's Fair

It Is Larger and More Beautiful Than Any Other Exposition Ever Given.

When President Roosevelt touched the electric key at the white house in Washington, which set in motion the machinery of the world's fair at St. Louis, he not only opened to the world the greatest display of the arts of peace the world has ever known, but he gave to the nation a fit climax of a century of growth of that vast territory west of the Mississippi—the Louisiana territory.

When, at the swing of a lever, 90,000 gallons of water per minute was released to flow over the beautiful cascades in front of Festival hall, there was completed the most beautiful exposition picture the world has ever seen, a picture that will live in the mind of every visitor to the great fair. Chicago had its Court of Honor, its stately palaces set against a background of the blue waters of Lake Michigan; Buffalo had its wonderful illumination, its dusk of evening brightening into day again as the countless thousands of twinkling lights brought back the effect of the rising sun, but these pictures, beautiful as they were, have been surpassed by the glory of the cascades, the foaming waterway, rushing downward from the colonnades surrounding Festival hall, to the great lagoons, with their myriad colors, intersecting the wonderfully beautiful grounds in all directions."

Just as this newest of expositions

surpasses all others in beauty, so, also, does it in size. One thousand two hundred and forty acres, literally covered with the treasures, the productions, the curiosities of the world, tell the story of the fair in a sentence. No one visitor will ever see it all, though he spent the full time the exposition is open at the task. An exposition which cost $50,000,000 before its gates were opened to the public; an exposition to which 52 nations from all corners of the world have sent their best for the people of the world to look upon; an exposition two miles long and one mile wide; an exposition that is twice the size of any other to which the public were invited; an exposition that is larger than the three previous large American expositions combined. Such is the exposition with which St. Louis celebrates the centennial of the Louisiana purchase.

But the men responsible for the exposition do not wish that it should attract by its size alone. They have builded for beauty, as well as for bigness, and who can stand in the center of the great panorama without being aroused to a pitch of enthusiasm by the beauty that surrounds him? It is the beauty, rather than the size of the fair, that first appeals to him.

Another thing that appeals to the American, the man who loves his country, is the sentiment the exposition stands for. It is a sentiment that is fully exemplified in the imposing heroic statues of the states that stand on either side of Festival hall. These statues typify, not the states of the east, but those of the west, the states carved out of the Louisiana territory, the states that stretch from the gulf to the Canadian border, from the Mississippi to Puget sound; states that have within a century of time been builded out of the wilderness. It is for these the exposition has been builded; it is these again that have made the exposition possible. The lesson they teach is written deep in the history of the nation.

To attempt an itemized description of the wonders this exposition has brought to the doors of the people of the central west is impossible in the space of a newspaper article. Twelve thousand car loads of exhibits found space within the great palaces. It is almost impossible to realize what such a statement means until one has gone from building to building, from exhibit to exhibit. Nor is the space in the building wasted. Every niche is filled with something of interest, and the demand was for almost double the amount at the disposal of the authorities. Some idea of this may be had from the statement that the breakfast food manufacturers alone asked for more space than would have filled all the Agricultural building, covering 19 acres of ground, and with four miles of aisles.

To pick even the more interesting exhibits is almost an impossibility, though among them might be mentioned the largest pipe organ ever manufactured, with 145 stops and pipes five feet in diameter and 32 feet long; four acres covered with agricultural machinery; the largest natatorium on earth; ten acres of roses; ten acres of live game; the largest engines ever built; a floral clock covering a quarter of an acre of ground, and of which the minute hand weighs over a ton. Such items but give the general idea of the entire fair. It is all big, it is all beautiful, it is all interesting.

The exposition management is not boasting of the "Pike." They wish the visiting public to remember the fair by what might be termed its legitimate portion, its wealth of educational exhibits, and yet, who would say that the shows along the "Pike" are not educational in their way. On it are villages of every sort, and amusement features of every description. Five million square feet of entertainment. Among outdoor shows, that are not to be confounded with those of the "Pike," may be mentioned the reproduction of the City of Jerusalem and the forty acres of Filipinos.

Among the most interesting of the many features of the fair are the various government exhibits housed in the Government building which is 800 feet long by 250 feet wide. Every function of the government is exemplified in this building. Among these exhibits is a complete government mint for the manufacture of coin, but at St. Louis Uncle Sam is making instead of coin gold souvenir medals, but the process is the same as if the product was legal tender. While Uncle Sam has a monopoly on the money-making business he guards the privilege jealously and does not risk the precious dies, which put their imprints upon dimes, dollars and eagles, to leave their place of keeping.

Besides a modern coining press, from which drops a bright medal at every click, is a screw press built in 1795 and used at that time to stamp small coins. There is also a hammer 120 years old and a small pair of balances formerly used in the Philadelphia mint. Comparing these with the improvements made in the last 100 years reveals how much easier it is now for Uncle Sam to replenish his treasury than it was when he was young in the business.

All of the machines used in the plant are driven by independent direct current motors, the power for which is transformed from 550 volts to 220. The gas for all heating operations, such as annealing, melting, etc., is manufactured by an independent plant situated outside the building, and so arranged that it can be controlled in the exhibit. These machines were designed and built especially for this purpose.

First of the series of devices composing the plant is a furnace which supplies a heat of 2,000 degrees F. for the melting of metal alloys. Here the metal is cast into ingots and washed in a dilute solution of sulphuric acid to free the surface from copper oxide. The ingots are then run through the rolling mill and reduced in thickness from one-half an inch to eighty-five thousandths of an inch. This mill is operated by a 50 horse power motor.

After rolling the strips are heated in the annealing furnace to soften them for the cutter.

Processes used in the making of paper money are altogether different, for it is here that the printer and not the machinist and founder serves a usefulness. In another section of the big Government building at the world's fair there is a fully-equipped bank note printing plant.

In the Palace of Transportation may be seen a full size section of the great tunnel which runs from Jersey City under the Hudson river, under New York city at Thirty-fourth street, and under the East river to Long Island, a distance of eight miles. It illustrates the tremendous work and millions of dollars expended upon one of the greatest engineering works of modern times. A great laboratory for testing the power, efficiency and economy of locomotives is also in this building. Locomotives will be under full steam and full speed in this laboratory, the greatest show of locomotives ever conceived and costing a quarter of a million dollars.

For nearly four years I suffered from ovarian troubles. The doctor insisted on an operation as the only way to get well. I, however, strongly objected to an operation. My husband felt disheartened as well as I, for home with a sick woman is a disconsolate place at best. A friendly druggist advised him to get a bottle of Wine of Cardui for me to try, and he did so. I began to improve in a few days and my recovery was very rapid. Within eighteen weeks I was another being.

Mrs. Martha Rains and son, Henry, visited over in Hoosier in the vicinity of Salem church, from Saturday until Monday. We wouldn't wonder if there isn't some attraction for Henry over there other than a sister.

Wm. Botts, of Bellevue, will start to Tennessee, Tuesday or Wednesday. He says, "I like Mississippi well, but it is too far to move at one time." We are sorry to lose William and his wife, as they are worthy people and good and kind neighbors.

Will Arnold, of Bellevue, sold his tobacco a few weeks since to Berkshire, of Petersburg, at 8¼c straight, but did not deliver until week before last. He had 10,120 lbs., which brought $859 20. This tobacco was raised by Mr. Arnold and a hired man. His tenant, Lum Stephans, had 7,160 lbs. and sold to Brady at 8 cents straight; amount, $572,80, which makes 17,280 lbs. raised on Mr. Arnold's farm; bringing $1,432.

The new boat, Daisy, made a business trip to Rising Sun, Saturday. She was given the right name for she certainly is a Daisy, and sits, and glides through the water as gracefully as a duck. We were given an invitation, and went down with the crowd and know whereof we speak. When every thing is properly adjusted she will almost fly. She will be inspected, Monday. Frank Collier is the engineer and Mort Christy, pilot.

The first of April I began keeping count of the number of pieces of mail carried out and delivered, and number of letters mailed by Commissary. There are 11 families, patrons of the route. Number of letters mailed during the month, 18; number of letters delivered, 54; number of papers and packages delivered, 136. We have an idea the patrons mailed thrible the number of letters themselves, and got from the office one-third as many letters and papers, which would bring the total number of letters mailed to 54, and number received, to 72, and papers and packages to 181; so it is plain to be seen that the people of the Commissary are intelligent and up-to-date.

The Pie Social at Bellevue was not very largely attended, owing to the busy season of the year and to its being held too early in the evening. As the Daisy landed at Bellevue from her trip to Rising Sun, a few minutes before the opening of the social, we decided to attend. The Mayor, of Commissary, Charlie Deck and Andy Cook were the luckiest men present. The pies were numbered and the number and name of the lady who baked it were placed with the pie, and a ticket sold with a corresponding number. No lady was permitted to know the number of her pie. The tickets were all sold before any pies were given out. The Mayor purchased ticket 1, and while looking for the name the most beautiful lady in Bellevue, Miss Aggie Cook, came forward with the sweetest smile on her face and said. "That is my pie." We don't know the number of Charley's and Andy's tickets; but Charley's corresponding number was on the pie of Miss Gracie Clore, another of Bellevue's beautiful young ladies. Andy's corresponding number was on the pie of a beautiful country lady, Miss Lou West. The Mayor and Charley were more than pleased as evidenced by their smiles, and the satisfied expression of their faces. Andy was a little disappointed because he hoped to draw the pie of his best girl, but the pie was not a disappointment, judging by the size of the horseshoes he turned in it. They looked to be about No. 6. Everything passed off nicely and quietly.

PANAMA CANAL ZONE.

Regulations For Its Government Agreed On.

No Troops Will Be Dispatched to the Isthmus But Marines Now There Will Be Retained For Preservation of Peace.

Washington, May 6.—An important conference was held at the white house Thursday night at which the general policy to be followed by the administration in the framing of rules and regulations for the Panama canal zone was agreed on. This policy provides for instructions to be issued by the president through the secretary of war to the canal commission for the administration of affairs in the strip, following very much the practice in vogue in the Philippines, where the acts of the commission are subject to the approval of the secretary of war.

There were present at the conference Secretary Taft, Attorney General Knox and Chairman Walker, and the other members of the canal commission now in the city. The members of the commission explained to the president the condition of affairs on the isthmus as they found them and made recommendations for the government of the strip. They will embody these recommendations in a written communication to the president, who will submit them to Secretary Taft and Attorney General Knox for such modifications and suggestions as they deem best. After the rules and regulations have been finally drafted and approved by the president, the latter will issue them to the commission through the secretary of war. Congress left the matter of the government of the strip entirely with the president and the instructions for its government will cover every detail necessary for a complete and thorough administration of affairs there, including the establishment of courts and police regulations. It is expected that the instructions will follow the same general lines as those laid down for the Philippines, but with such modifications as the varying conditions may require. Meantime Gen. Davis, who is to sail from New York next Tuesday, will be "administrator" of the canal strip until the new instructions are put into effect.

It was stated Thursday night that there was no intention on the part of the administration to dispatch troops to the isthmus. The marines now there will be retained for the preservation of peace and order and will be replaced from time to time as the health of the men makes this advisable.

THE SOCIALIST CONVENTION.

Eugene V. Debs Nominated as Candidate For President.

Chicago, May 6.—Eugene V. Debs was Thursday afternoon nominated as the socialist candidate for president of the United States. Benjamin Hanford, of New York city, was nominated for vice president. Neither of the candidates had any opposition for the nomination.

After condemning the policies of the democratic and republican parties the platform, as adopted, appeals to the American people for support on the ground that the socialist party is the only political organization standing for the principles by which the liberty of the individual may become a fact as the only political organization that is democratic, and that has for its purpose the conversion of all society to the principles of true democracy. Capitalism and private ownership of the means of employment, it is declared, "grounds society in an economic slavery which renders intellectual and political tyranny inevitable." The fidelity of the socialist party is pledged, in the platform, to the principles of international socialism as embodied in the united thought and action of socialists of all nations.

The question of inserting a plank in the platform favoring labor unions, which caused several heated discussions during the convention, was adopted by a vote of 107 to 53.

TOBACCO EXHIBIT.

One of the Most Complete Displays Ever Made at a World's Fair.

St. Louis, May 7.—Every day finds a magnitudinous growth in the installation of exhibits at the World's fair. Every building teems with workmen and all are working to the extent of their energies.

Secretary W. R. Stevens, Thursday night made the following statement: "Instead of having places for more salaried employes, the various departments of the exposition are now every day rapidly reducing the number heretofore employed, and very soon hundreds will have been laid off. A false notion that there are still vacancies to be filled in the service of the exposition is bringing many young folks from a distance, to be disappointed in their hope of enjoying the exposition on a free pass and a comfortable salary."

A special feature in the palace of agriculture is the extensive exhibit of tobacco. The space occupied by the different tobacco exhibits from various states will total about 30,000 square feet. Various colors of the weed, from the black perique of Louisiana to the bright leaf grown in North Carolina, are used in the general decoration scheme. The entire exhibit is said to be one of the most complete displays of American tobacco ever shown at any exposition.

Another interesting feature of the agriculture building is the corn exhibit. Obelisks, formed from ears of corn are located in various parts of this section, standing 30 feet above the floor.

The collection of paintings by native Filipino artists in the art gallery of the administration building of the Philippine government exposition is attracting more than ordinary interest. Most of the canvasses are excellent specimens of art. One of the canvasses represents the scene of the death of Gen. Lawton, and, according to soldiers who were present at the time, is a remarkably exact representation.

THE LIBERTY BELL.

It Will Be Started For the St. Louis Fair in June.

Philadelphia, May 6.—The Liberty bell will be taken to St. Louis. This was decided upon Thursday when both branches of the city council passed a resolution appointing a special committee of 24 to escort the revolutionary relic and appropriating $15,000 to defray the expenses. The start will be made in June, but before the old bell is placed in the Pennsylvania building at the World's fair it is the present intention to have it pass through the principal cities of the states and territories into which the Louisiana purchase territory was divided.

These are Montana, North and South Dakota, Wyoming, Colorado, Nebraska, Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, Arkansas, Kansas, Indian territory, Oklahoma and Louisiana. The bell will remain at St. Louis until the close of the exposition, and will be under a constant guard of Philadelphia policemen. President Francis, of the exposition, will be asked to name a special day to be known as "Liberty Bell day."

A TRIPLE HANGING.

Henry Judge, Joe Delp and John Evans Executed at Winchester, Tenn.

Winchester, Tenn., May 6.—Henry Judge, Joe Delp and John Evans were hanged here Thursday for the murder of Simon Butcher and his wife last August. The trap was sprung at 5:43 a. m. The three men exhibited the same indifference and stolidity that marked their conduct during the trials and walked without assistance onto the scaffold. Each of them made a short speech, in which they expressed their preparedness and said their only regret was that they were leaving their wives and children. None of them made any reference to the deed for which they paid the penalty.

No news has come from the country, but it is feared there has been a heavy loss to the rice farmers.

THE CHINESE PAVILION

The Building at the World's Fair Dedicated.

High Officials Present; the Costumes of the Dignitaries Were Gorgeous, Consisting of Silks of the Finest Textures.

St. Louis, May 7.—One of the most notable functions that has taken place at the World's fair, informal in nature but gorgeous in appointments, was the dedication and opening of the Chinese pavilion Friday. Not only was it elaborately attractive, but it was marked with significant expressions from the high Chinese officials present, tending to indicate that the relations between China and the United States have been drawn into a closer alliance through the Louisiana purchase exposition. Officials of the World's fair responded with the assurances that the United States deeply appreciated the hearty participation in the exposition by the Chinese government and toasts were drunk to the health of the president of the United States and the emperor of China and the empress dowager.

China was one of the first nations to respond to the invitation of the United States government and from the beginning the work of preparation had been rushed with all speed to completion. Many Chinese dignitaries were present at the dedication, but interest centered especially on Prince Pu Lun and Sir Cheng Tung Liang Cheng. Prince Pu Lun wore the first peacock feather ever worn by any Chinese visitor in St. Louis or in the United States since the days of Li Hung Cheng. The costumes worn by the different dignitaries were gorgeous, consisting of silks of the finest textures and many colors with elaborate trimmings.

The great gongs imported from the royal palace in Pekin were rung for the first time at the opening of the ceremonies, and as the invited guests assembled in the interior of the main reception salon, quaint Oriental lights illuminated the interior revealing the choicest treasures of carved and inlaid furniture, specimens of Oriental pottery and rare fabrics. At one side of the salon, opposite the entrance, is a raised reception dais above which rests a small ivory idol. The pillars at both sides are fantastically shaped into huge gilded dragons and from the ceiling hangs lamps beautifully wrought from glass.

The main pavilion is a one-story structure and is patterned after one of Prince Pu Lun's summer palaces. Just outside the entrance is a goldfish pond, a duplicate of the one at Prince Pu Lun's summer home.

Friday night Prince Pu Lun tendered a reception at the Washington hotel to which more than 1,400 guests were invited.

Prince Pu Lun and his party will remain in St. Louis and visit the exposition until May 14, when they will leave for Chicago and Indianapolis, after which the prince and Sir Chentung Liang Cheng will make a tour of the country.

GOVERNMENT FOOD EXHIBITS.

Complaints Made That Whole Sections Have Been Stolen.

St. Louis, May 7.—Complaints that whole sections of government food exhibits in the agricultural building at the World's fair have been stolen, caused Superintendent Bruner Friday to issue a warning that the food should not be eaten, as a majority of the things so appetizingly prepared have been poisoned for preservation. At the Chinese building ivory inlaid in a wall was removed and the depression filled with plaster of paris.

Monterey, Ala., May 7.—Two lynchings have occurred in Alabama within the past 30 days, one for alleged criminal assault and the other for an alleged assassination of a white man by a Negro. Acting Gov. Cunningham Friday took decided action to have these lynchings investigated and the guilty punished. He addressed letters to Circuit Judges W. S. Anderson and T. Scott Sayre, calling their attention to the lynchings and urging them to hold special terms of their respective courts to bring lynchers to justice. He gave an interview in which he said: "I believe that prompt trial by court of all rapists and assassins and an earnest and prompt effort to bring lynchers to justice will not only make the law a terror to criminals but also to those who disregard by the substituting of lynching for courts of justice."

FIVE MINERS ENTOMBED.

It Is Feared They Lost Their Lives in a Burning Mine.

Shamokin, Pa., May 7.—Five miners are entombed and believed to be dead as a result of a fierce fire which is burning in the Locust Gap colliery of the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron Co. The fire started Thursday night in the slope, and Wm. Massaskie, Michael Shannon and John and Michael Boglan were cut off from escape before they were warned. Rescuing parties were at once set to work, and up to Friday night their efforts to bring out the men have been unsuccessful. John Debo, notwithstanding the protests of others, went far into the workings and has not been heard from since, and it is believed that he has succumbed to smoke and gas. The fire is burning fiercely. Some of the officials think the men will be found smothered to death, while some of the miners are of the opinion that they are safe in old abandoned workings.

SMOKELESS POWDER CLOTH.

It May Be Used in the Navy For Ammunition Bags.

Washington, May 7.—Exhaustive experiments are to be made at the Indian Head proving grounds with smokeless powder cloth, a highly inflammable cellulose material, with a view to its use in the navy for ammunition bags. Although bags of such material must be handled with greater care than those made of muslin, it is believed the smokeless powder cloth is more desirable because it will burn rapidly and thoroughly, thus averting the danger of any smoldering particles being left in the chamber of the gun. There has not been any trouble with the muslin bags on this score except that particles of the tape with which the bags are tied have been found in the bore after the gun was discharged. Silk bags are used in the English navy, but the muslin bags are preferable to silk because they do not tear or wrinkle easily.

CUBAN NAVAL STATIONS.

Rodgers and Ackley Have Been Selected as the Commandants.

Washington, May 7.—Announcement is made at the navy department of the selection of Lieut. Commander C. C. Rodgers to be commandant of the naval station at Guantanamo, Cuba, and to command the Amphatrite station ship at that place and of Capt. Seth M. It is intended that the scheme of improvement prepared for Olongapo by a board of which Rr. Adm. Taylor, chief of the bureau of navigation, was president, shall be followed with certain modifications.

THE IOWA'S GUNS.

Remarkable Records Were Made at Target Practice.

Washington, May 7.—Remarkable records were made by the Iowa's guns in the annual record target practice just completed at Pensacola. The Iowa's 12-inch guns made 42 shots and 34 hits. The best 12-inch gun made 11 shots and 11 hits. The hits per gun per minute for the 12-inch guns were 0.75. This equals the record made by the British ship Ocean in 1892 when she broke the world's record, and in the case of the Iowa the record is all the more creditable because her guns are of an old type. The Iowa's 8-inch guns made 120 hits per gun per minute, the best gun making eight hits out of nine shots.

For Disorder of the Mouth.

Offensive breath may be caused by decaying teeth, or an unwholesome state of the mouth itself, the lungs or the stomach. For any disorder of the mouth there are few things better than a wash composed of glycerin, one part; boric acid, one part, and water, 3S parts. The water should be boiling and the wash be used when cold. A few drops of tincture of myrrh will form a pleasant addition. When the stomach is at fault a benzoic acid lozenger taken now and then may prove useful.—Chicago Daily News.

"So did your tongue, sir," she responded frigidly.—Chicago Tribune.

One of the queerest and most isolated churches in England is a little gray edifice in the valley of Westdale Head, Cumberland. It is over 400 years old, and has only two windows and eight pews. The pulpit is lighted by a slit of glass in the roof. A little bell hangs loosely in the open belfry, and on stormy nights drearily mingles its tones with the wind and thunder.—N. Y. Tribune.

IN AN OLD TRUNK.

Baby Finds a Bottle of Carbolic Acid and Drinks It.

While the mother was unpacking an old trunk a little 18 months old baby got hold of a bottle of carbolic acid while playing on the floor and his stomach was so badly burned it was feared he would not live for he could not eat ordinary foods. The mother says in telling of the case:

"It was all two doctors could do to save him as it burnt his throat and stomach so bad that for two months after he took the poison nothing would lay on his stomach. Finally I took him into the country and tried new milk and that was no better for him. His Grandma finally suggested Grape-Nuts, and I am thankful I adopted the food for he commenced to get better right away and would not eat anything else. He commenced to get healthy and his cheeks like red rosee and now he is entirely well.

"I took him to Matamoras on a visit and every place we went to stay to eat he called for Grape-Nuts and I would have to explain how he came to call for it as it was his main food.

"The names of the physicians who attended the baby are Dr. Eddy of this town and Dr. Geo. Gale of Newport, O., and anyone can write to me or to them and learn what Grape-Nuts food will do for children and grown-ups too." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

MANY LIVES WENT OUT

Two Sealing Schooners Given Up as Lost.

The American Schooner Arthur McArdle Was Wrecked on Egg Island, Bahamas—Captain and Seven Men Escaped.

Vancouver, B. C., May 9.—The sealing schooners Triumph and Umbrina, of this port, have been given up as lost at sea with all hands. Capt. Hann, of the sealing schooner Jessie, which has just arrived from a cruise along the coast from California to Queen Charlotte islands, picked up south of the Columbia river broken sealing boats and canoes, part of a schooner's rail, davit and other tackle belonging to the schooner Umbrina. When last spoken the sealer was headed for the west coast of Vancouver island to land her men, who was very ill. Since then she has not been heard of and is long over due. The Umbrina was owned by Capt. Peppet, now in Eastern Canada. She carried a half white, half Indian crew, 23 all told, and was one of the largest of the fleet in Queen Charlotte sound. Capt. Mann found a schooner's boom with fall attached and from indications known to him he believes it belonged to the Triumph, also long overdue, and not amongst the fleet now bound for the Siberian coast. The Triumph carried a white crew of 19 and was the oldest and largest of the Victoria sealers. The owners have abandoned hope.

New York, May 9.—The Ward line steamer Santiago, which arrived Sunday from Tampico, Havana and Nassau, brought Capt. Sheppard and seven seamen of the American schooner Arthur McArdle, which was wrecked on Egg island, Bahamas, on April 23, and became a total loss. The crew stripped the wreck of all the available property possible and took to their boats, went to a village on a nearby island, whence they obtained passage on a small sailing craft for Nassau. The McArdle was bound from Philadelphia for Havana, with a cargo of petroleum.

Other passengers on board the Santiago were Sir Gilbert Carter, governor of the Bahamas; Lady Carter and daughter. They are in transit to London.

THE TWO CONVENTIONS.

Demand For Press Seats Far Exceeds the Capacity.

Washington, May 9.—The demand for press seats at the two national convention far exceeds the capacity of the space set apart for the newspapers of the country. At the Chicago convention there will be 290 seats in the press reservation, and already there have been received 1,200 applications. The demand for seats at the St. Louis convention also is far in excess of the capacity of the space reserved for the press. At the recent meeting here of the sub-committee having charge of the seating at Chicago, it was decided that notice should be given that applications not received prior to May 20 shall be given no consideration.

MISSING MILLIONAIRE.

The Body of E. L. Wentz Was Discovered Near Kelly View.

Wentz, who so mysteriously disappeared October 14, 1903, was found Sunday afternoon near Kelly View, within a mile of the place where he was last seen alive. The body, which was lying on the ground in plain view, was in a state of preservation sufficient for identification.

Young Wentz was the son of a Philadelphia millionaire, and was in charge of his father's mines in Wise county. Since his disappearance more than $50,000 has been offered for any news of him.

FOUR MASKED ROBBERS.

They Held Up a Railway Station and Robbed the Passengers.

Baxter Springs, Kan., May 9.—Four masked men entered the Frisco railway station here Sunday and, with drawn revolvers, demanded that the passengers get in line. They then stole the contents of the depot safe, robbed the conductor of a passing train and escaped on a handcar.

DIVORCE QUESTION.

The Inter-Church Conference Sends Out An Appeal.

Philadelphia, May 9.—The inter-church conference on marriage and divorce, a body representing officially 14 leading denominations, has issued through its secretary, Rev. William H. Roberts, D.D., an appeal to the public, calling attention to several aspects of the divorce question.

The paper is the beginning of a national campaign of education on the subject to be followed by efforts to secure the enactment of laws in the state legislatures, and ultimately it is thought of an amendment to the constitution of the United States.

Already action has been taken by the conference looking toward the prevention of the remarriage, by ministers of other communions, of divorce and whom clergymen of their own faith have refused to marry.

This movement is the first occasion of any sort on which the representatives of great denominations have officially come together. The members of the conference include:

Protestant Episcopal church in the United States; Presbyterian church, Methodist Episcopal church, Methodist Episcopal church south, Reformed Church of America, Reformed church in the United States, United Presbyterian church, Evangelical Lutheran church, the Baptist church south, the Congregational churches, the Universalist churches, the Unitarian churches, the Reformed Presbyterian church, the Cumberland church, the Alliance of the Reformed churches holding the Presbyterian service.

JAPANESE PEOPLE.

Surprising Economy Is Observed in Every Place.

Richmond, Ind., May 9.—Guerney Binford, a Friends missionary in Japan, writing to relatives here, says about the war situation in Japan:

A remarkable thing is the surprising economy which is observed in every place. People are not spending more money than is absolutely necessary. Related families who have occupied two houses are closing one and two families enter one house. No one is putting out money for repairs, etc. To such an extent is economy practiced that it seems to threaten productive industry and bring trouble upon laboring classes. I tell them that it is folish to do so, for while the general claim is made that this is done for economy to save money for the war, in reality it is extravagance, because by the stopping of the regular channels of industry the necessary funds and provisions can not be produced. It is said that at present the emperor is eating only one dish, a rice bowl, and that his food is the same as that given to the soldiers. He is doing this, they say, to set an example of economy and show sympathy with the people.

ATTEMPTED ROBBERY.

Mrs. Senator Foraker and Her Niece Were the Victims.

Los Angeles, Cal., May 9.—A thief skulking on the porches of Hotel Lillie, after a set of diamonds worn by Senator Foraker's niece, Miss Ethel Marie Foraker, of Cincinnati, fell into the hands of a plucky hotel man with a gun.

Hotel Lillie fronts on Central park and many wealthy people spend the season there, rich picking for thieves. Among the guests are Mrs. James Foraker and Miss Foraker. As the two ladies were dressing for dinner they were alarmed to see a strange man skulking about the upper veranda in front of their room and trying to peer in. They were terribly frightened and snatching up their jewels rushed from the room.

In the hall they met Guy K. Woodward, the proprietor. Woodward used to be a deputy sheriff, and is a man of personal daring. Taking a gun Woodward ran upstairs and caught the man trying to escape from the porch through the hall.

It is believed that tuberculosis as well as many other diseases are spread chiefly in the dust of the streets.

THE JAPANESE LAND.

They Are Marching on Port Arthur in Three Columns.

It Is Asserted By the Russians That the Fortress Is Impregnable and Provisioned to Stand a Siege For Over a Year.

St. Petersburg, May 6.—With Vice Adm. Togo hovering in the immediate vicinity of Port Arthur and transports loaded with troops lying at Pitsewo, northeast of that stronghold, Russia has braced herself for impending conflicts with the foe in which she will again play a defensive role, this time, it is hoped, with better success and, therefore, with less sacrifice of life than in the engagements on the Yalu.

St. Petersburg, May 7.—Japanese troops swarming across the narrow neck of the Liao Tung peninsula, the railroad and telegraph communications cut and the Russian Gibraltar isolated and left to its own resources—all this the Russians seem to accept with great stoicism. These events have been anticipated since the outbreak of the war and the authorities, in a sense, appear to be relieved now that the blow has fallen. They assert that the fortress is impregnable and amply provisioned to stand a siege for a year, and that it can hold out until the time comes to relieve it.

According to official information the landing of troops from 60 transports began simultaneously at Pitsewo and Cape Terminal on the morning of May 5. Complete details of the landing are lacking owing to the interruption of communication. No resistance was made, the few Cossacks who observed the movement retiring when the warships shelled the shore preparatory to disembarkation. Ten thousand men were put ashore Thursday and the disembarkation was proceeding Friday at the time that communication ceased. It is believed that there are over 40,000 now on land preparing for a forward movement.

Two Japanese regiments were hurried westward Friday morning to cut the railroad and telegraph communication. One of them fired on a train conveying the wounded from Port Arthur.

While the landing was proceeding Thursday the enemy's ships, consisting of five battleships and four cruisers made a demonstration off Port Arthur to prevent the possible egress of Russian torpedo boats. A number of Japanese boats were also observed off Miado island, in Pigeon bay.

It was because he was convinced that Port Arthur was about to be cut off that Viceroy Alexieff, accompanied by his staff and Grand Duke Boris, left hastily. On Thursday several train loads of sick and wounded and other ineffectives were dispatched northward.

It is reported here that the Japanese ships bombarded Port Arthur early on the morning of May 6, and succeeded at last in closing the entrance, but no official confirmation of the latter statement can be obtained.

The strength of the garrison at Port Arthur is not revealed by the authorities, who will only say that it is adequate for defensive purposes. It is not believed the force there exceeds 10,000 soldiers. The fleet must now take a secondary position and the sailors will be used to man the shore guns if necessary.

Vice Adm. Skrydloff and Vice Adm. Bezobrazoff can not now reach Port Arthur and will probably go to Vladivostok to join the cruised squadron there. Rear Adm. Wiltsoeft, who was left in charge of the fleet by Viceroy Alexieff will direct operations at Port Arthur.

Despite the greater number of Japanese, the general staff believes that their formidable fortifications still leave the defensive superiority with the Russians, whose staying qualities, it is confident, will insure their holding out as long as necessary. While the outer line of fortifications extends to Kin Chow, unquestionably no determined effort will be made to hold them nor is it expected that a desperate attempt to retain Dalny will be made.

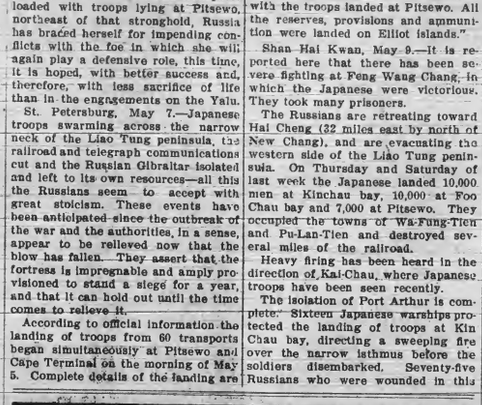
The main defense will be of Port Arthur, where since the harbor has been occupied by the Russians, steady work has progressed to complete the system of defense, which is just as effective on the land as on the seaside.

Paris, May 7.—The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Echo de Paris sends the following under date of May 6: "The general staff believes that the Japanese landed at Pitsewo number not less than 40,000 and says that the bulk of Gen. Kuroki's army was Friday morning about nine and a half miles from Feng Wang Cheng. The army was advancing in three columns, the third column following the coast, probably in order to communicate with the troops landed at Pitsewo. All the reserves, provisions and ammunition were landed on Elliot islands."

Shan Hai Kwan, May 9.—It is reported here that there has been severe fighting at Feng Wang Chang, in which the Japanese were victorious. They took many prisoners.

The Russians are retreating toward Hai Cheng (32 miles east by north of New Chang), and are evacuating the western side of the Liao Tung peninsula. On Thursday and Saturday of last week the Japanese landed 10,000 men at Kinchau bay, 10,000 at Foo Chau bay and 7,000 at Pitsewo. They occupied the towns of Wa-Fung-Tien and Pu-Lan-Tien and destroyed several miles of the railroad.

Heavy firing has been heard in the direction of Kai-Chau, where Japanese troops have been seen recently.



The isolation of Port Arthur is complete. Sixteen Japanese warships protected the landing of troops at Kin Chau bay, directing a sweeping fire over the narrow isthmus before the soldiers disembarked. Seventy-five Russians who were wounded in this fighting were brought on the last train to arrive there. Food is scarce at Mukden, the troops are eating bean cakes.

The Russians are preparing to evacuate New Chwang and that city is in a turmoil of hurried flight.

Che Foo, May 9.—A private telegram has been received here confirming the report that the Japanese have occupied Feng Wang Chang. The date of the occupation is given as May 6. Everything was quiet here Sunday.

Tokio, May 9.—A detachment of the Japanese army operating on the Liao-Tung peninsula, dispersed small bands of Russian troops on Friday and captured Pu-Lan-Tien, a railroad station. The Japanese destroyed the railway and telegraph, thus severing the Russian communication with Port Arthur.

St. Petersburg, May 9.—Two official dispatches calculated to increase the depression existing among all circles in Russia were given out Sunday night. From the point of view of the progress of the campaign the most important is that regarding the capture by the Japanese without opposition of Feng Wang Cheng, on May 6. The second gives details concerning the killed, wounded and missing among the troops under the command of Lieut. Gen. Sassalitch as the result of the fighting on the Yalu, the number of which totals 2,397 officers and men.

STATE NEWS HAPPENINGS.

REPUBLICAN CONVENTION.

Threatened Contests Between Bradley and Yerkes Did Not Take Place.

Louisville, Ky., May 4.—The threatened contest between former Gov. W. O. Bradley and Commissioner of Internal Revenue John W. Yerkes, for the control of the republican state and central committee failed to materialize at the convention Tuesday. In two speeches which won him ovations Mr. Bradley declared for harmony. He moved that the rules and order of business be suspended before the report of the committee on credentials should be announced and that Mr. Yerkes, the temporary chairman, be unanimously declared permanent chairman. The same motion applied to the retention of Samuel J. Roberts and Young E. Allison as permanent secretaries. The motion was carried unanimously after it had been held up for some time by former Congressman John D. White, who was finally howled down. The platform adopted endorses the administration of President Roosevelt, "which, following as it has done the policy of William McKinley, has continued with unabated force the marvelous prosperity with which our country has been blessed since the return of the republican party to power in 1897."

Richard P. Ernest, of Covington, and George M. Long, of Leitchfield, were nominated by acclamation to serve with Mr. Bradley, leaving one more delegate at large to be selected.

The practice of previous state conventions having been to name a Negro delegate at large, the remaining position on the delegation was contested for by several of that race. Dr. E. E. Underwood, colored, of Frankfort, was nominated.

Louisville, Ky., May 5.—The new republican state central committee organized Wednesday morning by electing R. P. Ernst, of Covington, chairman; George W. Welsh, of Danville, vice chairman, and Clint McClarty, of Louisville, treasurer. The election of a secretary was postponed. C. M. Bernett retired as chairman, after eight years' service.

Later Curt Jett was tried and given a death sentence for the murder of young Cockrell. The appeal from the death sentence will be argued Friday. This move means that Jett is willing to take the life sentence and risk getting a new trial for the murder of Cockrell.

JAMES HOWARD.

Until June 10 Given Him to File Petition For Rehearing.

Frankfort, Ky., May 7.—The court of appeals Friday granted James Howard additional time till June 10 to file his petition for rehearing, his life sentence for killing Gov. Goebel having been affirmed. W. M. Smith, the attorney for Howard, asked 30 days additional time and stated that the reason for asking the time was to give Howard a chance to raise enough money to carry his case to the United States supreme court. Chief Justice Burnam stated that if the court gave 30 days asked for it would carry the case over to the next term, which was contrary to all former rulings of the court in criminal cases.

The members of the company have been buying on the breaks for a long time, and are said to be especially interested in foreign business. The price paid for the warehouse is about $30,000. It has been under lease to the trust, which would probably have purchased it, but the new company stole a march.

COL. M. A. COCHRAN DEAD.

Former Commandant at Fort Thomas Passed Away in Florida.

Newport, Ky., May 5.—Disappointment because illness prevented his serving at the front, and grief over the death of his wife and son within a year, are believed to have been partly responsible for the death of Col. Melville Augustus Cochran, former commandant at Fort Thomas, Ky., who passed away at Jacksonville, Fla., Tuesday night, according to a dispatch. Had he lived a few months longer friends are confident he would have been honored by promotion to the rank of brigadier general, as allowed under a bill passed by the late congress.

BOONE CO., RECORDER

Wednesday, - - May 11, 1904.

W. L. RIDDELL, - - Publisher.

AT the Republican primary election held in Washington, D. C., one day last week, for the selection of delegates to national convention, of the 7,000 votes cast 6,500 were negroes.

THE Japs are having everything their own way, and their continued success has pretty thoroughly demoralized the Russian forces. So far the Russian campaign has been to the Czar a most humiliating failure on both land and water.

THE Kentucky delegates to the Republican National Convention elected John W. Yerkes National Committeeman from Kentucky. Mr. Yerkes preferring not to wait until the convention meets in Chicago. R. P. Ernst was elected chairman of the State Central Committee to succeed C. M. Barnett, who served so long in that capacity.

A gentleman of an observing turn of mind remarked Friday: "The Continental is eliminating the warehousemen. The farmers should next eliminate the Continental. Iowa has downed the trusts, Kansas is doing it. Kentucky, and especially the white burley district, are next in order. The trusts are teaching the people how to manage their affairs. Organize and eliminate."—Bracken Chronicle.

WHILE viewing the great exposition now in progress in St. Louis, it should be known of all visitors, that W. J. Rouse, editor of the Monroe City Democrat, originated the idea of a Louisiana Purchase Exposition, although an effort has been made to award credit therefor, to the Missouri Historical Society. Mr. Rouse descended from the Boone county Kentucky, stock, and is a nephew of James M., Henry and Noah Barlow, of Gunpowder.

THE Republican State Convention held at Louisville, last week, was very much of a love-feast in the oratorical feature, and Gov. Bradley and Mr. Yerkes, who had not spoken one to the other for several years hugged and cut many other antics denoting a reconciliation, but Mr. Yerkes had control of the convention, and when it came to making up the party machine for the next four years, Gov. Bradley and his friends were left out in the cold entirely. Such is politics.

THE New York Sun, Republican suggests the following as the Republican national platform:

Whereas, Theodore Roosevelt is the National Republican party, be it resolved that we emphatically indorse and affirm Theodore Roosevelt.

"We believe implicitly and unqualifiedly in Theodore Roosevelt.'

"Whatever Theodore Roosevelt thinks, says, does and wants is right.'

AT a meeting of the Democratic State Executive Committee held in Lexington, last Friday, Chairman Allie W. Young, who has come to the conclusion that he is about the whole push in the Democratic party, declared that in the temporary organization of the State convention to be held in June, he will not recognize certain delegates even if their credentials are the genuine article. Mr. Young's term as the head of the Democratic party in Kentucky has extended beyond his usefulness. Such autocratic acts as that which he is threatening will ruin any party.

THE legislative act creating the county of Beckham out of parts of the counties of Carter, Elliott and Lewis, was declared by the Court of Appeals to be unconstitutional and void in that it violates Sections 63 and 64 of that instrument, which sections prohibit the reducing of the area of the counties from which a new county is made to less than four hundred square miles, their population to less than 12,000 and the line within ten miles of an old county seat. The contention that the lines or boundary of the new county proposed would not close, but run into the State of Ohio, the court disposes of by saying that the acts as a whole shows what was meant, its magisterial districts being properly defined, and such a mistake alone would not have invalidated the act. The whole court considered the case, and Judge Hobson delivered the opinion, from which there is no dissent.

A Good Democrat Still.

I desire to thank the Democracy of the Sixth District for the honor received at its hands in the Congressional race, notwithstanding the fact that I was not made the nominee. "Better to have loved and lost than never to have loved at all," with a slight change expresses my feelings—better to have made the race and lost than to have never run, for friendships were formed, kindness received and acquaintances made that will sweeten my remaining years.

To represent this district in Congress is indeed a high honor, and to feel that four out of the eight counties composing the district felt I was worthy of the honor, is no little satisfaction. I was comparatively a stranger beyond my own county lines, and when the odds are considered I feel that I have every cause for self-congratulation.

I do not consider I was beaten. Like the rebel who, when asked why he let the Yankees whip him replied, "They never whipped us—we wore ourselves out whipping the Yankees," so I console myself that I wore myself out whipping my opponents. There were Nadaud, Hodge and Gooch I got away with, but when it came to Rhinock I found myself winded—there were too many of them.

But I feel grateful beyond expression for the love and loyalty of my friends, and can never but cherish the kindest thoughts of my opponents and those who opposed me, for from one and all I received the greatest courtesy. While honor from your fellow citizens is ever touching, none touches the heart so deeply as the confidence and love of your own people, and to the citizens of Carroll I owe a debt, though my days be made long in the land, I can never repay.

To the newspaper fraternity throughout the district I am under the deepest obligations—Lee, of Carroll; Bell, Peak and Barclay of Trimble; Wallace, of Gallatin; Riddell, of Boone; Needham, of Grant, and Williams, of Pendleton, form a coterie the like of which, for cleverness and ability, cannot be surpassed in this broad land. Long may they live to enlighten and make better their respective communities.

When I recall the individual names of those who labored for me, there is none to whom I feel more is due than to Judge Lassing, who was my friend from beginning to end, and to whom I owe much of the success that was mine.

The fight is over, I am a better Democrat than ever, and call on my friends to give Mr. Rhinock the same Democratic majority I feel sure they would have given me. Mr. Rhinock is popular among those who know him best, is charitable and philanthropic, a true, tried Democrat, and, I believe, has the ability to make you a worthy Congressman.

Respectfully, E. C. SMITH.

It is announced as the result of an experiment conducted by the National Academy of Sciences at Washington for more than six months to test the amount of food which will keep a man in health and vigor that the average healthy man eats from two to three times as much as he needs for that purpose. The experiment was tried upon several students and a squad of soldiers, and at the close they were in perfect health and showed no loss of weight. This would have an important effect upon the food supply of the country if the consumption of food per capita could be reduced in the same ratio as to the entire population of the United States. It would increase the surplus of food products for importation in the same ratio and add proportionately to the national wealth. But it is doubtful if such a reform could be brought about by voluntary abstinence, and the expense of conducting it by a commission would probably exhaust the estimated value of the food saved. In point of practical results the suggestion smacks much of Prof. Wiley's experiments with boraeic food as a wholesome diet.—C.-J.

State Insurance Commissioner Henry Prewitt has opened the war on rebators in the life insurance field. He has mailed to each of the 1,500 agents in Kentucky a list of questions to be answered and sworn to by the agents, who are notified that unless they respond on or before May 15 next their licenses to do business will be suspended or revoked. The power of the Commissioner in this matter is absolute. The questions are if the agent has rebated by any process or scheme since January 4 last, when Commissioner Prewitt gave his first warning to the rebaters.

HENRY QUICK, Agent, Hebron, Ky.

One of our oldest grain dealers says: "I have never seen a year when wheat went into dry ground but what it came out all right. It is usually the case that wheat seeded in wet fields turns out poorly. The explanation is this: Seed a field of wheat in the dust—especially if it is put in with a drill—and the berry is preserved until the moisture deeper down comes near enough to the surface to cause germination. Then the roots sink deep while the plant may barely get above the surface. When the growing season comes in the spring the plant quickly makes up for the lost time because of the strong roots. The seed planted in wet fields does the opposite. The fields has a fine surface growth, but the roots do not go deep after moisture. The conditions are very unfavorable for passing through the stooling period in March and any adverse wheather still later. I know it to be a fact that wheat seeded in dusty fields almost always develops into a bumper crop. I take no stock in the present fears for the southwest States because of the drought during fall and winter. That will all be made good if the root growth is vigorous, I look for a big winter wheat yield southwest."

AT the city elections in Aurora and Lawrenceburg, last week, the Democrats were routed horse, foot and dragoon, and the city offices will know them no more—for a while. Too bad, boys, to be made walk the plank on the eve of a Presidential election.

About 10 o'clock, last Saturday morning, a spark from the kitchen flue at Judge Roberts', fell on the roof and the gentle breeze soon fanned it into a blaze. Mrs. Roberts discovered the blaze about the time it got a start, and sounded the alarm, to which the bucket brigade responded with its usual promptness, and put the fire out before it had burned through a shingle.

The Burlington Grays were defeated by a Hebron nine, last Saturday, on the grounds here 18 to 11. The Grays seemed to be very much out of gear while the Hebron aggregation did some pretty good playing—especially at first, and behind the bat. McGlasson at first was the liveliest man in the game, while Mike Clore was a terror at the bat. Souther and Earnst and Kirk and Smith were the batteries.

Whooping Cough.

"In the spring of 1901 my children had whooping cough," says Mrs. D. W. Capps, of Capps, Ala. "I used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy with the most satisfactory results. I think this is the best remedy I have ever seen for whooping cough." This remedy keeps the cough loose, lessens the severity and frequency of the whooping spells and counteracts any tendency toward pneumonia. For sale by all Druggists.

The Burley Tobacco growers met at Lexington on April 26th last, at which thirty counties were represented. It was the unanimous sentiment of the meeting that the 1904 crop should be pooled and controlled by the growers themselves. Plans were discussed and a committee of five, consisting of President W. B. Hawkins, W. Scott Osborne, Judge Hughes, Charles McChord, and C. H. Booker, was appointed to formulate and crystalize the plans.

A fund for paying necessary expenses of the organization will be raised by each county paying $50 for the purpose. This is a very small sum to be raised.

As Homer Clutterbuck, of the firm of Clutterbuck Bros., was coming from the city with a large two-horse wagon heavily loaded with dry goods and groceries, last Friday night, Homer went to sleep as he was coming down the Geo. Rouse hill near Dinaburg, and directly he crossed the bridge over Gunpowder creek his horses took the wagon over a steep embankment, and it landed on its side down against a wire fence. Homer awoke just in time to jump, and fortunately, he was not hurt. The accident happened about 9 o'clock and when he got his horses loose from the wagon he came on home. The team was not injured and the damages to the wagon and goods were small as to what was expected.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and, therefore, requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure manufactured by F. J. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address,

FORGETTERS OF GOD

The Divine Message to Such Is One of Warning and Offer of Salvation.

Sermon by the "Highway and Byway" Preacher.

(Copyright, 1904, by J. M. Edson.)

Chicago, Sunday, May 8, 1904.

Text:—"Now consider this, ye that forget God, lest I tear you in pieces, and there be none to deliver. Whoso offereth the sacrifice of thanksgiving glorifieth Me; and to him that ordereth his way aright will I shew the salvation of God."—Psalm 50:22, 23.

GOD forgotten, but God not forgetting—is the two-fold condition which presents itself to us in the consideration of our theme: "Forgetters of God." On the one hand we have those who are indifferent to God, unconscious of their peril and ignorant of the blessing to be found in fellowship with God, and on the other we behold God in His infinite mercy and love addressing the one who has forgotten Him, pleading with him and warning him of his awful peril, and then pointing him to the way of salvation. It is a marvelous display of the Divine grace that God should go after those who have spurned and forgotten Him. And it is a mystery of mysteries how the undying soul of man can be indifferent to its Creator and God, how it can forget Him and pay no heed to the Divine warning of peril and the offer of salvation. But there are those who forget God and perish. The people of Noah's time forgot God, and treated His warnings of judgment and destruction with indifference and contempt, and they perished. Sodom and Gomorrah forgot God and God licked them with His scourge of fire from the face of the earth. Nations and individuals throughout the ages have forgotten God and perished miserably. And to-day there are multitudes of precious souls that have forgotten God. They have turned their backs upon Him, they have thrust their fingers in their ears that they may not hear His warning message, and they are facing the world and destruction. Forgetters of God, but not forgetters of self. Forgetters of God, but not forgetters of the world and all its attractions and distractions. Forgetters of God and His claims, but not forgetters of the fleshly desires and appetites. Forgetters of God!

YOU may draw your own portrait of the Forgetter of God. You probably would be able to fill in a good many of the lines and features. You probably would picture the dissolute or the criminal, and say there is your Forgetter of God. And it would be true, sadly true, but do the law breaker and the moral outcast represent the sum total of this God-forgetting class? Shall we say that when you have pointed out those who are known and read of all men as positively wicked and bad in their purposes and habits, you have told all the story? Man's moral census would be sure to include all those who were scarred and marred by sin, but it is equally certain that many, many who are known to God as Forgetters of Him would be left out. I do not need to go to the drunkard and tell him that he is a Forgetter of God. He knows it. The consciousness of it haunts him day and night. I do not need to go into the slums of the city, into the gambling dens and places of iniquity and tell the poor victims there that they have forgotten God. They know it, and try to drown the troubling thoughts of their condition by more madly plunging into the giddy whirl of sin. I do not need to go to that wayward boy or girl, to that man or woman who is traveling the pathway of sin, and tell them they are among those who have forgotten God. They will admit it, and declare they want to forget. Who are the Forgetters of God? Not these alone, then, who need no badge to distinguish them, but multitudes whom God sees as indifferent to Him, as forgetful of His claims upon them. Forgetters of God may be well and favorably known to each other, they may stand high in the estimation of the world, they may be socially and financially among the four hundred, but in God's sight they are classed with the Forgetters.

THE Psalmist takes pains to describe as Forgetters of God those whom perhaps you or I would be last to include as such. God is represented as speaking, and He declares: "Thou hatest instruction (or correction, as it is in the marginal reading), and castest My words behind thee. When thou sawest a thief, thou consentedst with him, and hast been partaker with adulterers. Thou givest thy mouth to evil, and thy tongue frameth deceit. Thou sittest and speakest against thy brother; thou slanderest thine own mother's son. . . . Thou thoughtest that I was altogether such a one as thyself." As we examine carefully and critically this portrayal we find that the positively wicked and bad are not mentioned. The Psalmist did not go fishing around in cesspools of sin for his specimens, he did not trot off to the corrupt heathen nations about to find his man who had forgotten God. He found him right near at hand, and among those who perhaps stood highest in the community. He was the man who recognized the authority of the law; who took a pride and satisfaction in his moral rectitude and his clean citizenship; who held his head high and was ready to preach moral standards unto others. The Psalmist speaks of his going so far as to declare God's statutes and to take God's covenant in his mouth. That is he did not irreligious. He recognized God and His law. And yet he is charged with hating instruction and with casting God's words behind him. This I take it means that he was heady and high-minded, that he had a vain self-esteem which made him unteachable. And the charge of casting God's words behind him would imply that he gave them a subordinate place in his life and put his own judgments and thoughts before those of God. More than likely, intellectualism and higher criticism were barriers that prevented God's words having due weight and influence in his life.

AND now we enter upon another phase of the character of the Forgetter of God. He is a compromiser with evil, for when he saw the thief at work—oh, not the thief who breaks into houses and steals everything he can lay his hands on. This man is respectable in his thievery alongside of the man who robs in a business deal or engages in questionable enterprises that promise large profits, or takes advantage of the mistake of a clerk or cashier which is in his favor—when he saw this kind of a thief at work he winked and smiled a bit and thought what a sharp fellow he was, and perhaps he was in on the deal and shared in the profits. He wouldn't do anything dishonest, not he! But he will let the other fellow do the dirty work and he will pocket his share of the proceeds. Yes, when he saw the thief at work, he consentedst with him. Had he seen a hungry beggar purloining a loaf of bread from the bake shop, or the highwayman holding up the wayfarer and taking his valuables, he would have been quick to yell "thief" so loudly that the policeman could have heard him a quarter of a mile away if he had cared to do so. But when it came to polite stealing in business he smiled approvingly, especially when he was in on the profits. And not only is the Forgetter of God a compromiser with evil, but he is a partaker with adulterers. He is a man of the world who, though perhaps not himself a moral leper, fellowships with those of positive immoral habits. The social fabric of the present day is becoming rotten with moral irregularities. Divorce is coming to be the rule rather than the exception, and marriage ties and vows are thoughtlessly and lustfully formed and then more thoughtlessly and lustfully broken. And the Forgetter of God, though he may be in outward conduct of high moral rectitude, yet he is a partaker with adulterers because his bosom friends, his associates are morally defective, and he knows it, and yet he excuses and overlooks and forgets. And then he gives his mouth to evil. Ah, how unclean and vile is much of the conversation of the smoking room or the social circle. The questionable witticism, the double entendre, the smutty story, the light, flippant, joking remarks upon the most sacred relations of the married life, all these issue from the mouth given to evil. The Forgetter of God is the man or woman of polluted lips. He is also the liar. Lying is one of the commonest of evils. It is considered quite the proper thing among the majority of people, and yet it is an abomination in the sight of God. And then there is the slanderer and backbiter, even towards those of his own household, and last of all the Forgetter of God is spoken of as the corrupter of the true God; that is, he has a loose and low conception of God, quite in consonance and harmony with his own life and character. And this is the Forgetter of God.

SO much for the Forgetter of God. You know who he is, without further discussion on our part. You know whether you yourself are a Forgetter. But whatever your attitude may be towards God, God has not forgotten you. He appeals to you and to me. He warns of the danger. He waits in mercy. He holds out His promise of salvation. He pleads for us to consider our condition, our danger and our chance of escape. "Now consider this, ye that forget God," and then He goes on to warn of the impending danger. Listen, ye Forgetters of God, "lest I tear you in pieces and there be none to deliver." Here is the danger signal. Here is the sign post written by the finger of God telling you that just ahead of the pathway which you are pursuing in careless forgetfulness of God there are judgment and punishment. God's mercy and patience must not be counted for weakness. "The Lord is not slack concerning His promise, as some count slackness; but is long-suffering to you-ward, not wishing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance." There are those who doubt God, who do not believe that the judgments which He has pronounced against sin will be fulfilled. Jesus encountered such skepticism and referring back to Noah declared that the people of that day had manifested the same reckless disregard of God's warnings, "and as were the days of Noah, so shall be the coming of the Son of man. For as in those days which were before the flood they were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, until the day that Noah entered into the ark, and they knew not until the flood came, and took them all away; so shall be the coming of the Son of man." And Peter, having declared that God is not slack concerning the fulfillment of every promise and every judgment, goes on to say that "the day of the Lord will come as a thief."

HANGING over the head of the Forgetter of God, like the sword of Damocles upheld by a single hair, is suspended the judgment of God. It does not fall because God's long-suffering mercy and patience withheld it, but in the fullness of God's time mercy, patience and love will have been exhausted, and then the wrath of God like a devouring fire will break forth. Listen! Heed My warnings, God says, "lest I tear you in pieces and none shall deliver." "None shall deliver!" Chicago has but recently witnessed the sad and awful death on the gallows of those desperate young fellows who ran such a bloody career of crime. Day after day for the weeks that intervened between the time when the sentence of death was passed upon them and the execution they sat in their stone and iron cells. No power could deliver them. Mother's love, or friends, or the pleading of lawyers, or human strength or power could not deliver from the judgment. Relentlessly and surely the day and hour and minute of the execution drew near. The death watch was set. The last good-byes were said to earthly friends. The preparations were made for the march to the gallows. The guard came to lead the prisoners out to death. The sheriff stood ready to perform his duty and carry out the sentence of the court. The noose and the black cap were ready. Only a little spring held the trap door in place. And at the appointed time a touch of the lever and the next instant the souls of those young bandits were in eternity. No power could deliver them. How relentlessly the judgment of man pursued them! And what think you must it be to fall into the hands of the living God, and to come under His judgments? Who then shall deliver? Shall money, or earthly power, or even the Devil who has been served, or friends or loved ones, or one's own power, or strength, or ingenuity? I tell you nay! None shall deliver from God's hand! Once those who forget God fall into His hands for judgment and all hope is gone forever. For this reason God pleads: "Now consider this, ye that forget God!"

HE holds up before you, as we have tried to show you, the certain awful judgments which will fall upon you and tear you in pieces if you do not hear and heed; and on the other hand He shows you what blessing will be yours if you turn to Him. In dealing with God, (and the soul must deal with Him,) it is either a case of judgment or blessing. Blessing He wants to give; judgment He must give if you reject the offer of mercy. He holds before the Forgetters of God the picture of the man who has yielded himself to Him. "Whoso offereth the sacrifice of thanksgiving glorifieth Me; and to him that ordereth his way aright will I shew the salvation of God." The great sacrifice for sin has been made. Jesus Christ the righteous One has suffered in place of guilty and lost man. God pleads with you to thankfully accept Him as a Saviour. God can be glorified and honored in no greater way than for you to accept His gift to the world. Think you that the sacrifice of thanksgiving means some great thing you can do for God; some service you can perform for Him, some goodness you can manifest in your life? The only sacrifice you can make that will be acceptable to God is the sacrifice of your will that will give Christ the possession of your heart. The only thanksgiving which will reach the ear of God and be pleasing to Him is the thanksgiving that has as its inspiration and theme the crucified and risen Lord. God's promise is as sure as His judgment. He says that he will shew His salvation to the man who ordereth his way aright. In the days of the Roman power, when the Caesars ruled the world, it is said that all roads led to Rome. Sure it is that all roads that God calls right lead to Christ and salvation. He who walketh over the road of repentance and faith will be shown the glorious salvation of God in Christ Jesus. Forgetters of God, your position is a perilous one. God pleads with you to consider your relations to Him.

IT is God Who is speaking. It is not man's message, but God's message. The opening verses of the Psalm declare that "the Mighty One, God, Jehovah, hath spoken." "The Mighty One hath spoken." There is authority and power behind the spoken word—authority to command, and power to execute. "God hath spoken." The Maker of Heaven and earth, the Creator of man, the Ruler of the universe hath talked with man! Jehovah, the One Who holds peculiar and close spiritual relations with man, the One Who covenants with man and Who keeps those covenants inviolate, is the One Who hath spoken. If He Who speaks is all this, and more, does it not behoove us to listen? "The mighty One, God, Jehovah, hath spoken!" When Napoleon spoke it is said that his soldiers trembled before him. It meant something for the fierce, all-conquering general to speak. He must be heard. He must be obeyed. And when God speaks how much more it should be true that He must be heard and obeyed. Napoleon has long since ceased to speak. His tongue is silent. His power and authority are ended. But not so with God. He Who spoke in thunder tones on Mount Sinai, and made the children of Israel fear and tremble before Him, is speaking to-day. And think you that it is a light thing that God should speak? I tell you nay! God must be heard! If the ear is stopped and the heart hardened in this life so that appeal and warning and blessed promise of salvation are without effect, then, as the soul appears before God, it must hear Him speak in judgment. The soul may turn from God in this life, but it cannot escape Him in the next. If it will not listen here, it must do so in the hereafter. Listen, ye who would forget God: "The Mighty One, God, Jehovah, hath spoken." His message is to you. Listen, oh, precious soul! "Now consider this, ye that forget God, lest I tear you in pieces, and there be none to deliver: Whoso offereth the sacrifice of thanksgiving glorifieth Me; and to him that ordereth his way aright will I shew the salvation of God."

WHAT SHE WAS THINKING.

And There Was Nothing of Disappointment in Her Thoughts for Mr. Snodgrass.

"May I cherish a hope, Ella, dear, that you will become my wife, the partner of my joys and sorrows, my constant companion through this vale of tears?"

Miss Spudkins did not answer. Her fair head was slightly bent. The color came and went on her dainty cheeks. Her hands were clasped and lay upon her lap, relates London Tit-Bits.

Mr. Snodgrass seized one of them passionately and kissed it. Then he spoke again: "This avowal of love cannot come to you as a surprise, Ella. My devotion to you knows no bounds. It has a fathomless depth and an immeasurable height. Do you not return it in some measure?"

Still Miss Spudkins spoke not. Her eyes seemed to be studying the pattern of the carpet.

"Will you not speak the word which shall betroth our souls for all time and for all eternity? I feel, my precious one, as though we were predestined for each other, and that our love will last while ceaseless ages roll. Tell me you love me, darling."

She did not tell him, and Mr. Snodgrass resumed:

"We have known each other since we were children, Ella, dear. This is no sudden fancy of mine. I loved you when you were learning to talk, and my love deepened and strengthened as you gradually acquired that accomplishment. Now my affection is one that has gathered strength through the years until it will not be denied. It will not take 'no' for an answer. Ella, love, why don't you reply? Speak the word which will make me the happiest of mortals."

Yet there was no answer from the fair young girl at whose feet was thus laid the heart of a brave young man; and Mr. Snodgrass once more addressed her:

"I know that silence gives consent, but I'd rather hear from your lips the little 'yes' to my plea. Why do you not answer me?"

"I was thinking, Thomas," Ella replied at last, and there was ineffable tenderness in her tones; "of course I love you. I think you were reasonably sure of that, dear, but I was thinking —" And again the far-away look came into her eyes.

"Thinking of what, dear?"

"I was thinking whether I should better have my visiting cards engraved 'Mrs. E. Spudkins-Snodgrass' or 'Mrs. Thomas Jefferson Snodgrass. Which is the more stylish, dear?"

WAR ON RATS AND RAVENS.

Large Sum of Money to Be Spent by France in Campaign of Extermination.

The minister of agriculture, M. Mougeot, has asked for 350,000 francs to be voted by the chamber, with which he proposes to combat the plague of rats from which a corner of the Department of Charentes is suffering, says a recent Paris report. The damage done by these little rodents to the crops of cereals last season was so great that the campaign to be waged by M. Mougeot has the hearty support of all the farmers of the district thus attacked. The means to be employed for their destruction is a poison to be provided by the scientists of the Pasteur Institute.

But the work of destruction does not stop at the rats. The farmers have petitioned for help in getting rid also of the ravens and magpies which prey upon the game, and part of the 350,000 francs demanded from the nation will be appropriated for this purpose.

The ravens are, however, by no means an unqualified pest, for they have recently done a good turn to the market gardeners of the District of Argenteuil. The vast beds of that fat kind of asparagus which goes by the name of the district, and which is so highly esteemed as a table luxury, was last season attacked by a mysterious disease which ravaged acres of plants. Just as the young plants were approaching maturity they hung their heads and wilted down, and the growers were in despair. Acres of land were ruined and the loss was great.

Then it was noticed that flocks of ravens constantly descended upon the affected beds and carried on a lively war upon a kind of fly, specimens of which were sent up to the Sorbonne to be examined. This fly was found to be the cause of the mischief. The abdomen [illegible] with a sting with which the creature perforates the stalk of the asparagus, depositing its eggs in the puncture. Millions of larvae were thus laid, and, quickly hatching out, ravaged the beds, entirely destroying the plants.

Deprived by Mr. Mougeot of the good services of the ravens, the gardeners will endeavor to check the spread of the disease by pulling up and burning the affected plants.

Race Prejudice.

The Japanese soldier was faint with loss of blood and abstinence from rice. The Red Cross nurse held a bottle to his lips.

"What is it?" feebly whispered the soldier.

"Whisky," replied the nurse.

Resolutely he turned his lips away from the tempting bottle.

"No," he murmured, "I don't like the last three letters of the word. They are undoubtedly Russian."

Seeing that he was determined, the nurse gave him a large swig of brandy out of the same bottle, and he was soon himself again.—Baltimore American.

For a new variety of rhubarb it is claimed that it not only fruits all the year round, but that its flavor resembles a combination of the raspberry and strawberry.

THE NEPHEW CAUGHT ON.

Showed His Mercenary Uncle He Could Be as Saving as Anyone.

A naval officer, recently returned from the isthmus of Panama, according to the New York Tribune, tells the following story concerning the wealthiest man on the isthmus:

"Senor M— is known all over the isthmus as the stingiest man who ever lived. He will have no lights in his house except candles, and the lone candle in his sitting-room is not burned at night when he is talking to visitors and is not compelled to have a light.

"The old man has a nephew who makes the money fly. A short time ago he called on his uncle at night. While they were talking the old man blew out his candle.

"'What did you do that for?' the youngster asked.

"'Why, we don't need the light while we are talking,' the uncle replied.

"While the uncle was talking earnestly the boy began to shuffle about in the dark. Much annoyed by the interruption, the old man said: 'What are you doing?'

"'Only just taking off my trousers,' the boy replied. 'I don't need them in the dark and want to keep from wearing them out.'"

Still Another Case.

Kirkland, Ill., May 9.—Mr. Richard R. Greenhow, of this place, is another who has been cured of Rheumatism by Dodd's Kidney Pills. He says:

"I had the Rheumatism in my left leg so bad that I could not walk over ten or fifteen rods at a time, and that by the use of two canes, and I would have to sit or lie down on the ground. The sweat would run down my face with so much pain. I could not sleep at night for the pain. I was in a terrible condition.

"I tried different doctors' medicines but got worse, till I saw an advertisement of Dodd's Kidney Pills and bought some. After I had used a few, the pain began to leave me, so I kept right on taking them and gradually getting better till I had used in all fourteen boxes and my Rheumatism was all gone, not a pain or ache left.

"I can truly say I haven't felt better in twenty-five years than I do to-day. Dodd's Kidney Pills have made a new man of me."

A prominent club woman, Mrs. Danforth, of St. Joseph, Mich., tells how she was cured of falling of the womb and its accompanying pains and misery by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Life looks dark indeed when a woman feels that her strength is fading away and she has no hopes of ever being restored. Such was my feeling a few months ago when I was advised that my poor health was caused by prolapsus or falling of the womb. The words sounded like a knell to me, I felt that my sun had set; but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound came to me as an elixir of life; it restored the lost forces and built me up until my good health returned to me. For four months I took the medicine daily, and each dose added health and strength. I am so thankful for the help I obtained through its use."—MRS. AN ILLINOIS FARMER IN WESTERN CANADA.

A recent issue of the Shelbyville, Illinois, Democrat contains a long and interesting letter from Mr. Elias Kost, formerly a prosperous farmer of that state, who recently emigrated to Western Canada, taking up a claim for himself and for each of his three sons.

From Mr. Kost's letter, which was written Feb. 3, 1904, we publish the following, believing it will prove of great interest to those who have contemplated settling in the Canadian Northwest:

"I had in August, 1902, secured a claim for myself, and filed on three quarter sections for my sons. My claim is one-half mile south of the Edmonton and Lake St. Anne trail.

"Coming so late in the season we had little opportunity to break and to prepare ground for a first year's crop, still we raised over 100 bushels of very fine potatoes, and sowed a few acres of barley, but the season was too far advanced for the barley. However, we secured good feed from it, and on rented ground 18 miles east of us, raised a fine crop of oats, so that we will have plenty of feed for horses. We cut about 60 tons of hay and thus will have an abundance. We have, all told, about 240 acres of hay meadow, which would yield the past year over three tons to the acre, and in an ordinary season the meadow would furnish 600 tons of hay. The grass is very nutritious, and cattle on the ranges become very fat without being fed a pound of grain.

"On the upland the grass grows from eight to ten inches tall. This is called range grass, and is suitable for stock at any time, even in the winter when the ground is not covered too deep with snow. Horses subsist on it alone, at all times, provided they are native stock. The grass in the hay meadows here is called red-top, and grows from five to six feet in length, and when cut, at the proper time yields an abundant crop of nutritious hay.

"Our cattle have not cost us a cent since we came on our homestead, only the small outlay for salt and labor in putting up hay and shelter. All cattle have been doing well this winter, and feeding up to the first of January was unnecessary, as there was good range up to that time.

"All the snows up to that date were followed by winds from the northwest that melts it very rapidly; these winds are called Chinook winds, and are always warm. In one night a Chinook wind may take away three or four inches of snow.

"We have built on our claim a comfortable house of hewn logs, 20x26 feet, one and one-half stories in height, with a good cellar. During the latter part of June we rafted logs down the Sturgeon to a sawmill, about eight miles away, and thus secured 5,000 feet of good lumber which was needed for the house. Later in the season a shingle mill located six miles away. To this we hauled logs and had shingles cut for the roof.

"We had an abundance of wild fruit the past season, consisting of gooseberries, strawberries, raspberries, eyeberries, blueberries, cherries and saskatoons. The latter are a fine looking berry, red, and quite pleasant in the taste, but not much to be desired in cookery. The strawberries are the same as those that grow wild in Illinois. Raspberries are red in color, large and equal to any of the tame varieties, and so are the gooseberries. The cranberries consist of the high and trailing varieties. The latter are most sought and contiguous to the swamps. The ground is literally covered with them as with a red carpet, but the best and most sought is the blueberry, so called by the Indians. This is the famous 'huckleberry' (whortleberry) of the Blue Ridge Mountains in Pennsylvania, and cannot be excelled for excellence by any fruit cultivated. It is found here both on the prairie and in the timber in immense quantities.

"Game is very plentiful so far as prairie chickens, pheasants, ducks of all kinds, and geese are concerned. We have taken nearly 500 chickens and pheasants, also a great many ducks.

"An occasional deer is seen, but are not plentiful, only one having been taken during the season in this settlement.

"Fish are very plentiful at all seasons of the year. Fish wagons and sleds are passing almost daily along the trail with heavy loads of fish, destined for St. Albert and Edmonton. From the latter point they are shipped south on the Calgary and Edmonton railroad to points along the line, and also to Assiniboia, on the Canadian Pacific railroad."

Prayer Answered.

A preacher who went to a Kentucky parish where the parishioners bred horses was asked to invite the prayers of the congregation for Lucy Grey. He did so. They prayed three Sundays for Lucy Grey. On the fourth he was told he need not do it any more. "Why," said the preacher, "is she dead?" "No," answered the man, "she won the Derby."—Washington Post.

TRUTH ABOUT SMOOT CASE

Republicans Will Stand by Mormon Church Until After the Fall Election.

A seemingly well informed correspondent at Salt Lake City is authority for the statement that if Senator Smoot should be unseated Utah will give her electoral vote to the democratic candidate for president, and will send two democrats to the United States senate.

No one who is familiar with the affairs of church and state in Utah, says the Chicago Chronicle, will question the power of the church to make the correspondent's prediction a reality, but there is little, if any, prospect that the senator will be disturbed, at least before the national election.

While there is abundant evidence that Utah mormons who lived in polygamy previous to the enactment of a state law forbidding it continue to sustain polygamous relations, there has been no evidence that Senator Smoot has more than one wife, or that he has ever advocated polygamy since the enactment of state legislation against it.

For the existing polygamous practices in Utah the political party to which a majority of the investigating committee belong is largely, if not wholly, responsible. Had Utah been compelled to remain a territory federal legislation faithfully enforced could have eradicated this evil, but, to gain a party advantage by increasing republican representation in congress, it was admitted as a state, and thus the control of polygamy was given into the hands of the polygamists of the mormon church, who controls the politics of the state.

It is a late day now to shirk responsibility for the folly of making Utah a state and to indulge in the practice of manufacturing party sentiment by persecuting a monogamous mormon.

The Smoot investigation, which is not an investigation of Smoot, may drag along several weary months, but there will be no Smoot verdict to incite vengeance in Utah until the electoral vote of the polygamous state has been again recorded for the presidential nominee of the party in power.

NOTES FROM EXCHANGES.

——It is promised that the postal investigation will be revived "after the presidential election." This will give the president of the senate and the speaker of the house time to select the committees on self-exoneration.—Washington Post (Ind.).

——Judge Parker is a strong candidate. He occupies the highest place in the judicial system of his state, a place of great dignity and honor. He is personally a man of superior professional qualities and of upright life. He is a candidate without any taint of the demagogue. Such a candidate cannot be whistled down the wind.—Portland Oregonian (Ind.),

——No class of our people is so dependent upon the foreign market as the farmer, none suffer more keenly from any restriction upon American trade by foreign countries. But the American farmer has never received much consideration from the republican party in congress. All of the energies of that party in the national legislature have been directed toward maintaining the home market for the American manufacturer without foreign competition.—Galveston News.

False Promises of Republicans.

It is announced that there is little hope for the statehood bill to pass congress. Indeed, there has never been any hope at all for it in our judgment. Several obstacles have been placed in the way of it. The fact that the republican party in its national platform in 1900 declared that "we favor home rule for and the early admission to statehood of the territories of New Mexico, Arizona and Oklahoma," was virtually conclusive evidence that it favored nothing of the kind. Senator Quay has been trying for two years to get the republican party to keep its pledges, but it has been to no purpose. Nothing else really was to have been expected. The republican party never had any idea of keeping its promise with regard to statehood, and that plank in its platform was placed there purely for bumcombe.—Memphis Commercial-Apepal.

TRUSTS MUST BE PLACATED.

The republican party of Massachusetts, having placed itself entirely in the hands of Senator Lodge and one or two others whom he can trust, has been compelled to take the back track, so far as reciprocity is concerned. Reciprocity is all very well to figure as pledge in a party platform, but it becomes quite another matter when the republicans themselves—those who are not in the secrets of the party management—undertake to promote it. For while the republican leaders can afford to make solemn promises, so long as those promises are confined to the party platforms, faith must be kept with the powerful interests that have heretofore furnished the campaign corruption funds for the republicans, and who are expected to do the handsome thing in this campaign.—Atlanta Constitution.

Funny Decisions of "Experts."

The wisdom of the gentlemen who construe our tariff laws is beyond the comprehension of the average voter. The law permits free entry of animals intended for 'breeding purposes, but a man who tried to import a Plymouth Rock cookerel was compelled to pay a duty of three cents a pound. The wise tariff adjusters pondered and studied over it for weeks, and enough red tape was unwound to fill a bushel basket. But it was decided that a chicken was not an "animal," therefore, it could not come in free.

FOR FARMERS TO CONSIDER

Sheep and Hens and Wool and Eggs and Their Relation to Tariff Legislation.

The insignificance of our sheep and wool industry is seen when compared with our poultry and egg industry. While the total value of our wool product last year was only $58,775,373, that of our egg product was $145,000,000 in 1899 and probably $200,000,000 last year.

The value of the 21,000,000 dozens of eggs laid in Ohio in 1899 was over $10,000,000, while the value of the 12,520,000 pounds of wool produced there was only $3,134,208, and yet Ohio is by far the largest wool-growing state east of the Rocky mountains. If Ohio sheep could be made to produce as much value as do Ohio hens the protectionists there, from Grosvenor down, might be excused for doing more cackling than do all the hens in that state.

Even the value of poultry killed for food is $130,000,000 a year, or 2½ times the value of our wool products.

In view of these facts, why is there so much fuss and feathers about protection to our sheep and wool industry and so little said about the industrious hen and her valuable egg product, on the part of our tariff worshipers? Could not our farmers be made to believe that their far more valuable egg and poultry industry is entirely dependent upon the duties upon the eggs and chickens?

Is it not certain that this industry would be ruined and that our domestic hens would immediately retire from business if the tariff duties were taken off and the pauper hens of Europe and their cheap-labor products were put on the free list? Are not our protectionist friends overlooking a good thing when they neglect to fill the Congressional Record with speeches and statistics showing the great benefit of protection to this great and growing industry? Would it not, in fact, be better for their cause if they would lose the declining sheep and wool industry and let it go to the dogs, where it appears to be going in spite of extremely high duties?

LABOR PLANK IS SENSIBLE.

Pennsylvania Democrats Give Utterance to Sentiments That Are Wise and Patriotic.

Among the many admirable planks in the platform of the Pennsylvania democrats there is none that appeals more strongly to conservatism and a sense of justice than the one defining the party's attitude on labor unions, which follows:

Labor unions organized for the betterment of the condition of wage earners, acting within the limits of law and not subversive of public order or individual rights, are not only lawful but commendable, and should be met, recognized and dealt with accordingly.

This accords not only with the traditional friendliness of the democratic party toward men who labor—for the strength of the party has ever been and must be among those engaged in honest toil—but it expresses the sentiment which should prevail among all classes of people in dealing with the so-called labor problem. It recognizes the right of workingmen to organize as an inalienable individual right, and one which they should be encouraged to exercise for the betterment of their condition. That right is indorsed both in its legal and moral aspects. This only demand it makes upon workingmen is that the right shall be exercised within the limits of the law, the maintenance of public order and equal consideration for the individual rights of others.

The Pennsylvania declaration, says the New York Post, deals with the labor question frankly, honestly and intelligently, and without demagogy. It could not have contained less and it would have been a waste of words to have said more. It should be incorporated in the St. Louis platform.

Something New in Politics.

The probability that Mr. Roosevelt will be the choice of the republican convention in the fast-approaching summer seems to weigh heavily upon the public mind. It is doubtful whether in the whole record of American politics there can be found a parallel instance of public uneasiness over a probable nomination. There have been cases of grave democratic concern over a republican nomination and vice versa, but the uneasiness which attends Mr. Roosevelt's almost certain chance is not confined to party. It is public uneasiness. It is no less manifest in republican circles than in democratic.—St. Louis Republic.

Doctors Disagreeing.

The 1904 address of the Protective Tariff league declares as follows:

"That reciprocity in competitive products is unsound in principle, pernicious in practice and condemned by experience. It is contrary alike to the national policy of protection, to the fair treatment of domestic producers and to friendly relations with foreign countries."

The last republican national platform said that "reciprocity and protection are twin measurers of republican policy and go hand-in-hand." There seems to be a misunderstanding here—a case of doctors disagreeing. The adoption of a democratic policy will make such things impossible.—Indianapolis Sentinel.

Don't Want Real Reform.

The republican party, in state and national conventions, has been declaring for years that it favors reciprocal trade treaties, that there is nothing "sacred" about tariff schedules, that it is not pledged to any particular tariff schedules. And yet when some practical republican, like Foss, of Massachusetts, or Cummins of Iowa, presents a specific proposition, like reciprocity with Canada, the party leaders balk and scream loudly for "harmony and consistency."—Chicago Record-Herald (Ind.)

THE CARNEGIE DIALECT.

When He Resorts to the "Brogue" Andrew Can Get the Best of Them Balled Up.

Though Andrew Carnegie's English is singularly elegant and pure, he has at his command a weird Scotch dialect, says the Minneapolis Tribune.

Mr. Carnegie is a student of Scotch words and idioms. He likes to point out the oddities and freaks of his native tongue. Recently, at a dinner party in New York, he said to a young woman:

"So you think you can understand Scots, eh? Well, then, what do we mean in Scotland when we say a person is just fash?"

"I don't know. What do we mean?" the young woman asked.

"We mean he is a bit of a weed harum-scarum," said Mr. Carnegie.

"A weed harum-scarum? What is that?"

"It is the same as wowf."

"But what is wowf?"

"Wowf is nook or sal. That is to say, a bit by the east. Havers, lassie, ha'e ye no Scots at all?"

Then Mr. Carnegie laughed and explained that a weed harum-scarum, an ill finish, and wowf, and nook, and sal, said by the east all signified one thing, "crazy."

War Strategy.

"But where is the bottling department?" said the visitor.

"The bottling department?" echoed the escort in surprise.

"Yes, the modern navies are always bottling up something."—Chicago Daily News.

"I Have Every Reason to Praise Pe-ru-na," WRITES MRS. KANE, OF CHICAGO.

Mrs. K. Kane, 173 Sebor Street, Chicago, Ill., writes:

"Peruna has been used so long in our family that I do not know how I could get along without it. I have given it to all of my children at different times when they suffered with croup, colds and the many ailments that children are subject to, and am pleased to say that it has kept them in splendid health. I have also used it for a catarrhal difficulty of long standing and it cured me in a short time, so I have every reason to praise Peruna."—Mrs. K. Kane.

Mrs. A. Hobson, 225 Washington St., Lansing, Mich., writes:

"Peruna has been such a blessing to my only child, as well as myself, that I feel induced to give my testimonial. He has always suffered from catarrh of the head and throat, and I had to use extra precautions so as not to have him exposed to damp or cold weather. Last year he was taken with la grippe, and as it was a severe case, caused me much anxiety. No medicine helped him till he took Peruna. I noticed an improvement at once and in three weeks he was a different child; the grippe had been completely cured and I noticed that the catarrh was made better. He kept taking it two weeks longer, when he was entirely well. I now use it off and on for colds, cramps, indigestion or general indisposition, and find it superior to any doctors or medicine I ever tried. It keeps me, as well as my child, in perfect health, and I gladly recommend it to mothers."—Mrs. A. Hobson.

Pe-ru-na Protects the Entire Household Against Catarrhal Diseases.

One of the greatest foes with which every family has to contend is our changeable climate. To protect the family from colds and coughs is always a serious problem, and often impossible.

Sooner or later it is the inevitable fate of every one to catch cold. Care in avoiding exposure and the use of proper clothing will protect from the frequency and perhaps the severity of colds, but with the greatest of precautions they will come. This is a settled fact of human experience. Everybody must expect to be caught sometime or somehow.

Perhaps it will be wet feet, or a draught, or damp clothes, or it may be one of a thousand other little mishaps, but no one is shrewd enough to always avoid the inevitable catching cold.

There is no fact of medical science better known than that Peruna cures catarrh wherever located. Thousands of families in all parts of the United States are protected from colds and catarrh by Peruna. Once in the family Peruna always stays. No home can spare Peruna after the first trial of it.

We have on file many thousand testimonials like the ones given above. We can only give our readers a slight glimpse of the vast array of unsolicited endorsements we are receiving every month. No other physician in the world has received such a volume of enthusiastic and grateful letters of thanks as Dr. Hartman for Peruna.

St. Jacobs Oil

Stamp it the perfect remedy

To The Editor of the Recorder:

It having been some time since I have had the pleasure of contributing to the RECORDER, I trust that this article, however incoherent, shall have the good fortune to escape the blue pencil.

I am taking the Teacher's Advanced course, at the University here, and wish to say that in my judgment no one could receive better or more thorough instruction than at 'The National Normal University."

This is said to be one of the most beautiful cities in the State, and truly it has the right to bear that name, and more than being beautiful and classical, it boasts the honor of being the home of that famous Kentuckian, Governor Thomas Corwin.

I have the good fortune to be acquainted with one of his closest and life long friends, and the table on which I am now writing was at one time the property of the Governor.

Thomas Corwin was born in Bourbon, county Kentucky, July 29th, 1794, removed to Lebanon, Ohio, when quite young; he was admitted to the bar in 1817.

He was first chosen to the legislature of Ohio, in 1822, serving in that body seven years, and was chosen to Congress in 1830.

In 1840 he was elected Governor of Ohio, and in 1845 he was elected to the United States Senate.

In 1850 he was appointed Secretary of the Treasury. In 1858 he was again elected representative in Congress, and re-elected to that body in 1860. In 1861 he was appointed Minister to Mexico. His death occurred in Washington, D. C., December, 18, 1865. He was one of the most prominent statesmen of his time, and his memory is held sacred by every resident of Lebanon. But, like all great and noble men, he first saw the light in the grand old State of Kentucky.

This is also a leading farming district, being situated in the fertile valley of the Little Miami, and agriculture is carried on in a high state of perfection.

But there is no place like Old Kentucky, and though we sometimes admire the artificial glitter and pomp of another State, all true natives of "Bluegrass State" will say with Scott.

"Breathes there the man with soul so dead
Who never unto himself hath said
This is my own, my native land."

HUBERT W. NORTHCUTT.

The children of Wesley Rice received word, last week, of his death at the home of his son, Joshua, in Illinois, on the 5th inst. Mr. Rice was born on Middle creek, this county, February 2d, 1818, and remained a citizen of Boone county, until a few years ago. The causes of his death were cancer of the stomach and dropsy. He was married twice, and six children by his first wife, Joshua, George, Mrs. J. H. Aylor, Mrs. J. D. Acra, and Mrs. J. N. Humphry, survive him. Many years ago Wesley Rice was one of the leading farmers of this county, and no man was a cleverer neighbor. He was ever ready to assist the needy, and at his home his hospitality was unbounded. He lived far beyond man's allotted time, and but few of those, who came upon the scene of action as early in the history of this county, survive him.

The appeal from the Harrison Circuit Court sentencing Curtis Jett to life imprisonment for the murder of James B. Marcum was dismissed before the Court of Appeals, and the prisoner will be taken to the penitentiary. Jett will now have to be pardoned before he can be hanged for the murder of Cockrill.

After greeting each other the Captain asked "where are you going?" and received the answer, "to Belleview." So Great Salvation

What Is Involved in God's Offer to the World

Sermon by the "Highway and Byway" Preacher.

(Copyright, 1904, by J. M. Edson.)

Chicago, Sunday, May 15, 1904.

Text:—"How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation?"—Hebrews 2:3.

SO GREAT salvation." There is nothing which thrills the heart of man more than the story of heroic rescue from danger and death. When hurricane and flood wrought such awful destruction to life and property at Galveston and the newspapers were filled with the blood-curdling details of Death's relentless harvest, it was a relief and a joy to read of some incident of heroic rescue, of some one who at the risk of life and limb had snatched a precious life from the very jaws of death. These were the bright touches in that awful black picture of death. The world is ever eager to hear of such incidents. When the explosion of gunpowder in the turret of the battleship Missouri snuffed out over a score of the lives of our brave seamen, we were thrilled with the story of the heroic action of the gunner's mate who sprang through the open door of the powder magazine and closed the iron door just as the flames leaped against it. Into the face of death he rushed that he might save the ship and its 600 precious lives. He knew that the apartment would be immediately flooded and that he would probably be drowned like a rat in a trap, but it did not make him falter. He was saving the lives of his comrades and his superiors. And more dead than alive, with the water up to his neck, he was finally rescued from his watery tomb. Such stories are the sparkling diamond settings in the ebony background of disaster and death. It warms the blood and quickens the pulse to hear and read of such incidents. And if the story of human rescue from impending physical death thrills and interests so, how much more should the story of the Divine rescue from impending soul death fascinate and quicken the heart of man—the story of "so great salvation."

PAUL REVERE riding madly in advance of the onrushing flood was able to warn many of the impending danger, and it was a great salvation which he wrought that day, but it was a salvation which only involved a small section, a mere dot on the surface of the earth, and it was only a salvation from physical death. But not so with the salvation which God has wrought. His is a salvation which is world-wide in its scope and meaning, that is, it is a universal salvation. And it is also an eternal salvation; a costly and glorious salvation; a complete salvation; an immediate salvation; and an only salvation. No wonder that God, speaking through the inspired writer of the Hebrews, calls it "so great salvation." No wonder the Bible, from Genesis to Revelation, is filled with the theme. "So great salvation." Conceived and planned and wrought out by God the Father, and God the Son and God the Holy Spirit. The blessed Trinity united in the one purpose of rescuing the human race, lost and ruined by sin, from death and destruction. It is a wonderfully thrilling story. The story of man's peril and of God's saving grace. The story of man lost in the darkness of sin and Jesus coming from Heaven to earth to find him and bring him back to God. The story of man helplessly in the power of Satan and doomed to destruction with him, and the Mighty Deliverer, Christ Jesus, coming in all-conquering power and setting the captive free.

FIRST of all, it is "so great salvation," because it is universal in its scope. It takes in the whole world. Universal! No, not in the broad and popular sense of universal salvation by some means or other. When we call it a universal salvation we do not mean that God is too good and kind and loving to damn anybody; that somehow or other everybody is going to finally get through the pearly gates and into the Eternal City. No, we cannot read God's plain message that way. But we do mean that God's salvation is universal in its scope, and that "whosoever will" may be saved. We do mean that God's plan is broad enough, and long enough, to include every soul that will turn to Him and live. We do mean that God's plan is deep enough to reach down to the very mouth of hell and snatch from eternal death the poor soul that will lift but one feeble glance of faith to Him or utter one dying cry of repentance and faith in Christ. And it is high enough to lift the poorest sinner, the most humble and despised disciple, up to a throne and a crown in Heaven. God's salvation is universal, for He longs "to have all men saved and come to the knowledge of the truth." He takes "no delight" in the death of the wicked. He calls to all the world: "Whosoever will may come" and he saved.

It is "so great salvation," because it is an eternal salvation. Man measures values with a short yard stick, but God uses a measuring rod which is not limited to time, but extends on and on and on through the endless years of eternity. Eternal salvation. A salvation that knows no end. I remember hearing of a man once who was saved from death by drowning a half dozen times, and then at last met his end in a watery grave. He was saved from death in the water, but that salvation did not prevent his finally losing his life by drowning. God does not save a man and then leave it possible for him to be lost. God's salvation is of the eternal brand. This is the reason it transcends the mere human. It becomes operative in this life and continues in force throughout the endless ages to come. How could God call it other than "so great salvation?"

AND further, it is "so great salvation" because it is costly and glorious. Costly, not in the coin of this world where nearly everything is tested and measured by the gold dollar; glorious, not in dazzling display of external trappings; but costly in that Heaven gave her best to the earth, and Christ, the Gift, gave His best, His very life's blood, that salvation might be accomplished for man, and glorious because it revealed the love, mercy and righteousness of God to the heart of man. Costly! God's only begotten Son was the price of man's redemption. When the cruel civil war was raging in this country many a home was bereft of its brave sons who went forth at the nation's call never to return. Was it not a costly gift which the mothers and fathers gave in the persons of their sons? Anything, everything else in the world would have been easier to give than the beloved sons, the pride and joy of the home. Costly gifts to the nation, indeed! The home impoverished that the nation might be saved! Heaven impoverished and emptied that lost mankind might be saved! A costly salvation, surely! Oh, soul, just contemplate all that this salvation means in priceless treasure! The human heart is unable to even encompass the fullness of its meaning. It will take eternity to reveal it.

And the glory of it! How would we ever have known of the love and mercy and righteousness of God if it had not been for the salvation which He gave to the world? We know it is "so great salvation," because it reveals the infinite love of God, because it brings the inexhaustible mercy of God to meet the desperate need of the human soul, and because that salvation is the open door to the righteousness which is in Christ Jesus, the expressed and manifested righteousness of God. What conception has the unsaved man—the unregenerate man—of the love and mercy and righteousness of God? A warped and twisted and unreal conception at best.

BUT we have not done yet. It is a complete salvation, and this is one of the strong evidences that it is a great, a marvelous salvation. A complete salvation! God has not left His work half done. Christ did not come to earth, and live a spotless life, and suffer and die for sin, and rise from the grave a victor over death, and then ascend to the throne at the right hand of God in Heaven, leaving His work of salvation incomplete. No, praise God. He declared with His dying breath: "It is finished," and it was finished. Atonement for sin was fully made. Salvation was complete. And this fact ought to put joy in the heart and a song in the mouth. The "hope-I'm-saved" Christians have either got a weak kind of salvation, or else they are willfully blinding themselves to the fact that Christ's work was a finished work, and that to the salvation which He offers there is nothing to be added to make that salvation sure. Is there nothing for the Christian to do, then? perhaps you ask. Is there nothing for the babe to do after it is born? Yes, it must grow. It must feed its stomach, it must fill its lungs with air, so as to keep that life which was given it at birth. But it does not have to keep being born, any more than the Christian has to keep on being saved. Salvation's work was complete as soon as the regenerative work of Christ was wrought in the heart by faith, and after the new birth there was need of growth, but that was an entirely different thing from salvation. Growth is not birth, but follows birth. Growth in the Christian life is distinct from salvation in that it follows salvation, and the former cannot take place until the latter condition has been realized.

SO, then, salvation which God offers to the lost sinner is complete, the matchless work of God. Human effort cannot add to it or make it more effective. But Paul makes use of the term "salvation" in speaking to those who have been saved by faith in Christ Jesus which has a different meaning. The Christian is told to "work out his own salvation." But this is not the salvation which he experienced when he was taken a lost sinner by Jesus Christ and made a redeemed soul. It is not the salvation that found him dead in trespasses and sins and withdraw out hope, and left him a cleansed and quickened soul, with a living and eternal hope. That salvation was blood-bought. It is the finished work of Christ. But the salvation which the Christian may continue to know is that of development and growth of the life which Christ has given. That plant must keep on growing, it must continue to drink in the sun and the dew, its rootlets must persistently reach down and out and draw up the nourishment it needs, or else it will wither and die. And the law of life and growth is as binding upon the Christian as it is upon the little plant. The Christian must will to grow. He must drink in the sunshine of God's love, and the rain of His discipline. He must send out the rootlets of desire and purpose into the rich soil of God's Word and God's presence and draw the nourishment which he needs, if he would keep in health and vigor the spiritual life which Christ has given. And this is the salvation which the Christian is admonished to work out "with fear and trembling," but the salvation which God offers to the unregenerate sinner is the finished product of His marvelous love and mercy. God's salvation is a complete salvation.

IT is also immediate. Oh, if guilty, lost sinners who have a dawning sense of their need of God and of Jesus' power to save them would only realize that the salvation which is offered them is one of immediateness. Not something to be realized to-morrow, next week or next year, but now, right now. It is always in the present that God saves. All of God's promises of salvation are written in the present tense. God does not date His salvation notes ahead so that the soul must wait until the day arrives before cashing them. God says: "Now is the accepted time, now is the day of salvation." Now, right now! Immediate salvation! I was talking with a dear man the other day who realized he needed Christ. He believed in God. He believed in Christ as the Son of God and the Saviour of the world. He wanted to be and expected to be a Christian some day. And in the darkness and uncertainty of a future hope and purpose he was groping about. To him, "religion was a profound study," as he put it. The idea possessed his soul that to be saved required days and weeks and perhaps months and years of study and preparation. I tried to point him to the immediateness of the salvation which God offered him. But he is still unsaved. He is still groping about in the darkness of his own notions, while the bright promises of God's word continue to bear the date of the present. To-day he may have salvation. To-morrow, next week, next month, next year, God promises nothing.

AND last of all it is an only salvation. "So great salvation," that there is nothing like it in Heaven or in earth. It is the one and only salvation. The world has sought to pick a quarrel with God upon this score. It has called God narrow because He offered an only salvation, and has invented schemes and religions of its own which would seem to offer a multitude of roads by which the soul may travel from earth to Heaven. God's road is the only through road to Heaven. Man's roads appear well paved in this life, but they end in nothingness in the life beyond. And if God has provided an only and a sure way of salvation, what more is needed? What man is there in the world who would seek to pick a quarrel with his town and a neighboring city because more than one good, safe through road was not provided? It is considered enough. Those who want to pass from one place to the other are glad to take the only road. What folly for some dissatisfied soul to plunge off over some road that begins well and ends in a swamp or woods somewhere. He would have no one to blame but himself. And why should the man be dissatisfied with God upon this score? When God provides an only salvation in the person of His Son, and then makes the offer to the world that whosoever will may come, He has done all that is necessary to save the lost world, and He is not to be blamed if some "choose darkness rather than light, because their deeds are evil."

THIS is the wonderful salvation which God offers to you and to me, and as He offers it and in patience waits its acceptance, the servant of God, in our text, exclaims: "How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation." There are an infinite number of reasons why people reject God's offer of salvation. We have not space or time to enumerate them. You know what it is that is keeping you from accepting of this "so great salvation." But our text suggests perhaps the reason why most people are not saved. Just simple neglect. But even those who neglect "so great salvation," are to be lost with all those who for other reasons reject God's offer. Ah, how many, many precious souls, who know of God's offer of salvation, who believe that Jesus is the Son of God and the Saviour of the world, are every day and month and year going down to eternal death because of neglect! They intend some day to close with God's offer. They want to be saved. But they keep putting off. They neglect "so great salvation," and how can they escape? They have no excuse to offer. Neglect has written the warrant of death against their souls. The question which our text asks has never been answered. Man has theorized and speculated over it, but never has there been an answer found for this solemn question: "How shall we escape?" Yes, answer oh, soul! Consider the matter well! How shall you escape if you neglect so great salvation? You cannot escape, for there is but one other than in Jesus, "for there is no other name under Heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved." Then let not neglect or any other thing hinder you from accepting the salvation which God so freely offers you. Let this question burn itself into your heart: "How shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation?"

HOW JAPANESE WRESTLE.

Their Style Differs Materially from That of the British and American Wrestlers.

At the suggestion of the president, "jujitsu," as the Japanese system of self-defense is called, will probably be adopted as a part of the regular athletic training of officers and enlisted men in the army, navy and marine corps, reports the Washington Star, of recent date. Steps have been already taken to introduce the art into the naval academy. In a letter recently sent to the superintendent of that institution, Rear Admiral Taylor, chief of the bureau of navigation, says that "the president, having expressed a desire that some attempt be made to give instruction in expert Japanese wrestling to the midshipmen of the naval academy, with a view to the possible adoption of this system as a part of the regular athletic training of midshipmen, and if results are favorable to enlisted men also, it is desired that you take some steps immediately in the direction indicated, as it would be very desirable to have some feat of this kind included in the annual athletic exhibition if sufficient progress can be made by them."

In accordance with this instruction, the superintendent of the naval academy has arranged to secure the services of certain competent Japanese instructors now in Washington to give midshipmen the desired instruction.

A short description of the Japanese method of wrestling is contained in a report recently made to the war department by Maj. Oliver E. Wood, of the artillery corps, a copy of which was furnished the president and formed the basis of his suggestion of the desirability of its adoption as part of the athletic training of future officers of the army and navy. According to Maj. Wood the art of "jujitsu," although it resembles wrestling, differs materially from the exercise as practiced in England and in America, its main principle being not to match strength with strength, but, rather, to gain a victory by yielding to strength.

"There are various ways of gaining victory," says Maj. Wood, "such as throwing heavily on the ground, choking the throat, holding down on the ground or pushing to a wall in such a way that an opponent cannot rise up or move freely, twisting or bending arms, legs or fingers in such a way that an opponent cannot bear pain, etc. There are various schools, and some of them practice all these methods, others only a few.

"The most important principle of throwing, as practiced, was to disturb the center of gravity of an opponent, and then pull or push in such a way that the opponent cannot stand, exerting skill rather than strength, so that he will lose his equilibrium and fall heavily to the ground. A series of rules was taught respecting the different motions of feet, legs, arms, hands, thighs and back in order to accomplish this object.

"Choking of opponent's throat was done by the hands, forearms or twisting the collar of opponent's dress round the throat. For holding down and pushing any part of the body was used. For twisting and bending the parts generally employed were the arms, hands and fingers, and sometimes the legs."

HOCK-TIDE ANNIVERSARY.

It Was Popular Among the English Previous to the Eighteenth Century.

The Monday and Tuesday following the second Sunday after Easter were, up to the beginning of the eighteenth century, celebrated in England as a popular anniversary, called Hoke-Tide, or Hock-Tide, says Golden Days.

Tuesday was considered the principal day. On that day it was the custom of the women to go along the streets and roads with cords, and bind all the men they met, holding the captives until a release was purchased by a small contribution of money.

On the Monday the men had proceeded in the same way with the women.

At Hungerford a few years ago some of the ancient and unique customs of Hock-Tide were renewed and observed in this manner:

The morn was ushered in by blasts blown from John of Gaunt's horn. The members of the Hock-Tide jury were sworn in by the town clerk, after which the constable (who is also coroner), the portreeve, the bailiff and the tuttimen were elected. Two tuttimen are elected each year, and their duties are quite unique, as on Hockney day they have to visit each house in the borough, and collect a coin of the realm from the males, and have a privilege of taking a kiss from each female.

These tuttimen carry long poles, adorned with choice flowers tied with blue streamers and surmounted with oranges. The tuttimen are followed by the school children, who all have a holiday on Hockney day. Each lady who receives a kiss is entitled to an orange. In this way, and in throwing to the children, about 4,000 oranges are distributed during the day.

Mamma Wouldn't Like It.

Worn out by a long series of appalling French exercises, wherein the blunders were as the sands of the sea, a hapless high-school mistress declared her intention of writing to Florence's mother.

Florence looked her teacher in the face. "Ma will be awfully angry," quoth Florence.

"I am afraid she will, but it is my duty to write to her, Florence."

"I don't know," said Florence, doubtfully. "You see, mother always does my French for me."

The teacher is wondering whether she will write.—Stray Stories.

A DO-NOTHING CONGRESS.

It Has Made Enormous Appropriations, But Has Passed No Useful Legislation.

The Fifty-eighth congress has been remarkable for what it has not done, and for the extraordinarily early date of adjournment. This anxiety on the part of the republicans to "go home," without attempting to legislate on matters other than appropriation bills, shows how feeble the g. o. p. has become under the present leadership. The democratic leaders in the house of representatives have made the most of their opportunities, and the republicans are like a lot of game chickens that have been thoroughly trounced and are quite willing to seek the seclusion of their districts, instead of still courageously facing the gaffs of their opponents. The republican leaders fear the people. They are bound to their trust and corporation idols, knowing they would be helpless without the material aid the monopolists furnish, but still they dread the virtuous indignation of the many who are suffering from trust extortion.

A large number of republican congressmen were pledged to reform those schedules of the tariff that fostered the trusts; others had engaged to urge reciprocity, but when they met in Washington the occult influence overshadowed them, and the promises to their constituents have gone for naught. The word came forth from the white house to pass the appropriation bills, confirm Crum, and adjourn as quickly as possible.

These republican congressmen have nothing to point to with pride. No statehood for the territories; no river and harbor bill; no public buildings bill; no investigation of post office or other scandals; the Smoot case hung up until after election; the Swayne impeachment postponed; the labor bills laid aside; important public land bills deferred; procrastination and political cowardice the order of the day—how can they explain this to their constituents?

A cowardly policy has never been approved by the people of America, nor, it is to be hoped, ever will be. All these great questions that the republican leaders have postponed "until after election," have two sides that cannot be compromised, but the republicans feared to face them.

The democrats are on the popular side, and the republicans are committed to the cause of the few, and yet have not dared to record their votes for the trusts and corporations. Indirectly the republicans have taken action against the people by not passing upon those matters that would have lightened their burdens, as reforming the tariff and reducing trust high prices would have done. The whole country favors a vigorous and far-reaching investigation of the scandals in the departments, but the republicans have unanimously voted against it.

A committee of congress has reported that Judge Swayne, of the United States court, has committed acts that deserve impeachment, but to stir up that scandal before election would "hurt the party," and the people of his district must, therefore, be left to his tender mercy. The remaining matters left undone may be characterized in the same manner.

When it comes to relating what this congress has done, the acts passed of a public nature are of but little advantage, if not detrimental to the people. The appropriations made are nearly $800,000,000, which will certainly make the total for the congress the greatest ever appropriated in a time of peace.

Provision was made for the extension of the coastwise shipping laws of the United States to the Philippine islands, which is virtually a subsidy to the ship trust, as it allows the ship owners to charge "all the traffic will bear," and will result in increasing the cost of binding twine to the farmers and of other Philippine products to those who purchase them. The other few public bills are of semi-local or restricted interest.

That is the record of the republicans, and each voter must answer at the polls next November, if he is satisfied with their stewardship, or vote to "turn the rascals out."

Good Time for a Change.

Now is the propitious moment for a change. Let us try the democrats for awhile. They have been long-suffering and patient. They have been persistent and virile in existence. For months and years they have looked forward to a new rising of a presidential sun. Candidly, and without flattery to anybody, they can be no worse than the republicans have become. Perhaps after they have enjoyed power for a matter of 20 or 25 years and have occasionally bleared their intellects and virtues with the intoxication of power it may be just and even generous to turn them out. But that will be when the great majority of the commanding men of to-day will have been called to an account even more rigid and condign than the voice of the electorate of the greatest republic the world has known.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

DEMOCRACY'S GREAT DUTY.

It Must Win This Year and in Order to Win It Must Be United Solidly.

In order to live and endure a party must demonstrate its usefulness. Democracy must either prove itself the agent of the people or resign its title before the world. Eventually it must either secure a restoration of the people's principles to governmental functions or relinquish its claim upon their allegiance and support. However virtuous may be the principles which it symbolizes, their mere excellence as abstractions cannot guarantee permanent party life. Principles survive by application and test. Parties survive by their serviceability.

The St. Louis Republic aptly says that democracy must conform and adapt itself to the country's demands, if it would continue as the great instrumentality of the people. It must sacrifice minor considerations, internal differences and questions of mere personality to the vital motive of practical serviceability. The great body of voters which represents political domination stands ready and eager to employ a democracy ordered upon the broad plan of national needs. The eye of the country is turned anxiously upon democracy. What will it do? Will it so solve its small internecine problems as to concentrate all its strength at the polls? Will it lend itself to the plain demands of the people? Inevitably it will suffer if it does not.

A great occasion is offered for an exercise of the power of genuine democracy. The national government is in control of a political organization which is un-American and antagonistic to the organic principles upon which our institutions are formed and our social body rests. The republican machine is a perversion of politics and political organization; an arrogation of power by corrupt means into the hands of an exclusive ring; its motive is perpetuation and further consolidation of control and its operation is palpably and directly inimical to rights in the most comprehensive sense. This centralization of power, as it may be called, is corrupt to the heart, essentially, as its pursuits have glaringly exhibited to the people during the eight republican years past.

The people are manifestly growing keen to liberate themselves from the rule of the trust-tariff boodle organization which has been guilty of such dire and costly abuses in administration and such menacing encroachments upon individual liberty. The people fear to intrust the nation's further keeping to the selfishness, reckl[illegible] trust-imperialism and opportunism of the Roosevelt regime, the trend of which is toward certain perils, both internationally and internally.

A safe, sane democracy never stood a better chance of winning. Let it proceed upon a common-sense basis with a view to present needs. Let it announce itself rationally both in its declarations and in its nomination of a candidate in whom all interests may repose confidence. Let it address itself to the issues so clearly and fixedly presented. The result cannot be otherwise than profitable.

Defeat surely awaits division. There is no hope for any other than a democratic party solidly united upon genuine, immediate, vital issues.

QUEEN HATSHEPSU'S TOMB.

The London Times has a description of the discovery, "thanks to the lavish expenditure and American tenacity of Theodore M. Davis," of an important tomb in the neighborhood of that of King Thotmes IV., of the eighteenth century dynasty, which was found in 1903 at Thebes.

Mr. Davis has discovered the tomb of the famous Queen Hatshepsu, the builder of the beautiful temple of Der-el-Bahari. It consists for the most part of a corridor sloping downward into the heart of a limestone mountain. After reaching three chambers, in spite of enormous difficulties, the burial chamber was found. Here are two sarcophagi of hard sandstones, polished like copper, covered with beautifully formed hierogiyphics, which say that one contained the mummy of Hatshepsu and her father, Thotmes I.

The lids of the sarcophagi lie on the floor. The sarcophagi are empty. Hatshepsu's mummy may be found in one of the unexplored side passages of the tombs, where, perhaps, it was deposited for the sake of safety in time of danger. The chamber is from 40 to 50 feet long. There are several side chambers which are still filled with fallen rock and rubbish, but it can be seen that they, as well as the chamber itself, are panelled with painted blocks of fine limestone.

WANTS TEN-YEAR DIVORCE.

Wife of an Indiana Editor Asks Court for Unique Decree of Separation.

Charles Martin, editor and publisher of the Westville (Ind.) Indicator, and a well-known northern Indiana politician and literary man, has been made defendant in a divorce action brought by his wife, Rose Martin, prominent in Indiana secret society circles, having served several terms as grand treasurer of the Rebekahs of Indiana.

The plaintiff alleges that her husband during 15 years of married life repeatedly beat and struck her, kicked her out of the house, dragged her around by her hair, permanently injured her, and made it necessary for her to remain in bed three months; refused to take her to church and social gatherings, refused to give her money to purchase clothing and necessaries, and instructed merchants not to sell things to her; told people she was insane, and refused to speak to her, and ignored her for months at a time.

A temporary separation for ten years is prayed, also $20 a week for support.

AFFINITY OF METEORITES.

Austrian Professor Declares They Are More Numerous in Mountainous Areas.

A total of 634 meteorites was known up to 1903, of which there were 182 irons and only 74 stones in the western hemisphere, and 299 stones and only 79 irons in the eastern hemisphere. The records show only the fall of 350 of these meteorites, dating back to the fifteenth century. Prof. Berwerth, of Vienna, despite this small number of known specimens, calculates that 900 meteorites must fall to the earth each year, not counting shooting stars that disappear in the atmosphere, and that 55 of these at least should come under observation. Prof. Berwerth finds that meteorites have been chiefly recorded in civilized countries, but that in many instances they are more numerous in thinly settled districts, and that they have an especial affinity for mountainous areas.

AS GOOD AS THE BEST.

The Dining Hour of the Best People Was His Eating Time as Well.

Gen. Reyes, the president of Colombia, attended a dinner party in New York before he sailed on the Kaiser Wilhelm for Paris recently, says the New York Tribune.

"They tell me," Gen. Reyes said at this dinner, "that the United States has its share of nouveaux riches—of new-rich persons. This may be so, but I am sure that the new-rich are to be found everywhere. I like them. They make, though, strange mistakes.

"There is a new-rich—a millionaire—in Panama. This gentleman engaged a butler the other day.

"'What time, sir,' said the new butler, 'would you wish to dine as a rule?'

"'What time do the best people dine?' said the new-rich.

"'At different times, sir,' the butler answered.

"'Very well,' said the new-rich. 'Then I, too, will dine at different times.'"

Gained Twenty Pounds.

Harford Mills, N. Y., May 16.—This neighborhood is aroused as never before by some wonderful cures by Dodd's Kidney Pills. These began with the case of Mrs. J. D. Wallace, who had been in very poor health for a long time and who had got so bad at last that she couldn't walk from her home to the village and back, a distance of about eighty rods, without being tired out and in pain all over.

She had only used a few of Dodd's Kidney Pills, when she noticed a change for the better and in a very short time she was able to walk any reasonable distance and do any kind of woman's work without feeling any bad effects.

She has gained twenty pounds in weight in three months and is now as well a woman as could be found. She declares the Dodd's Kidney Pills deserve all the credit for her wonderful restoration.

SOCIETY WRECKED HER LIFE.

In Society.

A woman in society is obliged to keep late hours. She must attend receptions and balls. She seldom allows herself a quiet evening at home. Her whole time is taken up in keeping engagements or entertaining in her own home.

Her system becomes completely run down as a consequence. She soon finds herself in a condition known as systemic catarrh. This has also been called catarrhal nervousness.

If every society woman could know the value of Peruna at such a time, if they could realize the invigorating, strengthening effect that Peruna would have, how much misery could be avoided.

Letters from society women all over the United States testify to the fact that Peruna is the tonic for a run down, depleted nervous system.

Gentlemen:—"A few years ago I had to give up social life entirely, as my health was completely broken down. The doctor advised a complete rest for a year. As this was out of the question for a time, I began to look for some other means of restoring my health.

"I had often heard of Peruna as an excellent tonic, so I bought a bottle to see what it would do for me, and it certainly took hold of my system and rejuvenated me, and in less than two months I was in perfect health, and now when I feel worn out or tired a dose or two of Peruna is all that I need."—Mrs. J. E. Finn.

Mrs. J. W. Reynolds, Elkton, Ohio, writes:

"I owe my health and life to Peruna. We rarely call in a physician, in fact it has been years since I have taken any other medicine than yours. I am afraid of drugs, and although I have been sick many times I have taken only your medicines. They are wonderful indeed. We have a very large house and entertain a great deal, and I do all my own work, thanks to Peruna."—Mrs. J. W. Reynolds.

THE MAN BEHIND THE GUN

Is our name for the patent Separating Grate and Check Plate in the famous RED RIVER SPECIAL THRESHER.

It has the Big Cylinder, with lots of concave and open grate surface.

The old-style thresher with its small cylinder and limited separating capacity, has stood for years without much improvement.

The RED RIVER SPECIAL is the crowning improvement in threshing machinery.

It is built for modern, up-to-date work; to thresh well; to thresh fast; to save time and grain and money for the thresherman and farmer. It does it. There are reasons why. Send for our new book on threshing, it gives them, and it is free.

The RED RIVER SPECIAL is the only machine that has the Man Behind the Gun, and it will save enough extra grain and time to pay your thresh bill.

As the modern self-binder is ahead of the old reaper of forty years ago, so is the Big Cylinder and Man Behind the Gun ahead of the small cylinder old-style thresher.

Besides these, it has all the separating capacity of other machines.

Why not save the grain ordinarily put into the straw stack? Why not save the time which the ordinary threshing outfit wastes for you?

This can be done by employing the RED RIVER SPECIAL.

BEGGS' BLOOD PURIFIER CURES catarrh at the

BOONE CO., RECORDER.
Wednesday, - - May 18, 1904.
W. L. RIDDELL, - - Publisher.

It may turnout that the Seventh District Congressional convention bit off more than it can "chaw."

Of the 392 delegates selected to the national Democratic convention to date, Parker has 122; Hearst, 52; Olney, 32, leaving 186 uninstructed.

Quite a number of the county papers in this State are advocating the nomination of W. R. Hearst as the Democratic candidate for the presidency.

The first step in drafting a new revenue law for Kentucky has been taken by the committee appointed by the State Senate at the last session of the Legislature.

Senator Fleming, whom the Republican rump convention nominated for Congress, in this district, declined to accept the nomination, and is in time for his party's nominee.

If indications are reliable the approaching Democratic State convention is going to be a warm number. All sorts of combinations are being made by slick ones to get control of the party machinery for the next four years.

The Illinois Republican State convention, held last week, in the matter of rowdyism, was the equal of the Democratic Music Hall convention held in Louisville, a few years ago. In the Illinois convention the colored brother was very much in evidence with his voice and club.

At the Democratic State Convention in Indianapolis, Indiana, last Thursday, the delegation to the National Convention was instructed for Alton B. Parker for the presidential nomination and the unit rule was prescribed to govern them. In spite of the noisy claims of strength made by the Hearst managers, the New York newspaper man was run over and completely flattened out, not a single issue contended for by him having been successful.

On June 4th a Democratic mass convention will be held in each county in this State to select delegates to attend the State convention in Louisville on June 8. At the Louisville convention the Kentucky delegation to the national Democrati cconvention will be selected, and the party machinery adjusted for the next four years, which makes the action of that assemblage of delegates of very great importance, as upon the wisdom of the leaders whom that convention installs depends the future supremacy of the Democratic party in Kentucky.

The Seventh District Congressional convention which met at Lexington, last Thursday, was a very remarkable aggregation from any standpoint from which it is viewed. About the first thing the managers did was to nominate Hon. South Trimble not to be a candidate for a renomination two years hence, and then they proceeded to parcel out all the district nominations in sight for several years to come. Senator Campbell Cantrill, to whom the delegates gave the nomination for Congress, had his hands so thoroughly tied by trades he had made with the other candidates in the interest of his father's candidacy for Judge of the Court of Appeals, that he had to mount the stand and refuse to accept the prize which the people of the district thought he really wanted. Trimble was then nominated in accordance with the trades that had been made. If the gang of political brokers who handled the Lexington convention are not sit down on hard by the Democratic votes in the appellate primaries, which they sought to control, it will be positive proof that they do not want to, or are not capable of choosing their nominees for offices. Such corruption as that developed by the Lexington convention is intended to rob the rank and file of the party of its rights, and will continue to increase in this State until those to whom party management is entrusted are taught that they belong to the party and not the party to them. The individual voters have it in their power to correct the abuses of which the Lexington convention was guilty, and the time is not far distant when they will take the matter in hand.

Tobacco Commercial Tribune.

The association of Burley leaf tobacco dealers will bring suit against the Tobacco Trust.

This suit will virtually involve every tobacco dealer who has given option to the Trust on his last season's crop of burley.

The association's attorneys have already mapped out a line of action, and the main contention will be that these options were secured by dark-lantern methods.

The Sherman anti-trust law also will be pressed, and other important information, it is claimed, is not lacking to bring about a decisive victory for the tobacco men.

The attorneys for the association declines to discuss their probable moves, and others interested also seem to be disinclined to talk for the present.

The tobacco trade as a whole is greatly pleased at the new turn in the tobacco situation, and it is generally believed the association will win its case hands down.

Should this happen all the tobacco will come to the market and be sold in the usual way.

One of the big warehouse men stated to the Commercial Tribune:

"We shall have nothing to do with this suit. I was asked to participate, but declined, owing to the delicate position it would place me in.

"There are many bright, able men among the country tobacco dealers, and I am sure they will take good care of their interests without assistance from the warehouses.

"I believe in fair play, justice and all that, and I'm in hopes that instead of tobacco looking like a graveyard during the coming summer and fall we will continue in business activity and have a booming market throughout this period."

Another large retailer said he would wager $100,000 the Trust will not get all its option purchases in the country. Continueing, he said:

"It was the silliest thing the Trust could have done. It has shown its hand so plainly and got the options in such bungling manner by fraud and otherwise that it won't have a leg to stand on when Uncle Sam gets through with the Trust.

"Like all fair-minded men, I want to see this tobacco put up on the brakes and permit all the buyers to compete for it."

Tobacco is hanging up in dealers' barns, not in condition to take down, and since they are busy looking after farm work, dealers say it will be a long time before they can give attention to the weed in their handling houses. The suit against the Trust will also keep the shippers on edge.

The Hudgens Company's new map of Kentucky, recently issued contains more interesting material. It is supposed to contain the name of every village in the State having a population as large as one. Printed on the map are more than a dozen villages having an aggregate population of less than 100 souls. The two smallest places given are Ocum, in the lower edge of Russell county, and Tribune, in Crittenden county, each with a population of one soul, whether man woman or child, is not given. In comparison with these villages, Kessinger, Hart county, is fairly popular, having four souls to its credit, which gives it a population twice as great as the combined population of Ocum and Tribune, and a population greater than that of Onedia, Clay county, or Joy, Livingston county to the credit of each of which is placed a population of three. Monica, Lee county, and Abbott, Trimble county, have each a population of five.

The smallest county in point of population is Robertson, which is supposed to contain 4,000 people, of which 128 are colored. Mt. Olivet is its county seat, and it contains 210 square miles.

Only one negro could be found in the entire county of Johnson, which is credited with 13,729 white people. It is presumed he or she has become lonesome by now, and has perhaps, left the county. Only two negroes were found in Elliott county, which boasts a total population of 10,385.

The smallest county in the State is Fulton with an arear of 130 square miles,

The largest county is Pulaski, which contains 870 square miles. The most populous county is Jefferson which has a population of 232,549.

CROP AND STOCK.

Judging from the reports that we hear on all sides the tobacco growers of Pendleton county will give almost united support to the Burley Tobacco Growers' Association movement. Realizing as they do that every tobacco grower in Pendleton county last year lost from one hundred to five hundred dollars by reason of the failure of that movement, they now know their mistake and see the great good to be accomplished by organizing. There has never been a doubt in our mind about the wisdom of such an undertaking and we are gratified to know that the farmers are beginning to see that it is possible for them to become masters of the tobacco situation by a thorough organization. By united, determined and decisive action they can at least demand and receive a fair and living price for their tobacco output and not be at the absolute mercy of the trust. The opportunity is now. Are you equal to the emergency tobacco growers? Success or failure rests with you.—Pendletonian.

The total production of gold from the mines of the world for 410 years is officially given at $10,693,236,302. The total production of gold from the mines of the United States since its discovery is given at $2,539,503,140. of this $2,507,010,492 was of the meridian of Denver.

There were at least fifteen—maybe twenty—good horses sold here Monday at prices ranging from $100 to $225 each. Grant county, by the way, is the home of some pretty good horses and horsemen.—Williamstown Courier.

Wool has reached the sensational price of 23 cents a pound, which is four cents higher than last year, and higher than for several years.—Blue Grass Clipper.

If a boy should come from the heart of a city, says the farmer, who had neither seen nor heard of a cow before, how would he describe it as it is seen at this time of the year on many of our Minnesota farms? His observations would lead him to say that it was used as a sort of scavenger to keep things picked up about the fields in winter time, to pull the branches off the corn stalks and trim up and bore into the straw piles, and while not at work stands on the leeward side of the strawstacks or in the fence corner with its rudder to the wind. It has a hump similar to a dromedary, only more rounding. It has hair like most other animals, except that it stands up more, and on its flanks it has no hair at all, but scales like an igator. It doesn't seem at all satisfied with life, but stamps its feet, shakes its head and acts mad.

Henry Quick is very much of a bank wrecker, but he goes about it in a way that does not render him amenable to the law. His work on the Boone County Deposit Bank building, yesterday, made it look like it had been dynamited.

Considerable interest is manifested on this side of the river in the Gillespie trial now in progress in Rising Sun. The new Ohio marriage law as amended and passed by the Legislature of that State "provides that the bride must have lived sixty days in the county where license is asked; that both bride and groom appear in court, that drunkards and imbecile, persons be refused license." This act of our neighboring State will of necessity retard Kentucky elopers from crossing the Ohio.

Whooping Cough.

"In the spring of 1901 my children had whooping cough," says Mrs. D. W. Capps, of Capps, Ala. "I used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy with the most satisfactory results. I think this is the best remedy I have ever seen for whooping cough." This remedy keeps the cough loose, lessens the severity and frequency of the whooping spells and counteracts any tendency toward pneumonia. For sale by all Druggists.

While the candidates for county offices in some of the neighboring counties have already been nominated, and in other counties they are busy chasing the festive voter, in this county they are very modest and no fuss has been made about the matter. This is as it should be. There is no necessity of a primary until next spring, and six months is long enough to canvass the county without being hurried. Give us a good rest and we will listen to your tale of woe with more patience.—Pendletonian

Same here, say the Boone county voters if the RECORDER is permitted to voice their feeling in the matter, although there is no tendency on the part of some to precipitate the canvass.

[Cincinnati Enquirer, Friday, May 13.]

Rev. James A. Kirtley, of Petersburg, Boone County, Ky., and Miss Maude Duval, only daughter of Mrs. B. V. Duval, of Terrace Park, Hamilton County, Ohio, formerly of Owenton, Ky., were quietly married in the parlors of the Grand Hotel at 6 o'clock last evening, in the presence of several members of both families, Rev. G. Ferris Patton officiating. A delightful dinner was enjoyed by the guests, after the ceremony, in the private dining room of the hotel, and later the happy young couple left for Nashville, Tenn., to attend the Southern Baptist Convention.

The wedding was announced for last January, but was postponed, owing to Mr. Kirtley's illness, followed by the death of his father, Rev. James A. Kirtley, D. D.

Mr. Kirtley, who was connected with the work of the Ninth Street Baptist Church of this city for a time, is a graduate of the Georgetown, (Ky.) College, the Virginia University and the Louisville Baptist Seminary. The bride is a fine type of the beauty for which the Blue Grass State is famous, talented and popular in social circles.

The bride and groom belong to large and influential families in their state, and the wedding would have been a prominent social event but for the death of the groom's father a short time ago.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and, therefore, requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address,

GILLESPIE MURDER.

A Jury Secured, Consisting Mostly of Farmers—Prominent Legal Talent Has Been Employed on Both Sides.

Rising Sun, Ind., May 10.—The famous Gillespie murder case has at last come to trial. When Judge Downey formally opened court, the little hall of justice was crowded with excited spectators, who stood in crowds to get a glimpse of the four prisoners—Jas. Gillespie, Mr. and Mrs. Myron Barhour and Mrs. Belle Seward, who are charged with the murder of Miss Elizabeth Gillespie, twin sister of James.

Rising Sun, Ind., May 11.—In the Gillespie case the work of securing a jury was resumed at 9 o'clock Tuesday morning. The first peremptory challenge by the state excused James Hulhert, a farmer.

A jury was finall secured, as follows: Albert Patey, farmer; David Bailey, farmer; David H. Gibson, farmer; George Reiman, farmer; W. J. Powell, farmer; Hugh French, farmer; W. J. Spalding, farmer; H. W. Neaman, farmer; Sherman Clark, mechanic; W. O. Powell, retired farmer; Henry Kurr, shoe dealer; Wade H. Rodgers, farmer.

Rising Sun, Ind., May 12.—There was a change in the personnel of the jury in the Gillespie case. It has been proved that Oscar Jones, a sworn juror, is a third cousin of Mrs. Belle Seward, one of the defendants. Attorney Spaan's motion to remove Jones from the jury was sustained by Judge Downey. The motion was a long typewritten document, and recited that Oscar Jones' mother was a first cousin of the mother of William Seward, husband of Belle Seward, one of the defendants in the present case. William Seward is dead, but Attorney Spaan cited precedents and authorities to show that the relationship still continues. In fact, he proved that in Indiana relationship continues up to the fifth degree, and is recognized in court.

Rising Sun, Ind., May 13.—The jury finally secured in the Gillespie trial is as follows: Albert Pate, David Bailey, David H. Gibson, George Reiman, W. J. Spauiding, Hugh French, William Ward, Martin Scranton, Samuel Campbell, sr., farmer; J. S. Thompson, engineer; Ira Powell, farmer; J. P. Hanna, farmer. The last four are new jurors. Before the testimony started the jury was sent to view the premises where the tragedy occurred.

Because of the display of temper of James Gillespie Wednesday afternoon, when being taken to jail, Judge Downey has ordered a special deputy to accompany Sheriff Rump with the prisoner to and from the courtroom. Gillespie was angered at an attempt to secure a snapshot photo, and stooped as though to secure a stone. Rump caught him and hurried him to jail.

Rising Sun, Ind., May 14.—Mrs. Margaret Gillespie, mother of James Gillespie, was placed on the stand as the first witness. She sat beside Jim when she entered the courtroom, and seemed fairly well composed. In answer to questions by Harry McMullen, one of the attorneys for the prosecution, she stated that she will be 80 years of age on June 2. She has been a widow 11 years. She said that Jim and Elizabeth were twins. Jim is now 38 years of age. He left home three or four years ago, saying that "he had a good home across the street." She had known the Barbours for years.

She detailed the events of the night, preceding the shooting, and told of the sound of the shot, which she mistook for a fearful explosion. "I thought of Elizabeth in the front room, and called to her. I received no response. Then I ran into the room. I had been sitting in the sitting room, behind the door. Had I been standing in the door, I would have been shot, too. I found Elizabeth lying at my feet in the parlor. I ran to the rear and called for help to the neighbors. There was no response. Then I ran into the front room, and taking Elizabeth's head in my lap, I bathed the awful wound."

"I then ran to the front door and called for Myron Barbour. After a time he came. When he entered the house he exclaimed, 'My God.'"

In answer to a question, she said that what seemed to be a long time elapsed after her calling for Barbour, before he came.

With no show of emotion she told of the manner in which the blood from her murdered daughter stained the carpet on the parlor floor, which still remains.

The boat was without centerboard or air tanks and, being caught by a strong gust of wind, capsized and sank immediately. The five young men struggled in the water for about 20 minutes before succor reached them from another academy boat containing several other midshipmen. As the rescuing sailboat came near oars were thrown to the struggling men, but Midshipman Brittingham was unable to grasp his. Midshipman C. T. Blackburn, who was in the second boat, plunged overboard and in his heroic attempt to rescue his drowning classmate was dragged under. Both came to the surface and Midshipman R. R. Steuart bravely went to the assistance of Blackburn. Their combined efforts proved unavailing, and Brittingham sank in 17 feet of water. The other four midshipmen were picked up and the rescuers dove overboard in repeated but unsuccessful efforts to find the body. Midshipman Brittingham was 19 years of age and a son of Rev. S. Ede, jr., and C. T. Tilsman, of Chicago, were precipitated from the car into the swollen stream and drowned.

BAD DREAMS

Indicate Improper Diet, Usually Due to Coffee.

One of the common symptoms of coffee poisoning is the bad dreams that spoil what should be restful sleep. A man who found the reason says:

"Formerly I was a slave to coffee. I was like a [illegible] could not sleep at night, would roll and toss in my bed and when I did get to sleep was disturbed by dreams and hobgoblins, would wake up with headaches and feel bad all day, so nervous I could not attend to business. My writing looked like bird tracks, I had sour belchings from the stomach, indigestion, heartburn and palpitation of the heart, constipation, irregularity of the kidneys, etc.

"Indeed, I began to feel I had all the troubles that human flesh could suffer, but when a friend advised me to leave off coffee I felt as if he had insulted me. I could not bear the idea, it had such a hold on me and I refused to believe it the cause.

"But it turned out that no advice was ever given at a more needed time, for I finally consented to try Postum, and with the going of coffee and the coming of Postum all my troubles have gone and health has returned. I eat and sleep well now, nerves steadied down and I write a fair hand (as you can see), can attend to business again and rejoice that I am free from the monster Coffee." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Ten days trial of Postum in place of coffee will bring sound, restful, refreshing sleep. There's a reason.

Japs Concentrating Their Forces With Siege Guns.

Repetition of the Strategy of the United States Army and Navy Before Santiago De Cuba Will Be Attempted.

Shan Hai Kwan, May 13.—A report received from London that there has been fighting at Wu-Fung-Tien is discredited here. It is reported that there is only a small Japanese force in that vicinity.

The main force of the Japanese is said to be concentrated near Port Arthur with siege guns and their intention is believed to be to attempt a repetition of the strategy of the naval and military forces of the United States before Santiago and to drive the Russian fleet out to battle.

The censorship at New Chwang is severe. United States Consul Miller has not been allowed to answer Minister Conger's request for a statement as to the local situation.

Liao Yang, May 14.—The advance guard of the first Japanese army has appeared six miles below Lien Chen Kuan on the road to Liao Yang. It is not making any further advance, but is erecting strong fortifications. The Japanese movements were made with the greatest care.

A persistent report is current here that a Russian squadron of cavalry succeeded in getting behind the Japanese, who were several squadrons strong, and occupying Kuan Dian San. The unexpected appearance of the Russians caused the Japanese to immediately evacuate the town and retire toward the Yalu. The report is believed to be correct.

Col. Elshen, who has returned from a reconnoissance of the district near the River Taitsi, was attacked May 8 by Chinese handits. One Cossack and two porters were killed by the bandits who were driven off.

St. Petersburg, May 14.—Grave fears have been aroused in official circles by the second dispatch from Viceroy Alexieff announcing that after the engineers had blown up the docks and warehouses in Dalny the entire town was destroyed. This action is taken to indicate a desperate situation, as it is held no ordinary danger could have induced the destruction of the magnificent city built on the order of the czar at heavy expense.

Mukden, May 14.—Pu-La-Tien (near Port Adams, Liao-Tung peninsula) has again been occupied by the Japanese. Communication with Port Arthur is interrupted.

London, May 14.—The Daily Mail Saturday morning published a dispatch from Constantinople according to which Russia is concentrating troops just beyond the Caucasus. The most reliable information, the dispatch says, fixes the present total number of troops at 125,000.

A dispatch to the Reuter Telegram Co. from Tokio says the Japanese torpedo boat No. 48 was destroyed Thursday while removing mines in Kerr bay, north of Talien Wan. The casualties were seven killed and seven injured. This, adds the correspondent, is the first war vessel Japan has lost.

Shan Hai Kwan, May 14.—A parcel which left Port Arthur May 10 arrived here Saturday apparently confirming the report that communication with Port Arthur had been restored. There is only vague rumors bore of Japanese movements.

It is stated that the heavy loss sustained by the Russians in the battle of the Yalu was due to the inability to control the soldiers. They were ordered merely to develop the enemy's strength, but they rushed headlong against a superior force and were crushed back by a sheer weight of numbers.

Vancouver, B. C., May 14.—Advices received from Japan by the steamer Empress of India indicate that the hotting up of the harbor at Port Arthur has cost the Japanese government $1,241,000 for tramp steamers alone, beside enormous sums for ammunition, repairs, etc. Up to the time of the departure of the Empress of India nine tramp steamers have been used in the bottling up process.

Liao Yang, May 16.—The Russian fleet scored its first distinct naval success of the war on May 10 by the torpedoing and crippling, though not sinking, of an armored Japanese cruiser in Talienwan bay.

The Russian attack was [illegible] timed on May 10 while the Japanese squadron was concentrated outside Dalny, devoting its whole attention to the Talienwan bay, and was carried out the same night.

The attacking force was not a regular torpedo boat, but was only a small naphtha launch in command of a young naval officer who had with him three jackies. The launch mounted a small machine gun and carried three torpedoes.

When darkness fell the launch crept out of Port Arthur, hugging the shore with no lights aboard and no glow from the engines to betray her presence. It was late when she gained [illegible] a big armored cruiser stole towards her and succeeded in exploding against her side a single torpedo. A deafening roar followed the explosion which echoed far ashore. Immediately flames enveloped the cruiser which evidently was badly crippled.

The crew of the cruiser was seen to be fighting the fire, which they at last succeeded in extinguishing. A sister ship took the damaged vessel in tow and disappeared to the southeast.

The launch escaped the hot fire directed against her by the Japanese ships, but being unable to return to Port Arthur or to get into Dalny, she was beached not far from Dalny.

Only a few of the higher officers were aware of the plan, the success of which depended upon secrecy. The achievement raised the spirits of the Russians afloat and ashore, and the young naval officer who was the hero of the exploit was feted and recommended for the Cross of St. George.

The Russians, on May 11, apprehending that the presence of a Japanese squadron meant an attempt to capture Dalny, blew up the piers and quietly evacuated the place.

Two thousand Japanese have reoccupied the road to Sanchilipu, again cutting off Port Arthur. A strong force is advancing against Poiandien.

CHINESE HOSTILITY.

It Causes a Great Deal of Apprehension in St. Petersburg.

St. Petersburg, May 16.—In view of the official dispatches regarding the hostile attitude of the Chinese within and without the Russian sphere of influence, the authorities here do not conceal their apprehension as to the outlook, especially in the north of the empire, for they purpose to call the attention of the Celestial government to the impending uprising in Tapadzi-atsi in order that repressive measures may be instantly taken.

It is known and appreciated here that all the powers have made strong representations to Pekin in the interest of the preservation of the tranquility of the empire, but it is stated that Maj. Gen. Pflug's dispatch of May 14 shows the necessity for further impressing the Celestial government with the advisability of acting with a firm hand.

THE ASSAULT ON PORT ARTHUR.

It Will Be Attempted Before the End of May.

London, May 16.—No confirmation has reached London of the rumors of a great battle at Siu Yen and no attention whatever is paid to the wild reports of the fall of Port Arthur. In Japanese quarters here confidence is expressed that a great assault upon that fortress will be attempted before the end of May.

The correspondent of the Daily News at Che Foo says that he left Port Arthur last Tuesday, when the channel had been cleared, two cruisers having steamed outside. On May 7, he adds, the garrison there numbered 15,000 men and was provisioned for nine months.

AN INTERNATIONAL STRIKE.

One Is Being Considered By the Elevator Constructors.

Philadelphia, May 16.—Because the 700 elevator constructors now on strike in this city for increased wages and the right to go out on sympathetic strike has been ignored, it is claimed by the master elevator builders, the national board of the elevator constructors' union is contemplating an international strike. President Samuel Gompers and First Vice President James Duncan, of the American Federation of Labor, will meet the national board of the elevator men on Tuesday when the question will be determined. The strike in this city is against the combination of elevator builders which controls 75 per cent. of the work in the world. The bone of contention is the sympathetic strike principle.

Members of the national board said Sunday night they had cabled to elevator constructors in London, Berlin and Paris and had received assurances from London and Berlin that the men there will strike, if asked to. The men in those cities are not affiliated with the union in this country, but are employed by the combination which controls elevator [illegible] tion in the United States.

CHICAGO MACHINISTS.

Five Thousand of Them Voted to Go Out on Strike.

Chicago, May 16.—A strike by 5,000 machinists, which will make idle 5,000 other workers in all kinds of crafts, was voted for in mass meeting Sunday night by the machinists' union, to take effect Wednesday unless their demand for an increase of wages is granted by the Chicago Metal Trades' association, comprising the leading firms in the metal trades industry.

Lieut. Gen. Miles Praises the American Soldier.

Adm. Dewey, Speaking For the Navy, Said We Have the Best Ships, Officers and Men in the Whole World.

New York, May 14.—The annual meeting of the general court of the Order of the Founders and Patriots of America was held in the governor's room of the city hall here Friday on the 297th anniversary of the settlement of Jamestown. Gov. Gen. Col. Ralph Earl Prime presided.

Adm. George Dewey was elected governor general. At the dinner Gov. Robert B. Roosevelt, of the state society, presided. In a brief address Adm. Dewey said, in part:

"I don't know as we have any better navy than we had before, but we have better tools than we had a few years ago. Of course, the newspapers will say we have not, but take my word for it, we have the best ships and the best officers and the best men in the whole world. As to the enlisted men especially, we are getting the cream of the world and with such men ready and eager to fight, the other nations are going to let us alone. And in a few years to come the American people are going to have the very best navy in the world—not for aggression, but to protect our rights."

Gen. Miles, speaking in praise of the American soldier, said:

"It has been my privilege to see most of the armies of the world. I have studied carefully the armies of Japan and China and the soldiers of Russia and the success in the east today of the soldiers of the Mikado is due to their wonderful skill, the faithful performance of their duties and their remarkable enterprise. The Russian soldier is courageous in saying his prayers before going into battle and the same thing may be said of the soldiers of the sultan and I have found that on the battlefield its the fighting and not the praying that wins.

"Of all the armies of the world ours seems to differ in that the men are serving for a principle. Ours seem to feel that they are working for a free people—a republic in which every man is a sovereign and every woman a superior or sovereign. Our flag represents the sovereignty and the freedom of manhood. It is a pleasure as well as an honor to serve under it. I know this from my 40 years' experience as a soldier. In all that time there never was an hour of the day that it was not a pleasure to me to be in the service."

THE NEW AGE ORDER.

Nearly 25,000 Applications For Pensions Have Been Filed.

Topeka, Kan., May 14.—Eugene F. Ware, United States commissioner of pensions, reached Topeka Friday. Relative to the new age order of the pension bureau he said: "Applications for pensions under the new age order are now coming in. I presume 25,000 are already on file. Many of them have been filed under the mistaken idea that the age order means that the claimant will receive a second pension, that is, if the claimant is already receiving a pension and is over 62 that he is entitled to another. Nevertheless the number of applicants so far who will have their pensions raised $2 a month is probably 20,000.

"The amount which this order will cost the government has been grossly exaggerated. The great death rate among old soldiers will keep the pension roll in such shape that the increase in pension payments will not be perceptible to the tax payer."

It is pointed out that no excursions have been yet run to bring in visitors and the attendance at present is largely local, and also that the population of Chicago far exceeds that of St. Louis.

AN INVITATION AND ITS REJECTION

Suggestive Thoughts from the Appeal of Moses to Hobab, His Brother-in-Law.

Sermon by the "Highway and Byway" Preacher.

(Copyright, 1904, by J. M. Edson.)

Chicago, Sunday, May 22, 1904.

Text:—"And Moses said unto Hobab, the son of Reuel the Midianite, Moses' father-in-law: We are journeying unto the place of which Jehovah said, I will give it you: come thou with us, and we will do thee good; for Jehovah hath spoken good concerning Israel. And he said unto him, I will not go; but I will depart to mine own land, and to my kindred. And he said, Leave us not, I pray thee; for as much as thou knowest how we are to encamp in the wilderness, and thou shalt be to us instead of eyes. And it shall be, if thou go with us, yea, it shall be, that what good soever Jehovah shall do unto us, the same will we do unto thee."—Numbers 10:29-32.

OUR text brings before us a beautiful, yet sad picture. Moses pleading with his brother-in-law, Hobab, and Hobab indifferent and rejecting the appeal. Moses, the servant of God, earnestly seeking to prevail upon him to cast his lot with God's people and receive blessing. Moses, knowing by faith a better land, longing to lead Hobab to that place. Moses looking ahead; Hobab glancing behind. Moses with higher aspirations for God; Hobab satisfied with the things of this life, and the old home with its heathen associates. Moses rejoicing in God's promises; Hobah caring nothing for them. This is the picture we have before us. It suggests a servant of God seeking to influence a soul in the right direction. The helping hand reaching out to grasp the hand of him who is slipping down, down in sin in effort to save him. The invitation faithfully given; the pleading, loving and fervent; the promise of blessing, clear and certain. And in the face of it all, the unmoved heart; the unbending will; the fixed purpose to turn back; the reply: "I will not go." The world is full of Hobabs to-day. God's people plead with them to go with them to the promised land. They tell them of all the good which God has spoken concerning His children. They tell them of the goodness and blessing that will come to them if they will only go on the onward, upward journey with them. But the Hobabs have no ears to hear, no eyes to see, no heart to believe, and they turn back to the old way and the old life again. Even a Moses could not persuade Hobah, and even though an angel came from Heaven he would not be able to persuade some people to-day to go with God's people on the journey to the Celestial home. This story has its message for to-day. It is of the invitation given, and the invitation rejected. The disciples of Jesus pleading with sinners, and the sinners rejecting God's offer and going back to the life of sin.

I AM glad we have this picture of Moses—that great prophet and leader, the man who went upon the mountain top and talked face to face with God, and the man who came down again to rule God's people with a strong and mighty and wise hand—this was the man who, amidst the multitude of demands upon him, could pause and become the individual soul seeker. He was leading a great company of people up to the Promised Land, why should he be troubled about one soul who wanted to turn back? He had great responsibilities upon his shoulders, why should he take time to consider a single individual? But he did, and it is incumbent upon every one of Jesus' disciples to give the invitation, to make the appeal to the individual whom they find going in the wrong direction. The invitation may be treated in the way in which Moses' invitation was treated, but that must not deter the servant of Jesus from giving the message, from making the appeal. This is one of the discouraging features to Christian work—the many Hobabs turning back from God's people, and seeking the old way and the old life, human ties and earthly possessions proving stronger attractions than fellowship with God and His people and the sharing in the Divine inheritance. This Old Testament incident is rich in suggestive thought for to-day. God's people are on a journey to an eternal possession promised by God to them that love Him. There are many Hobabs (the unregenerate who do not belong to God's people), who mingle with God's people, who are familiar with God's promises and dealings with His children, but who after all are not of them. They belong back in the world, and as the time comes when they must choose which way they will go—forward or backward—they so often make Hobab's mistake and turn back to the things of this life instead of choosing Christ and eternal life.

AND first of all we wish to call attention to a very important point of difference which existed between Hobab and God's people, which would not be readily apparent, perhaps, just as there is a difference between the people of the world and Christians to-day which is not apparent to the world. The children of Israel had been redeemed ont of bondage in Egypt by the shedding of blood, but Hobab had never known that redemption which gave to the children of Israel a peculiar relationship to God. He had come from his home in Midian, and it pleased him to abide with God's people while they were encamped at Mount Sinai. He partook of the manna which God rained upon them, he beheld all the wonderful events as they transpired, the smoking of God from the burning, smoking mountain, the giving of the law, the rearing of the tabernacle, the organization of the priestly service and the sacrificial worship of the true God, and yet all this association and knowledge did not make him one of God's children. He was with the Jews, but not of the Jews. If he was to become a Jew and cast his lot in with them, he must be circumcised and come under the blood of the sacrificial lamb. But to have seen Hobab as he mingled with children of Israel and came and went from the midst of Moses' household, no striking difference would have been noted between him and God's people. And so it is to-day. In the midst of God's people there are the Hobabs who have not been redeemed by the precious blood of Christ. As to outward appearances and conduct they compare well and favorably with God's children, perhaps, but they are not journeying the same way. They belong back there in the world. And another thing about Hobab. His relationship to so good and great a man as Moses could not give him an inheritance in the Promised Land, any more than human ties and relationships to-day can become a passport to Heaven. The Godliest man who ever lived cannot bring into Heaven under his cloak the unregenerate loved one of his household. Each soul must stand by itself. Each soul must decide for itself its destiny.

WHAT great privilege and opportunity were Hobah's. Long association with God's people and the opportunity of going into the Promised Land with them. During those months of sojourn in the wilderness he became familiar with the history of God's wonderful dealings with Israel, he became conscious of the near approach of God in the smoking mountain, and the cloudy pillar, he heard the law and observed the suggestive tabernacle service, he knew God's promises, and beheld Moses' confident trust in them, and what a weight of responsibility rested upon him because of all this. If he had never come from his home in Midian, it would have been different; but now that he had, and had beheld the glory and majesty and purpose of God, how could he escape if he neglected so great opportunity. And the Hobabs of to-day are in the same perilous position. Think of your privilege of association with God's people. Consider how you have heard God's Word read, how you have shared in the worship and service, how you have beheld the saving power of God's Son manifested in other lives, how lives have been transformed and you have marked the change that has been wrought and have marveled thereat. Consider all this, and then remember how Jesus spoke His strongest denunciations of judgment against those places which had seen His greatest works, which had had the largest opportunities of knowing Him. Hobab had great privilege and opportunity in his sojourn with God's people, and he came under the greater condemnation for that very reason. And so it is with you, who mingle day after day with God's people and come under Christian influence, and hear and know the truth of God as it is in Christ Jesus. Yours is the privilege of knowing and understanding God's purpose for you; yours is the opportunity of joining with God's people and journeying with them to Heaven. Great privilege and opportunity, surely, and they will not always be yours. Some day your privilege will have been lost and your opportunity gone forever.

DECISION day came for Hobab, and it comes to every soul. One memorable day Moses came to his brother-in-law, and putting his arms around him and looking into his eyes with earnest, loving gaze he said: "Come, Hobab; come with us. Don't go back to the place concerning which God has given no promise of blessing, but go with us to the place God has promised to give us and where He has promised to bless us. Come with us and we will do thee good." And Hobab was brought face to face with the crisis in his life. He must decide whether he will go forward or backward, whether he will follow God and walk with God's people, or whether he will turn his back upon God and refuse longer to continue with God's people. Decision day comes to every soul. There comes a time when the earnestly spoken invitation brings the soul to the parting of the ways. There must be decision for Christ or for self. There must be a going back to the self-land and to the numerous kinsmen of the world, the flesh and the Devil, or a going forward with Christ as Saviour, and Guide and Leader. Moses' faithfulness to God and to his brother-in-law brought the crisis in the latter's life, and the faithfulness with which Christians deliver the message and the invitation determines how many precious souls will be brought to decide for Christ. Jesus said: "Come and see," to those two disciples of John who followed Him, and it brought decision day to them, for they followed and found the Christ. And then in turn they went out and gave the invitation and brought decision day to others. Andrew finds Peter, and John finds James. Philip goes after Nathaniel and begs him to come and see. And so it goes. The invitation brings the crisis in the life. It is either Hobab's answer: "I will not go," or it is decision for the Christ.

THERE were reasons why Hobab thought he could not accept Moses' invitation. There were barriers in the way. "My land and my kindred," he said, when Moses gave him God's offer of a better land and an everlasting fellowship with God's people. His land could not compare with the land to which God was leading His people. His friends in Midian could not be as helpful and desirable as companions and associates as the people who were walking with God, even though the journey took them through the wilderness and caused them to endure trial, and hardship, and danger. Barriers in the way. Hobab turning back to his own land and his own people. There are always barriers in the way to hinder the soul accepting Christ's invitation, and they are generally just what was hindering Hobab: Things and persons. Hobab could do things back in his own land he could not do in God's land. There he was his own master, and he could roam at pleasure and do as his own sweet will dictated. And the world to-day is full of just that kind of people. "My land" rather than God's land, because there every desire and whim may be gratified which is within the power of one to satisfy; because there, all the allurements and attractions of the world are to be found. "My people," rather than God's people, because they like the world equally well with yourself and help to make merry the passing moments. When it comes to a question of giving up the things of the world and the associates that are unwholesome, the soul hesitates. But why? Not because the soul has to give up more than it receives. No! for God calls you to go from the poor land of Midian to the land flowing with the milk and honey of His promises and blessing, and the friendships there are truer and better than any which can ever be found in the world. Ruth, choosing to leave her own land and people, where she was sure of comfort and plenty, and going with Naomi to the land of God's own people, gave up much, perhaps, but see what she received in return: Better friends than she left behind, a home and a husband, and an inheritance, and a posterity which prepared the way for the coming of the promised Messiah. Giving up? Yes, it means giving up "my land and my people," but it means more; it means the finding of a better land and a better people.

YES, and it means more than finding a better land and people, it means receiving a commission for larger and better service. Hobab need not return to Midian to find something worth his while to do. The invitation to go with God's people included a call to service. A new mission in life lay before him. To go with God's people meant that he would have a particular place to fill, an important duty to perform. God has no room for idlers. He invites you to yield yourself to Him, to accept Him as your Lord and Saviour, because He has something definite for you to do for Him and for the advancement of His Kingdom. Hobab had lived in that section of country through which the children of Israel were passing all his life. He knew every green patch of grass and every tiny stream, he knew the easy paths and could avoid the more difficult places in the journey. He was just the man Moses needed for guide and adviser on the journey. It has been wondered why, when Moses had the pillar of cloud of God's presence to lead the way, he should seek other help for the journey, but, as the commentators point out, it should be remembered that "the guidance of the cloud, though showing the general route to be taken through the trackless desert, would not be so minute as to point out the places where pasture, shade and water were to be obtained, and which were often hid in obscure spots by the shifting sands. Besides, several detachments were sent off from the main body, and the services of Hobah, not as a single Arab, but as a prince of a powerful clan, would have been exceedingly useful."

HOBAB missed his opportunity. Are you going to be as blind and indifferent as was he, and miss yours, too? In the face of all that God had done for His people, despite the evidence on every hand which he had while sojourning with the Israelites that God was with them and blessing them, notwithstanding the fact that all of God's promises gave assurance of blessing ahead, Hobab heartlessly, and heedlessly, and blindly declared: "I will not go." And how many there are who are displaying the folly of Hobab. Moses pleading with Hobab could not turn him from his course, and sometimes the Christian meets with the same sad experience when inviting some dear soul to come to Jesus. Hobab rejecting the invitation and turning from God passes into obscurity and death. Nothing more is ever heard of him. The place he might have occupied in the Promised Land was held by another. The mission he might have performed was fulfilled by another. The eternal blessing he might have obtained from God with the other faithful ones was lost to him. Would you have it so in your case? Would you lose your place in Heaven? Would you pass out of God's plans and God's reckoning? Or would you fill the place He intended you to occupy? Would you become heir to an eternal inheritance? Then do not reply as Hobab did to the invitation. Jesus says: "Come unto Me." And "he that cometh unto Me I will in no wise cast out." Then hear the invitation and come. "Come then with us," cry those who have already accepted the invitation, "for the Lord hath spoken good concerning His people." And "the Spirit and the bride say, come! and him that heareth let him say, come! And he that is athirst, let him come! He that will, let him take the Water of Life freely." COME!

ABOVE THEIR GRAVES.

Above their graves was once a bugle blown,
And in the dusk their battle-flag was furled
That all day long, far through the strife, had awirled
Till darkness more than night was overthrown.
Above their graves have silken flowers grown
Strange, alien birds are in the May-winds whirled;
And in strange climes they're hidden from the world
By dirt that cannot claim them for its own.
Our loving hearts outreach our weakling hands
And though we cannot save some vague regret
What time the ways are all a-blossom, yet,
Oh, dead of ours, lost in the sunlit lands,
Sleep on in peace, your battle-flag still waves
There in the sweet gulf-breese above your graves.

—John Dahl White, in Judge.

LITTLE DOROTHY'S TRIBUTE

By T. CELESTINE CUMMINGS

It was Decoration day. The ceremonies were over. The crowds were returning to the city. Off from the line of march, sitting upon the dusty roadside, was an old woman. Her dress was shabby. Tears were tracking themselves down the worn furrows of her face, while the great people marched by, the bands playing.

Suddenly little ten-year-old Dorothy spied this forlorn woman from the carriage as we were passing. "Stop!" she called in an imperious little voice, to the coachman. She was a spoiled child, so, of course, the driver obeyed instantly. Out jumped the eager little girl. She walked straight toward the aged woman and said: "What makes you cry?" "They didn't put no nosegays on Dick's grave!" the broken, pathetic voice answered. "Who's Dick?"

"My Dick wuz a soldier. He went to the war." By this time a crowd was gathering around the speakers. "When he 'listed, 'Oh, Dick,' I says, 'don't go! You pore boys will only git shot at. You're all I got. Don't go, Dick!' But he would go. He had got uniforms and buttons in his eyes. The fever of war wuz upon him, an' off he put 'fore ever I could git his clothes fixed. An' I never seen my pore boy no more! He got killed in the fust battle he fit; an' now they don't think n'uff ov him to put posies on his grave!" And then her sobs broke out afresh.

"STOP!" SHE CRIED AGAIN.

The child stood looking indignantly at the approaching column. "Where's his grave?" she asked, tears on her cheeks, which started in pity and rolled off in righteous wrath. "It's off a bit to itself." Dorothy interrupted her. "That's the reason, you see, why they didn't notice it." Up the road she ran on the cleared space, and stood right in the path of the grand marshal before anyone could stop her, her hat fallen off, held by a dangling ribbon, the tears still showing on her cheeks. "Stop!" she cried, again, this time to the general himself. He stopped short and listened to what Dorothy had to say.

"You forgot a grave!" she explained, impetuously. "Whose grave?" "Dick's." "I don't understand?" "Dick—well, I don't know his other name, but what mother does. There she sits crying because you don't put any flowers on his grave. Dick was a soldier. I told her you didn't mean to slight him. Hasn't Dick a right to flowers on his grave?" —and—ready to cry again, but still undaunted—"you'll have to go back and put some on it."

The people heard, and their voices rent the air with applause. The grand marshal called his orderly, and whispered some instructions to him. The orderly lifted Dorothy on his saddle and galloped across to the old woman. Her tottering, ill-clad form was helped into the carriage with the child. Beside them rode the orderly, and behind them the grand marshal, and his retinue—even the people must needs return to put some posies on "Dick's grave."—Orange Judd Farmer.

The Way to Happiness.

Rightly understood, happiness not only is our aim, but is plainly intended to be such by our Creator. He made us to be happy; the whole bearing of revealed religion is to make us happy. Of course, the man who grasps at selfish enjoyment turns his back on happiness—self-sacrifice and exertion, where needful, are the way to happiness.—A. H. K. Boyd.

Lessening the Sentence.

A judge in Vienna recently had before him a prisoner against whom there were 400 charges of theft. He was convicted of all of them, and if he had been sentenced for the full term of punishment he would be doomed to 2,500 years' imprisonment; but the judge's heart melted, and, in passing sentence, he took off 1,000 years.—London Tit-Bits.

Waterproof Taffeta.

Waterproof taffeta, soft as foulard, is one of the most popular materials for summer short waist suits. A watered or gleaming moire finish distinguishes a pretty effect in this new stuff. Being waterproof, as well as attractive, this fabric is practical as well as pretty.—Detroit Free Press.

WHAT THE KING EATS.

What's Fit for Him.

A Massachusetts lady who has been through the mill with the trials of the usual house[illegible] another relates an interesting incident that occurred not long ago. She says:

"I can with all truthfulness say that Grape-Nuts is the most beneficial of all cereal foods in my family, young as well as old. It is food and medicine both to us. A few mornings ago at breakfast my little boy said:

"'Mamma, does the king eat Grape-Nuts very morning?'

"I smiled and told him I did not know, but that I thought Grape-Nuts certainly made a delicious dish, fit for a king." (It's a fact that the king of England and the German emperor both eat Grape-Nuts.)

"I find that by the constant use of Grape-Nuts not only as a morning cereal but also in puddings, salads, etc., made after the delicious recipes found in the little book in each package it is proving to be a great nerve food for me, besides having completely cured a long standing case of indigestion." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

There is no doubt Grape-Nuts is the most scientific food in the world.

Ten days trial of this proper food in place of improper food will show in steady, strong nerves, sharper brain [illegible] and accomplish more. There's a reason.

I'm just a poor old veteran, I'm bent and stiffened gray,
But once again they think of me, on Decoration day.
They call me "patriotic" then, and let me march again
With my few comrades who are left, and call us "countrymen."
Once more I feel the old time thrill that's always sure to come
When'e'er my ear detects the stirring sound of fife and drum;
The years roll from me all at once, I'm ready for the fray!—
But soft, the country rests in peace, 'tis Decoration Day.

We march, a remnant of the ranks that marched so long ago,
Our coats as blue, our hearts as true, but heads with touch of snow.
We march, but now no duty calls us on with hurrying feet,
And fear no longer marks the faces lined along the street.
We carry now no loaded guns, there is no call to fight,
But in our hands are garlands fair of blossoms sweet and bright.
They are the tributes that we bear on comrades' graves to lay,
Remembrance of a nation's love on Decoration day.

The children they are marching, too, a sunny band of youth,
With faces fairer than the day and hearts of trust and truth;
Ah, little do they know the strife and pain we faced for them,
Or every flower that now they bear would seem a diadem.
We may be "veterans," but there's a fondness in the heart
For something more than this display in which we have a part.
We ask no idle boast of praise, but all along the way
A bit of this same sweetness found on Decoration day

There's something sweeter than the flowers—remembrance and a smile
Have power to cheer with thought so dear it lingers all the while;
A kind word as you go along, a tender touch of cape,
Are better when you're growing old than princely homes to share.
I love these patriotic times, they stir my heart with pride,
And there's a sweetness in them that I never have denied;
But we are more than soldiers, friends —yes, more than vet'rans gray;
We need your love and tenderness to cheer us every day.

ONLY ONE OF MANY

A Decoration Day Story

By ALMA J. NOBLE

"Good morning, Aunt Ruth. You see I am on hand bright and early for the lilacs. Aren't we going to have a beautiful day?" said Antoinette, cheerily, seeming to have caught the contagion of the bright May morning.

"I am so glad it is pleasant, for I well remember how rainy it was last Decoration day. I'm sorry the lilacs are a little backward this year; still, I think we shall find enough for a fair showing. Did you bring a basket?"

"I did. The self-same one that has done service for the last three years. Ralph is coming for me about 11 o'clock."

With that they started for the garden.

Everybody knew Aunt Ruth, and none knew her but to love her. She was one of those elderly women—shall we say, rare?—who had preserved a sweet, happy nature, free from disagreeable habits, both of speech and manner. Although over 60 years old, she still possessed that blessed faculty of adaptability which made her a coveted companion of both young and old. Children were attracted by her cookie jar and a fund of delightful stories, while those of maturer years were charmed with her personality and her entertaining conversation, which ever sparkled with subtle humor, despite an unmistakable undercurrent of sadness, which at times betrayed itself in her face.

Antoinette Rathbun was particularly fond of Aunt Ruth, and many happy hours they spent together, reading or discussing the various questions of the day.

Antoinette was just now in a most beatific state of mind. That which makes the world go round had touched her life and imparted to it fresh enthusiasm and delight, and this Decoration day morning she seemed unusually happy.

"After all, Aunt Ruth," she said, "there is no season of the year quite so beautiful to me as the springtime, when everything seems fairly bursting with life and delighting in life."

"Ah, my dear, it is because you are just now in the springtime of life yourself. You seem to me very like that little shrub yonder, the buds just peeping out which shall so soon unfold into the perfect flower. So do I see in you the possibilities of a beautiful and noble womanhood. But haven't we enough lilacs? The sun is so warm!"

"Yes, indeed, we have, and I don't care to rob you, even for a good cause, I am relying upon the girls for a goodly supply."

"It's your Sunday-school class, isn't it?"

"Yes," answered Antoinette. "Aunt Ruth, won't you go with us? That would make our party complete. Do say yes."

"No, I would rather go alone. I am glad, though, that you are interesting your class this way, for it seems to me that children in these days have too little patriotic spirit, and too little appreciation of the cost of liberty. The decoration of the soldiers' graves means little more to them than a half-holiday from school and a happy time gathering flowers. After all, I guess it is better so. Let them have all the [illegible] soon enough to all of us."

"Aunt Ruth," said Antoinette, tenderly, "I've wanted to ask you something for a long time, but I don't know that I ought."

"Certainly you may. What is it?"

"Will you tell me whose grave you visit so much, and on which you always put such lovely flowers Decoration day?"

"You will be surprised, my dear, when I tell you that I do not know. It is an unknown grave, but all I needed to know was that he was a soldier. When did you say Ralph was coming?"

"Not till eleven."

"Then come into the sitting-room, where it is cool, and let me tell you a bit of my own life. Somehow, I feel just like it this morning."

They laid down their flowers and enjoyed the restfulness of the cozy room.

"I'm going to lie down," said Aunt Ruth, "and you bring the hassock and sit right beside me, and let me tell you what is in my heart.

"When you came in this morning so happy and light-hearted, my thoughts flew back 30 years, when I was about your age, and had just as much to make me happy as you have now. I was engaged to a noble man, and, strangely enough, his name was Ralph, too. He was a lawyer, and his fine mind gave promise of a brilliant career. We were to have been married in the spring of '62, but when the war broke out his country's call appealed to his noblest manhood. He didn't say much at first, but I knew that the only obstacle in the way of his enlisting was the pain it would give me. He was perfectly well and strong, an added reason for his going. Ah, well do I remember the night we settled it! How earnestly and tenderly he talked about it! In a few days he was gone. It took more courage than I then thought to make that sacrifice, but my sense of duty to country would not allow me to withhold the word. He joined the Fiftieth New York volunteer engineers, company G, and at first had an easy time. The letters were bright and cheery and full of enthusiasm, so that after a time I grew less anxious and more and more glad that he went. But there came a day when the regular letter failed, and a week passed; and another, and another, and finally one came in an unfamiliar hand and told the story I so much feared. They thought he was killed in the battle of Gettysburg, in the desperate charge at the 'Bloody Angle,' where so many brave men on both sides gave up their lives, but diligent search brought nothing more definite. I sometimes wonder how I have lived through all these long 30 years, but you know we poor mortals can endure more than we think. I have much that is pleasant to look back upon, and much in the future to dream of. And now, about that lonely grave. He was a soldier, too, and there was no one to care for him, so I love to place my flowers there, and cannot help feeling that perhaps another is doing the same for Ralph."

A whistle interrupted the story, and Antoinette stooped to kiss the dear old lady, and in a moment was gone.

Late that afternoon, after Antoinette's class had gone and the cemetery was quite deserted, Ralph and Antoinette lingered at a little distance from that grave, quite unobserved by Aunt Ruth, and watched her arrange the flowers.

"Do you know?" said Ralph, "I never saw anything more pathetic. The men who enlisted and fought with courage and fearlessness were indeed brave heroes, but not an atom more heroic than the women who gave their husbands and sons and lovers to die for their country, and have lived [illegible] and cheerfully hiding their loneliness and ache behind a happy face. All honor to them!"—Farmers' Review.

IT WAS NOT APPRECIATED.

Minister's Wife Had a Flower Hat and Put It in the Wrong Place.

A story is told by the Chicago Inter Ocean of a woman in that town, the wife of a young minister, who has always had a liking for hats of the flower-bed variety, although she condemned others for wasting money that should go to the heathen.

At present she owns a "dream" of a "sky piece," that is covered with violets. The young wife wore this hat to a funeral recently, at which her husband officiated. Going into the room which contained the coffin she removed the hat and placed it on a stand.

The sad-faced, sleek-haired undertaker came in a few minutes later to arrange the "floral tokens" on the coffin. After putting the bouquets, wreaths, pillows, broken wheels, anchors and the usual run of flowers in place, he picked up the violet-covered hat and tenderly placed it on top of all the rest.

Several of the "mourners" giggled, and the minister's wife wanted to grab her hat and run. She had to let it alone, however, until the close of the ceremony.

When she marched past the bier she lunged for the hat and successfully made her escape.

An Ohio Notary.

Salineville, O., May 23.—Mr. John W. Manning, Notary Public for Columbiana County and one of the most respected men of the state, has caused to be published the following letter:

"About one year ago, I was suffering terribly from Kidney Trouble. I saw an advertisement of a medicine called Dodd's Kidney Pills and sent for two boxes.

"In the meantime, I suffered awfully, and as soon as I got the Pills I began taking them according to directions and got almost immediate relief, and I have this further to say, that after using the two boxes, I have never been troubled with my Kidneys since.

"I have recommended Dodd's Kidney Pills to others, who have tried them, and everyone who used them has been cured. I think they are a great remedy and all that is claimed for them."

Mr. Manning's letter is a strong recommendation for Dodd's Kidney Pills and is worth the attention of all who suffer with Kidney troubles.

History's Hilarity.

Hiawatha and his prospective father-in-law were sitting before the latter's tepee.

"I was looking for flints for arrowheads over the ridge to-day," remarked the young brave, "and found several quartz."

"I must tell that to my daughter," the arrowmaker chuckled. "It will make Minnehaha."—Detroit News.

U. S. SENATOR FROM SOUTH CAROLINA

Recommends Pe-ru-na For Dyspepsia and Stomach Trouble.

Ex-Senator M. C. Butler.

Catarrh of the Stomach is often Called Dyspepsia—Something to Produce Artificial Digestion is Generally Taken. Hence, Pepsin, Pancreatin and a host of other Digestive Remedies Have Been Invented. These Remedies Do Not Reach the Seat of the Difficulty, Which is Really Catarrh.

EX. U. S. Senator M. C. Butler, from South Carolina, was Senator from that state for two terms. In a recent letter to The Peruna Medicine Co. from Washington, D. C., says:

"I can recommend Peruna for dyspepsia and stomach trouble. I have been using your medicine for a short period and I feel very much relieved. It is indeed a wonderful medicine besides a good tonic."—M. C. Butler.

The only rational way to cure dyspepsia is to remove the catarrh. Peruna cures catarrh. Peruna does not produce artificial digestion. It cures catarrh and leaves the stomach to perform digestion in a natural way. This is vastly better and safer than resorting to artificial methods or narcotics.

Peruna has cured more cases of dyspepsia than all other remedies combined, simply because it cures catarrh wherever located. If catarrh is located in the head, Peruna cures it. If catarrh has fastened itself in the throat or bronchial tubes, Peruna cures it. When catarrh becomes settled in the stomach, Peruna cures it, as well in this location as in any other.

Peruna is not simply a remedy for dyspepsia. Peruna is a catarrh remedy. Peruna cures dyspepsia because it is generally dependent upon catarrh.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

W. L. RIDDELL, - - Publisher.

NOTICE.—The Democrats of Boone county are called to meet in Mass Convention at the Court House in Burlington, Ky., Saturday, June 4th, 1904, at 2 p. m., for the purpose of selecting twelve delegates to attend the State Convention at Louisville, June 8th, 1904. A. B. ROUSE, Chm'n
Boone Co. Dem. Ex. Com.

THE Japs had considerable bad luck last week. They lost two battle ships and several men.

OF course the native Filipinos at the St. Louis exposition will be detained in quarters while the Liberty Bell is on exhibition there.—Commoner.

IF reports are true the Japs have been getting very much the worst of the fighting during the past week, having lost fifteen thousand men in an attack on Port Arthur.

THE Democrats have a fool way of fighting eachother so hard for the nominations for offices that many of those whose favorite is defeated, cannot pull themselves into line at the general election.

In North Middletown neighborhood, out of a flock of fifty-five sheep, dogs killed stx sheep and four lambs, crippled twenty-two sheep and fifteen lambs, making forty-seven killed and crippled.—Bracken Chronicle.

The biggest part of the money paid by the United States for the Panama canal will be loaned by France to Russia to continue the war against Japan. Of the $10,000,000 paid to the Republic of Panama, $6.000,000 of the money will be invested in United States securities.

AT the head of this column is the call of chairman Rouse for a county Democratic mass convention to select delegates to the State convention to be held in Louisville on June 8th. The State convention this year is one of great importance to the party, as it constructs the machinery for the next four years.

IT is true that Judge Parker, of New York, is saying nothing. He is not trying to dictate to the party what kind of a platform it must adopt at the St. Louis convention, and appears to recognize that the party is larger than any one man. If he should be nominated at St. Louis he will then have something to say.

IF none of the candidates nor any of their friends pulled off any trades before the second and last Congressional nomination was made by the Seventh District Congressional convention held at Lexington a few days since, a great many people were misinformed as to the nature of the side lines that were being worked during the progress of that convention.

The best informed men in the tobacco trade say that high prices will rule on all tobacco that can be grown this year. Even with a large crop and increased acreage the demand will more than equal the supply. The foreign trade is increasing at a rapid rate and every pound that can be raised is assured a ready market at a good price, says the Winchester Democrat.

THE Wisconsin Republican State convention held last week to nominate a candidate for Governor, split and two full State tickets are the result. Governor La Follette was a candidate for a third term, to which the two United States Senators are opposed and they lead the bolt. Wisconsin is one of the States in which the Republican machine has no regard for the will of the masses, and bolters desire to teach it a lesson at this time.

Congressman South Trimble denies all reports of deals in the Lexington convention by which his nomination was said to have been brought about. In his statement, Mr. Trimble says: "I made no sort of a deal regarding the Appellate Judge race in this county, or in any other county of the district. I made no promise to deliver this county or any other county or the organization at the State convention. I could not if I would. I am exceedingly thankful to the Democrats of Franklin, Owen and Henry counties for their loyal support, and feel more like doing what they want me to do than asking them to do more."

Gold, gold and an abundance of it is what Wm. Bondurant, Edgar Hensley, Milton Portword, John Rowland and others are of the opinion they have discovered in a deep gulch on a branch that empties into Gunpowder creek where Joseph Riddell use to live. The heavy rains, a few weeks ago, tore out of a hill side the rocks that contain the suspicious substance, which, to the inexperienced eye, is said to look like gold. There has been considerable excitement among the people in the neighborhood of the find for the last ten days, and it will not subside until an assayist passes upon the substance. Our informant, Assessor Watts, who saw some of the rocks containing samples of the supposed gold, says that he was told by people in the neighborhood of the gold field, that there are evidences, in that same locality, of the presence of both oil and coal. Where the supposed gold is found is one of the most picturesque spots in the county, and the towering Gunpowder hills that loom up in every direction, would make a typical mining district. It is hoped that those who have been interesting themselves in the matter will ultimately find that they have a second Klondyke.

Dragging Pains

2825 Keeley St.,
CHICAGO, ILL., Oct., 2, 1902.

I suffered with falling and congestion of the womb, with severe pains through the groins. I suffered terribly at the time of menstruation, had blinding headaches and rushing of blood to the brain. What to try I knew not, for it seemed that I had tried all and failed, but I had never tried Wine of Cardui, that blessed remedy for sick women, so I found it pleasant to take and soon knew that I had the right medicine. New blood seemed to course through my veins and after using eleven bottles I was a well woman.

Mrs. Bush

Mrs. Bush is now in perfect health because she took Wine of Cardui for menstrual disorders, bearing down pains and blinding headaches when all other remedies failed to bring her relief. Any sufferer may secure health by taking Wine of Cardui in her home. The first bottle convinces the patient she is on the road to health.

For advice in cases requiring special directions, address, giving symptoms, "The Ladies' Advisory Department," The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

WINE of CARDUI

The forty days cold period had a considerable margin.

Elder John D. Scott will preach at Mt. Pleasant church next Sunday.

Everybody is coming out next Saturday afternoon to witness the Boones and Home City hook up.

Mrs. John W. Gaines moved to Verona, last Friday, where she and her mother will keep house together.

Geo. Blyth and Bert Sullivan hauled wheat to the city market last week, and received $1 06 per bushel for it.

No cutworms to amount to anything this spring, although the weather has been very favorable for their business.

Good, old summer time made its bow to this part of the world last Saturday, to the delight of the farmers and the people in general.

If you want to invest in life insurance, see R. W. Clark, agent for the Mutual Life Insurance Co. of New York, the best in the land.

Quick called to his assistance, last week, Batterson, sr., and Batterson, jr., as bank wreckers, after which the work progressed rapidly.

Sick headache results from a disordered stomach and is quickly cured by Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. For sale by all Druggists.

The sale of the personal effects of John W. Gaines, deceased, last Thursday afternoon, was well attended and very satisfactory prices prevailed.

The clerical work of the bank is being done at the sheriff's office while the bank building is being remodeled, the work of which will be done in a few days.

The young people in a very large scope of country aroundabout enjoyed themselves at a big dance given by Mr. and Mrs. John Summers, last Friday night.

In the notice of Mrs. Lucinda Clore's death last week it was said she had two sons, when the fact is she had three, the name of Fletcher, who is the oldest, was omitted from the list.

The Bullittsville and Francesville communications were received at this office at 6 p. m., on Tuesday evening of last week, which made them too late to be handled for last week's issue.

Boone County Pomona Grange will meet with Greenwood grange at Hebron next Saturday. All the members will please be in attendance. The fifth degree will be given in full form.

Owen Watts, of Bullittsville, was here last Thursday morning receiving hogs which he had bought to slop in Lawrenceburg. He received a small lot from Noah Clore and Bert Sullivan, each, for which he paid 4½ cents per pound.

Made Young Again.

"One of Dr. King's New Life Pills each night for two weeks has put me in my 'teens' again" writes D. H. Turner of Dempseytown, Pa. They're the best in the world for Liver, Stomach and Bowels. Purely vegetable. Never gripe. Only 25c at all Druggists.

The bricks taken out of the walls in repairing the bank, were made back in the forties or early fifties, and are smaller by half an inch every way than bricks are now made, which gives the brick-layer of the present time considerable advantage, in the matter of speed, over his predecessors of half a century ago.

Mr. A. C. Passons, of Flickertown, furnishes the RECORDER with the tab he kept on the weather, last winter, and it shows that the first snow fell November 28. It snowed twice in November, eight times in December, nine times in January, five times in February and three times in March, making 26 snows in all.

20th with a lot of nice black berries was slightly premature, as he will not be here before the 26th.

The finishing touches were put on the pavilion at the base ball park, last week, and the season was opened last Saturday afternoon. Having gone to considerable expense to prepare the grounds, it stands the managers of the local team in hand to have as many games as possible on the home grounds this season.

Rheumatic Pains Relieved.

The prompt relief from the severe pains of sciatica and rheumatism which is afforded by Chamberlain's Pain Balm, is alone worth many times its cost. Mr. Willard C. Vail, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., writes: "I am troubled with rheumatism and neuralgia of the nerves and Chamberlain's Pain Balm gives relief quicker than any liniment I have ever used." For sale by all Druggist.

By order of Judge Lassing there will be no grand jury at the May term of court, as it is evident that the business in Carroll county does not justify the sitting of the grand jury more than twice a year, which will be in January and September. —Carrollton Democrat.

Judge Lassing says he intends to make the same order in Boone and Gallatin counties, as two grand juries a year are enough in each of these counties. Should a grand jury be needed he can call a special jury at any time.

One night last week Omer Porter, aged 12 years, who lives with his grandfather, O. T. Porter, out on the Woolper hills, heard a noise at the hen house as he was preparing to retire about 9 o'clock. He went out in his sock feet, when he discovered a man trying to get into the hen house, the door to which was locked. Young Porter said to the would-be thief, "get away from here," when the answer came, "I don't have to." "I will show you," said the boy, and picking up an axe started for the thief, who took to his heels and was chased a considerable distance from the house. Mrs. Pace, who is with her grandson and his grandfather, followed Omer and heard the conversation above referred to. It was so dark that the thief was not recognized.

Base Ball.

The grand stand at the ball park was dedicated, last Saturday afternoon, by a game between the Boone's and a Belleview team. A small crowd was present, the turnstile showing only 65 admissions. Brady did the twirling for the Boones, and showed up in his old time form, while Hogan received his work in a most satisfactory manner. Hughes' work at short was faultless and he made several handsome pick-ups. Slayback at first, Souther at Second and Clutterbuck at third, played their positions well but not perfectly. J. Kirk in right, Luck in center and H. Kirk in left had but little to do, but J. Kirk and Luck each made a nice running catch. Although Conner made several "chop" they did good batting. Ray Conner and A. Cook made the visitors a good battery but Conner's support was not what his work entitled him to. He was game until the last man was out. Luck was against the visitors who did not put up the game of which they are capable. Below is the score:

Boones	0	0	5	2	1	0	0	3	*	—11
Bellevue	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	—0

Struck out—Brady, 8, Conner, 6. Two base hits—Clutterbuck, 2, Hughes.

NOTES.

Dr. Crisler "chalked-up."

Wood Maxwell was the coin receiver.

Everybody was delighted with the grand stand.

Uncle Ed Gaines, of Woolper Heights, was on hand to see the grand stand dedicated.

Home City will send her strong team over next Saturday afternoon to do battle with the Boones.

Monday, May 30th, (Decoration Day) the Boones will play the Y. M. C. A., team, of Covington, two games—morning and afternoon.

Captain Jackson, of the Burlington Grays, took his team to Belleview, last Saturday afternoon, where he defeated a strong nine 13 to 4. McKim and Hensley were the battery for the Grays and did excellent work, and were backed by good support in the field. Dailey, of Rising Sun, and McCarty, were the home teams battery, and did nice work. It was a nice game throughout, and was witnessed by a large crowd. Following is the score:

Belleview	1	0	0	1	0	0	2	0	0	—4
Grays	1	2	1	1	0	4	0	0	4	—13

Three base hit—Hensley.

F. A. Utz and E. O. Rouse will receive wool at Limaburg on the afternoon of May 31, and at F. A. Utz's barn June 1.

Clore are carrying on things very much in some neighborhoods by pulling up the young corn, while they keep the housewives in a state of ferment by catching and carrying off their young chickens.

Geo. H. Walton, brother of Hon. N. S. Walton, died at his home in Petersburg precinct last Friday evening. He had been in bad health for some time. He leaves a widow and two grown sons, the sons being by his first marriage.

Mr. Hallianan, who represents the Continental Tobacco company, is keeping in touch with the work of prizing the company's tobacco in this part of the county. He makes frequent visits to the barns where the work is under way, to see that it is being put in the hogshead in proper condition.

Quick Arrest.

J. A. Gulledge of Verbena, Ala., was twice in the hospital from a severe case of piles causing 24 tumors. After doctors and all remedies failed, Bucklen's Arnica Salve quickly arrested further inflammation and cured him. It conquers aches and kills pain. 25c at all Druggist.

Whooping Cough.

"In the spring of 1901 my children had whooping cough," says Mrs. D. W. Capps, of Capps, Ala. "I used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy with the most satisfactory results. I think this is the best remedy I have ever seen for whooping cough." This remedy keeps the cough loose, lessens the severity and frequency of the whooping spells and counteracts any tendency toward pneumonia. For sale by all Druggists.

Tony Bentler's old white mule was sick—very sick last week, and Dr. Crisler was called. The doctor gave his patient a "thorough examination," but could not determine what ailed the animal, which continued to grow worse. Finally it rolled up its eyes, threw its head back and extended its limbs, when the doctor remarked, "Tony, he is done for—I want to open him to see what the trouble was." The mule realized the danger of a dissecting knife, when he gave one flounce and regained his feet, giving the doctor a look as much as to say, "no you don't." The mule is now taking his food in the usual quantity and with great regularity.

Erastus Stephens, of Buffalo, was in town a few days since. He has a record as the greatest horse-trader this county ever produced, having become a professional long before he passed out of his "teens." Of course his long experience in the business being known, something was said on the subject, and Mr. Stephens remarked, "I use to go out among the boys hunting for trades, but I have got too old for that and stay at home, knowing that those who want to tackle me for a trade will find me ready to accommodate them as I always have trading stock in the stable." Being asked if he had any idea how many horse trades he has made, he answered, "not the slightest. The first year that I was married my wife began keeping a tab, and several months before the year ended she had booked over 300, when she threw up the job."

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and, therefore, requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address,

It is proposed at the World's fain to have a thorough test of coals and lignites of the United States to determine their full value and the most economic method of their utilization.

In the nine months ended March 31, 1904, there were exported from the United States 410,816 head of cattle as compared with 249,493 head during the same period in 1902-'03.

Exports of corn from the United States during the first nine months of the present fiscal year were 49,533,599 bushels, against $3,656,018 bushels for the same period a year ago.

The cost of maintaining the English navy now amounts to $22 a year for every family in Great Britain, or more than two weeks' wages for the great body of the working people.

The quantity of flaxseed shipped from Argentina from January 1 to May 6, 1903, amounted to 24,596,000 bushels, compared with 15,413,000 bushels for the same time in 1902.

A syndicate with a capital of 500,000 lire ($96,500) has just been formed at Milan, Italy, by some of the most important cotton brokers, in order to foster the growing of cotton in East Africa.

Much bitterness has been caused in England by the fact that Rev. Reginald Campbell, the celebrated nonconformist who succeeded Dr. Parker, was recently presented at court by the bishop of London.

A recent United States Labor Bureau bulletin states that trade unionism in England is 25 years in advance of that in this country in its methods, and that sympathetic strikes are becoming unknown in England.

The longest fence in the world is probably that which has been erected by the Erie Cattle Co. along the Mexican border. It is 75 miles in length, and separates exactly for its entire distance the two republics of North America.

The cheapest refuse from bituminous coal is being utilized in England for the production of gas for power and heating purposes. The gas is not an illuminant, and its cost is only from one-seventh to one-fifteenth as much as that of ordinary illuminating gas.

A noteworthy feature of the applications this year to the bureau of self-help for graduate service is the demand from corporations for Yale men to take permanent positions, many of them well paid. Several of the calls for teachers are for positions paying $2,500 a year or more.

THE DEFENSE BEGINS.

Gillespie Murder Trial at Rising Sun, Ind., Nearing the End.

Jim Gillespie Has But the Period of Five Minutes to Account For to the Jury on the Night of the Assassination.

Rising Sun, Ind., May 19.—Detective Franklin left town Wednesday hurriedly, and it is rumored he is out seeking an important witness, to be used in rebuttal.

The first witness introduced Wednesday morning was Charles Gibson, who has been a clerk in Gibson's hardware store for 30 years. He identified the shell given the grand jury by Barbour as one of W. R. A. make.

James Fisher, a stable boy, then took the stand. He said he was nearly a square from the Gillespie house and was at the lower end of that square when the shot was fired. So much shooting had been done in the neighborhood of late he paid no attention to this shot at first. He saw no one run by him. The street lamp was bright at the corner and he could have seen any one run by.

Rising Sun, Ind., May 20.—Contrary to rumor, the defense in the Gillespie case did not Thursday morning move for the dismissal of the accused before offering any testimony.

Jim Gillespie has but the brief period of five minutes on the night of December 8 to account for to the satisfaction of the jury and he will go acquitted. The testimony of the state has so traced him that only these few minutes remain to stand against him. It must, in the natural course of proceedings, be shown in the alibi to be presented in his behalf, where he was from the time that he left the kitchen of the Seward home until he was seen at the lattice gate between the Seward and Boyle houses. The testimony of Mrs. Jane Boyle fixes from the state's side this time period. In her testimony she declared that five minutes elapsed from the firing of the shot until she saw Jim with his sister, Mrs. Seward, in conversation at the gate.

It is the general belief, by the line of cross-examination pursued by the defense, that it will be sought to prove that James Gillespie went from the Seward home to an outhouse and remained there until after his sister Elizabeth was shot, then started along the walk between the two houses, going toward the front yard of his home, when he encountered at the lattice gate his other sister, Mrs. Seward, who, a moment before had cried out, "Where is Jim?" and had then said, "He went to the outhouse."

Rising Sun, Ind., May 21.—One of the fights the defense will make in the Gillespie case concerns the matter of the scattering of the shot in the room where Elizabeth Gillespie was killed. Testimony has been given to show Jim Gillespie's gun, offered in evidence, is choke-bore in both barrels, and that therefore there is a check on a tendency of a load to spread.

Clyde Peaslee, the city lamp tender, was the first witness Friday morning. He testified that the second day after the shooting he was in the alley in the rear of the Gillespie home. A boy gave him an empty shell, which the lad claimed he had found in the alley. The shell was a 16-gage.

Peaslee says he turned the shell the boy gave him over to Marshal Overly. Russell Gibbs was the name of the boy who gave him the shell. The shell was shown the witness in court. He said it looked like the one given him, but he could not positively identify it. Marshal Thomas Overly testified he received a shell from Peaslee the second day after the shooting. He testified the shell shown him looked like the one given him. The state admitted the shell presented as the one turned over to Dr. L. C. Cowen by Overly. The purpose of the defense is to show by the empty shell found in the alley that the man heard hurrying through the alley after the shot was the assassin and dropped the shell where it was found. The shell said to have been found there is yellow, while the shell turned over to the grand jury by Barbour was green, though both shells are 16-gage.

Bloody Clothing of Murdered Girl Put in Evidence.

Bedford, Ind., May 19.—In the trial of James McDonald, accused of the murder of Sarah Schafer here, Capt. J. W. Cook, in whose cab shed the dead body of Miss Schafer was found, and who was the first to discover it, testified Wednesday morning as to the condition in which the shed was left, and his discovery of the body the next morning when he went to look after his cab preparatory to its use.

John C. Schafer and G. M. Schafer, of Elkhart, father and brother of the murdered girl, and Jacob Schafer, an uncle, of Decatur, were in the court room Wednesday. The father was called to the stand. His testimony covered the last visit of his daughter to their home in Elkhart, during the holidays. When asked by Attorney Lowe if she was of a happy disposition he replied: "Indeed she was."

He said the family had no opinion as to McDonald's guilt or innocence. G. M. Schafer testified that his sister had never shown evidence of sorrow or trouble of any kind.

Bedford, Ind., May 20.—The bloody and mud-soaked clothing of the murdered girl was introduced in evidence while Sheriff Smith was on the stand. While it was in evidence the father and brother of Miss Schafer left the court room. The onter garments were matted with cinders and blood, the underwear torn and the stockings caked with mud along the front from the shoes to the knees, showing she had been on her knees and had been dragged during the struggle.

Drs. Freeland, Short and Ferry, who performed the autopsy, stated positively that there were no marks on the body to indicate an attempt to commit assault.

George Ikerd told of walking on the street with McDonald after the murder and relating the circumstances of the murder. Ikerd testified that when he said that he believed the murderer was a Bedford man and if caught he would like to help hang him, McDonald seemed confused.

Mayor Smith was recalled and told of visiting the cab shed after the murder and of being present when McDonald was arrested and when the plaster cast of the foot print in the alley was made. He also told of accompany Detective Reed and McDonald to the alley when the latter was asked to place his foot in the footprint. McDonald's shoe and the plaster cast were introduced as evidence.

Bedford, Ind., May 21.—John Stout, a plumber, at one time McDonald's employer, said the latter had often had opportunities of seeing Miss Schafer. Deputy Sheriff Thrasher, of Monroe county, testified that McDonald, while in jail at Bloomington, had told him that he knew who killed Miss Schafer, and that he believed it was Lawrence Cosner. Peter Thrasher, sheriff of Monroe county, testified that McDonald had told him he believed Lawrence Cosner killed Miss Schafer.

Detective Smith, of Chicago, who assisted Detective Reed in the early investigation of the mystery, was called to the stand and testified concerning the arrest of McDonald and the comparison of McDonald's shoes with the footprint in the alley.

Sheriff Smith related the incidents following the discovery of the murder, of McDonald's arrest, and of taking the prisoner to the Jeffersonville jail, but said he could remember little of his conversation with McDonald. At this point he was asked concerning a statement made by McDonald and recorded by Detective Reed. The defense entered an objection, which was sustained.

It was rumored in the court-room that this statement, which had been in Sheriff Smith's custody, had disappeared from his desk and could not be found.

Detective Reed's testimony up to the time of adjournment covered merely the incidents following the finding of the body and the deliberations of the board of inquiry.

A FATAL EXPLOSION.

A Railway Torpedo Factory at Findlay, O., Blown Up.

Seven Persons Killed, Five More May Not Recover and Ten or Twelve Badly Injured—Concussion Felt For Miles Around.

Findlay, O., May 23.—As a result of an explosion in the two drying rooms of the Lake Shore Novelty Co.'s plant here Sunday, seven persons are known to be dead; five are so seriously hurt that recovery is believed to be impossible, and 12 or 15 are injured badly. From reports of the physicians ten of the less seriously injured may die as a result of blood poisoning from the potash that was driven into their bodies.

The dead: Joe Sherwood, aged 21; Jay Sherwood, 24; Edith Dilion, 17; Dean Shaw, 18; Mary Snider, 22; Estella Decker, 15; Frank Grant, 21. All of the above, with the exception of Estella Decker and Frank Grant, were killed instantly. The latter two died after being removed to their homes.

The injured whom it is believed can not recover are: Maggie Logan, 19, injured by flying debris; Thomas Bock, struck in the back by flying barrel, arms and legs broken, internally injured; Claude Shaw, twin brother of Dean, back severely injured and ankle broken; Effie Peterman, caught in falling debris and internally injured; Roy Peterman, badly injured by falling debris.

Two employes are missing and are supposed to have been blown to atoms.

The Lake Shore novelty works plant covered nearly ten acres of ground in the southwest part of the city and employed nearly 200 men, women and children. Railroad torpedoes and Fourth of July explosives were manufactured. Owing to the large rush of orders the officials of the plant requested the employes to report for duty Sunday. About 30 complied with the request.

Sunday morning the residents of Findlay were startled by two explosions which shattered windows throughout the city. The concussion was felt for miles around. Two magazines in separate rooms at the novelty works exploded simultaneously with terrible reports. The exact cause of the explosion is not definitely known. It is surmised that one of the Sherwood brothers, who were the only persons in the drying rooms, dropped a large box of torpedoes, but this theory can not be confirmed. The explosion occurred shortly before the employes assembled for duty. At least 20 persons were on their way to the factory when the explosion occurred.

Human forms were strewn considerable distance apart on the factory site. The remains of the Sherwood brothers were found in drying room No. 1, mangled and almost unrecognizable. Their clothing was blown from their bodies save a stocking on the right foot of Jay Sherwood. The body of Edith Dilion was picked up 200 yards from where the explosion occurred.

The news of the catastrophe spread like wildfire throughout the country. Every train and interurban car that has arrived in the city was crowded. The large plant is shattered into fragments, not a single wall remaining. Bricks and timber can be found for half a mile around.

AFTER THE POOLROOMS.

Simultaneous Raids Were Made by the New York Police.

New York, May 21.—Simultaneous raids on 22 alleged poolrooms and poolroom exchanges were made here Friday by the police, acting under orders from Police Commissioner McAdoo.

Axes, hammers and crowbars were used at many of the places to batter down specially constructed iron and steel doors and to gain entrance through barred windows. Less than an hour was spent at the work and police officials are highly pleased with the results, 70 prisoners were taken and many telephones and telegraph instruments were confiscated, besides a number of books and racing charts that were found in the rooms.

One of the places raided was in the Edison building in Broad street, in a small vine-covered house, on the roof of which 34 telephones and 13 men were found. The police assert that this is the chief headquarters of the poolroom syndicate in the distribution of each day's racing information, and the raid was regarded as the most important of the day, as the entire Wall street poolroom business will be seriously affected, if not ruined, by it.

The Syndicate building in Park row was also raided, 20 prisoners, 33 telephones and three telegraph instruments being taken.

"The" Allen's place, in Sixth avenue, where 81 previous raids have been made, was also visited by the police, as was "Honest" John Kelly's house in 41st street.

Kelly, who was arrested, described himself as a mechanic and said there had been no gambling at his place for some time. He was soon released, his bond being fixed at $7,000.

Police Commissioner McAdee said after the raids:

"I will not discuss or divulge the details of my operations or my intentions in the future against the poolrooms, except to say that I am doing everything in my power to break up the system in New York. No matter what the poolroom men may say, the public can rest assured that the blow delivered at the system to-day is a very serious one."

ELECTING BISHOPS.

Seven Out of the Eight Needed Selected By the Methodists.

Los Angeles, Cal., May 21.—When the general Methodist conference adjourned at 6 o'clock Friday evening seven of the eight bishops to be elected had been chosen and the 11th ballot taken just before adjournment probably has resulted in the election of the eighth. The list of bishops thus far chosen follow:

Joseph F. Berry, of Chicago; Henry F. Spellmeyer, of Newark, N. J.; William F. MacDowell, of New York; James W. Bashford, of Delaware, O.; William Burt, of Rome, Italy; Luther B. Wilson, of Baltimore, and Thomas B. Neely, of Philadelphia.

William Burt was elected on the fifth, ballot taken Thursday night, the result of which was announced Friday morning. Dr. Wilson was chosen on the sixth ballot, which was announced before recess Friday. The seventh and eighth ballots resulted in no election, but on the ninth, Dr. Neely was elected by 486 votes out of the 700 cast, 467 being necessary to a choice.

The tenth ballot was taken just before adjournment Friday evening and resulted in no election. Dr. J. R. Day received the highest number of ballots—311 out of a total of 706 cast, 471 being necessary to a choice. This showed Day a loss of 39 votes, having polled 350 in the ninth ballot. Election of the eighth bishop is now thought to lie between Dr. Day and Dr. R. J. Cooke, of Chattanooga, with the chances favoring the latter.
